Two Mobile, Ala., florists, Messrs. H. P. Loding and Louis Ravier, take exception to the paper by Col. F. P. Davis that was presented at the Chicago convention of the Chrysanthemum Society. They say:

"All hail to Col. Davis as a grower of mums for pleasure, and giving the king his dues, he has in his position as a gentleman of society done a great deal towards awakening an interest in Queen Mum, but whether he, with his six or seven years of amateur practice with mums, is justified in judging the floriculture of a whole city containing such men as Mr. C. Ravier, who for forty years or more was successfully engaged in the florist business, is another question.

"Col. Davis is looking at one side of the matter, and the florist, who has to make his living, has got to look at another, the paying side. When Mr. Davis says that the modern chrysanthemum is a novelty in the south and means the modern exhibition chrysanthemum, he may, as far as the public is concerned, be right, but when commercial mums are put on the scale we venture to say that they are, on the whole, grown in the south as fine as in most parts of the north and west, and very nearly in sufficient quantity to supply any ordinary demand. We have seen some very fine mums grown by Messrs. Owen, Columbus, Miss., and Patterson, Montgomery, Ala., and some New Orleans growers are not behind, and so has this city produced some very creditable stuff, far ahead of the price, $1.50 per doz., the same being equally as good as any the colonel has ever raised. So if Colonel Davis can blush, as he says he can, he had better use his blushes where they are needed.

"Mobile florists are fully able to take care of their part of the business, the raising for their particular trade, and will come pretty near telling their stock mums by the growth even if the labels get lost. In the future there is every reason to hope that Col. F. P. Davis will use his valuable efforts in getting the buyer to understand that a first-class mum cannot be raised at the same price as inferior stuff. As to his cultural directions, we have very little to say. His advice to growers to shun all commercial fertilizers we do not quite agree in, as we have used both nitrate of soda and sulphate of potash to great advantage in proper season and quantity. Of his three big bugbears—the mealy bug, the wood louse, or termitina, and the corythuca (which last we have as yet classified as aleyrodes, but he may be better informed as to the name)—the first one every florist knows so well and would laugh if anyone told him it was so terrible a pest to get rid of, and how he gets rid of them by keeping the plants on the dry side is a conundrum to us.

"Having for years grown chrysanthemums, roses and other stuff in wooden benches we yet fail to see where the termitina has done any damage, outside the boards they are in. The corythuca, however, is a very serious pest, not inside, where by fumigation you can easily get rid of them, but on outside stuff, such as asters, pompon mums and rudbeckia, they are devastating. Kerosene emulsion we find entirely ineffective, unless applied to such an extent as to destroy the plants. The only remedy we know of is a very hard application of the hose whenever possible, and we would ask any florist who knows a better to kindly let us know through your columns.

"On the whole Colonel Davis' paper is a very fine example of southern eloquence, but very little more. We should be glad to have the colonel join the ranks of professional growers and would welcome him in our humble way. We are sure his name alone would give lustre to the trade, and none of us are yet too old to learn."

THE WHITE FLY.

Plant House Aleyrode.

In a recent issue of the Review appeared an inquiry regarding a small white fly, and from the description I judge it to be the Plant House Aleyrode or White Fly, which is the subject of Bulletin No. 140, issued by the Connecticut Experimental Station, New Haven, Conn., during September, 1902.

As stated in the bulletin it has been very troublesome to tomatoes under glass. It has attacked asters and chrysanthemums, and would without doubt take kindly to pelargoniums. Its eggs are laid on the leaves when the plant is small. The insects fly at maturity, which is reached in four or five weeks after the eggs are laid. They suck the sap, which causes the foliage to shrivel and drop. It is reported to have been found on fifty-eight different kinds of plants in this state alone.

It is closely related to the scale insects and resembles them in its immature stages, but differs in that both sexes are winged when the adult stage is reached.

The remedies recommended in the bulletin are tobacco smoke, hydrocyanic acid gas, and spraying with soap solutions. The tobacco smoke will not kill all but a drenching of water will destroy those that have fallen to the ground. It is not considered effective, however, and hydrocyanic acid gas is dangerous for general use. The soap is considered best, using one pound to eight gallons of water, but where soap is used it is necessary to wash off the foliage occasionally, and I would advise experiments on a small scale before spraying a large batch.

Edgar Sanders.

The bulletin mentioned can be had by addressing the station.

EDGAR SANDERS.

We present herewith an excellent portrait of Mr. Edgar Sanders, the veteran Chicago florist, who is now 75 years of age and who is still one of the youngest in spirit. Though now confined to his home by illness there is strong hope that his familiar figure will soon again be seen among us.

Mr. Sanders was born in Sussex County, England, Oct. 10, 1827. His father was gardener on the Crawley estate in that country, a position which he held for upwards of fifty years. Edgar was the eldest of fourteen children, and after receiving his education went to work at the age of thirteen years, first in a nursery, then as gardener on a private estate, forging his way up from a boy to foreman of the establishment. Subsequently he held the position of head gardener in two private places near Egham, Surrey. In 1853 Mr. Sanders decided to come to America, landing in New York in April of that year. He immediately proceeded to Albany, where his first labor was performed in James Wilson's nursery; subsequently he obtained a month's work laying out the grounds of Luther Tucker, who was the original publisher of Downing's Horticulturist, but at the time mentioned had started The Country Gentleman, for which paper Mr. Sanders began to write at once, and was on its staff for a period of six years. After completing the work for Mr. Tucker, Mr. Sanders became gardener for General John F. Rathbone, of Albany, a gentleman who afterwards became famous for his collection of orchids. A few years after Mr. Sanders left, the late William Gray, of Albany, filled this position at Rathbone's.

Here the subject of our sketch remained until the Spring of 1857, when he decided to try his fortune in the west, leaving then for Chicago, where he purchased land and built the first fifty-five foot greenhouse in the spring of 1857. He raised a general stock of plants, and was noted as a shipper of same all over the country. He opened his first flower store permanently in Chicago about 1864. The fire of 1871 checked his career for some time, although he was fortunate in only having the store burned out. He remained away from the retail trade for three years, when he entered this branch again, and continued in it until about 1882, when he practically retired from the direct work of florist.

When Mr. Sanders came to Chicago, the section in which he began business was known as Lake View. It was then but a small town with a few hundred inhabitants and Chicago's population was less than 100,000. There were no sidewalks north of North Ave., and the old plank road, now Evanston Ave., was the fashionable drive leading out to the equally fashionable Lake View House on the lake shore. It was on this plank road that Mr. Sanders' greenhouses were located. At this time Chicago's northern boundary line had been moved from North Ave. to Fullerton Ave.

Mr. Sanders has been for many years a contributor to the horticultural papers. On arriving in Chicago he became attached to the staff of the Prairie Farmer, published in that city, and continued in that position until a few years ago. He also conducted a horticultural department of a daily in Chicago, and wrote for the Orange Judd Farmer, all at the same time. His first venture at writing for the class papers was commenced at the age of nineteen, when he began to contribute to the London Gardeners' Chronicle. He also was a correspondent, from England, to the American Gardeners' Chronicle, then published in New York. For about ten years past Mr. Sanders has been the Chicago correspondent of the Florists' Exchange.

Mr. Sanders has also during his busy life, taken an active part in public work. In the 70's he was for three and a half years a commissioner of highways of the town of Lakeview, Chicago; was supervisor and treasurer of the same town from 1879 to 1883, when it became part of the city of Chicago. He was also first commissioner of public works.

Mr. Sanders was married before leaving England. His wife died in 1874. He has five daughters, all of whom are married, and quite a number of grandchildren.

Mr. Sanders has always taken an active interest in all matters horticultural, and was elected the first temporary president of the American Association of Nurserymen in 1876, and again president in 1884. He has been president of the Chicago Florists' Club, in which he was a busy worker, and is still treasurer. He is also a member of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and has taken a deep interest in the success of the annual exhibitions.

His illness has been deeply regretted by his host of friends in the trade and all hope most earnestly for his speedy and complete recovery.

EXHAUST STEAM.

I am adjacent to an electric power plant that burns 30 tons of soft coal per day, the plant being run on the most economic plan possible. What per cent of heat would be lost and how much would be available in the exhaust for greenhouse heating? How many square feet of glass would it heat to a temperature sufficient for lettuce growing? What is the best method of using the exhaust?

C. S.

The inquiry of C. S. is not answerable in its present form, so much depending upon conditions not stated. In the first place, we should know the amount of water consumed by the plant in question, the pressure of the steam used, whether it is used in a single or double expansion engine or otherwise, in fact, it would only be possible to give a bare approximate reply without personal inspection of the plant in question. Two methods of utilizing the exhaust steam are practicable, one in which the steam circulates direct through the heating coils within the houses and the other where the steam circulates through coils in a closed tank, thus heating water and thus permitting of a hot water circulation within the houses. We believe the latter would be the most desirable for the lettuce houses of your correspondent, but much depends upon the distance of these houses from the steam plant.

Henry W. Gibbons.

New York.

A PEORIA ESTABLISHMENT.

We present herewith exterior and interior views of the new greenhouses of Mr. Henry Baer, Peoria, Ill. The houses are of the short roof construction and are 200 feet long, running east and west. Each section has two benches and two walks. Along the north side of the range is a lean-to that proves an excellent place for propagating and for young stock. The gutters are 7 feet above the ground and there are no partition walls, so it is really one large house. A neat work room, with boiler in cellar, is centrally located on the north side, away from the greenhouses, which is quite an advantage, as it casts no shade on the glass. This building is connected with the greenhouses by a glass passageway.

The houses are heated by hot water under pressure with excellent results. Two 4-inch mains run across the center to supply the 3-inch flow under each gutter. The returns, two 1½-inch pipes, are brought back to the center where they enter the main returns. Wrought iron pipes are used throughout. A gasoline engine pumps water from a deep well into a tank 20 feet above ground. The engine is also used for pumping liquid manure into a separate pipe system.

The plants were not housed until October 1, but are doing very well considering the heavy hail last August, which damaged them greatly. The cut flowers grown here are consigned to C. A. Kuehn, of St. Louis.

Mr. Baer says he is very well pleased with this style of building and considers it most satisfactory in every way.

Greenhouses of Henry Baer, Peoria, Ill.

The leading article in Floral Life for February is entitled "Fashions and Fancies in Table Decorations," and is written by Robert Kift. It is illustrated by two fine pictures of table decorations. Floral Life is a very handsomely printed monthly, "Devoted to Native and Ornamental Gardening," and is published by Floral Life Publishing Co., Philadelphia. It is edited by S. Mendelson Meehan.

Troy, N. Y.—John H. Duke, recently made a fine display of carnations in a downtown show window that was warmly praised by the local press.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

It was carnation night at the club Monday evening and thirty-five members and visitors convened at what was to be the last meeting in the temporary quarters on Twenty-eighth street. Hereafter the club will meet in its elegant rooms at the Grand Opera House, corner Twenty-third and Eighth avenue, where permanent accommodations have been secured. The executive committee met before the regular meeting and completed the above arrangements, much to the satisfaction of the members.

Mr. Traendly, of the outing committee, reported the signed contracts for the boat and Wetzel's Grove at College Point, and the date July 1 for the annual festivity.

The secretary read the resolutions on the death of the mother of Mr. L. C. Hafner, which were approved.

Mr. Sheridan, chairman of the committee on "increased express charges," announced the restoration of the old rates and cited the various influences that had been employed towards the achievement of this gratifying victory.

Letters from Mr. John N. May and Mr. Duckham were read announcing delay in the meeting of the chrysanthemum committee on account of illness, and promising a report at the April meeting of the club.

A letter from David Clarke's Sons was read donating the premiums won at the Madison Square Garden flower show to the club's treasury, and the thanks of the members were given this firm for their generosity.

Mr. Weathered announced the additional payments since the last meeting to the guarantee fund, and on motion of Mr. Sheridan, seconded and supported by Messrs. Weathered and Wallace, it was decided that the balance of prizes and obligations be paid out of the club's treasury, pending the collection of the balance of the subscriptions.

Messrs. Sheridan and Traendly were authorized to sign a yearly contract for the new club rooms, which they characterized as "the best the club had ever secured." The club unanimously indorsed the action of the board of trustees.

John Marshall, of Irvington, was elected to membership.

A letter was read from Mr. W. Wells, of England, acknowledging the receipt of his medal, granted for his fine exhibit of chrysanthemum blooms at the Madison Square flower show.

The exhibit of carnations by Mr. C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, consisted of two grand vases of Mrs. Theo. Roosevelt, a brilliant crimson in color, with blooms three to three and one-half inches in diameter, and Alpine Glow, a splendid flower of Daybreak color, with blooms two and one-half to three inches, strong stem and delightful perfume. Certificates of merit were granted the exhibit, and the thanks of the club were tendered Mr. Ward.

Mr. Elliott of the outing committee here made an eloquent argument in behalf of practical support from the business firms of the club, and in response to his convincing oratory a large amount of space was taken in the programme and several fine prizes were promised, one of $25 by President Troy, who with his usual courtesy turned over the whole amount to be competed for by the lady bowlers. Mr. Elliott announced the various prize competitions, which include about everything in athletics, and the success of the outing is already assured.

The final discussion of the evening was on the "canteen" question, which had been postponed from month to month awaiting the return of Mr. O'Mara, whose absence was still unavoidable. A very interesting and amusing half-hour was devoted to the various sides of the subject, and at its close the entertainment committee was advised to "continue its operations on existing lines," which insures the usual refreshments regularly, as of yore.

Mr. Weathered announced the death of Jos. Donohue, son of Fred. Donohue, one of the club members, and a committee was appointed to draw up suitable resolutions.

Mr. Hallock of Queens, Mr. Leonard Vaughan of Cornell and Mr. Proctor of Lenox, the club's guests, addressed the club.

The Market.

The weather during the last week has been as delightful as any Easter enthusiast could have desired. Not a particle of frost, abundant sunshine and just the temperature that would have made the delivering of blooming stock profitable and pleasurable.

But in the wholesale cut flower section of the business it was anything but an Easter condition. Ice boxes were crowded to the doors with the finest of bloom. Everything was more than abundant, and violets were absolutely a burden, many of the large dealers having insufficient room for the enormous shipments. The very finest stock could be had in large quantities as low as $3 a thousand.

Bulbous flowers are now sent to the market in enormous quantities, and carnations, too, have shared in the general sacrifice, even fine, respectable-looking stock being disposed of at as low as a dollar a hundred. Spring flowers of every kind can be had almost for the asking. One wholesaler tells me he made an unsuccessful effort to give away 500 tulips on Friday.

The usual pessimistic prophesies as to a "lily shortage" are heard, but it is more than likely that the top price will not go above 15 cents, and it is rumored that one large firm in the East has already disposed of its annual production at 12½ cents. If this be true, the certainty of a 15-cent rate for what is left is about assured.

Notes.

H. Q. Meyer, former president, director and treasurer of the Rosemary Roseries, Fifth avenue, is no longer connected with this firm. Mr. Charles A. Lindley is now the president.

Quite a number of changes are contemplated by several of the retail establishments on Broadway and Fifth avenue this spring. One firm with headquarters now near Forty-second street will move to a much larger store down town on the same avenue, and another near Thirtieth street, which will leave its present quarters on the first of May, is now looking for a desirable location where ample conservatory privileges may be assured.

Mackintosh will leave his present location for 1144 Broadway, opposite Small & Sons, on account of the removal of the building, where he has established a fine business during the past five years. Fortunately he will be able to use the new store as an Easter branch and make a great display of plants, prior to elaborately fitting up the place as permanent headquarters.

The "Lily King" has sold out his palm stock and is filling his conservatory with blooming plants already, in anticipation of the Easter trade. He will have a general line of everything suitable for the season, including a large number of lily plants in pots. The lily trade during the past week has shared in the general depression, some flowers of excellent quality having depreciated in price to as low as six cents a flower, although for the very finest stock ten cents has been the prevailing price.

The American Institute announces its "Grand Rose show" for Wednesday and Thursday of the present week, and one of the best exhibitions of the year is anticipated.

The auction sales have begun and hardy roses, Azalea mollis, rhododendrons and all other seasonable plants and bulbs will be "going, going, gone," from now on, for several months, accompanied by the stentorian bargain assurances of Messrs. Elliot and Cleary.

C. W. Ward of the Cottage Gardens was in West Virginia last week on a business trip. He is developing a very extensive nursery business at Queens and has added John Dowsett to his corps of efficient assistants in that department.

The usual bronchial afflictions at this season of the year have struck the trade quite liberally and very many have suffered from grippe and influenza. Mr. Bradshaw was one of the latest victims.

The Brooklyn Horticultural Society held its annual meeting last Wednesday and a goodly number were in attendance. President Ward was in the chair and R. B. Gee was elected secretary, Mr. Alexander Wallace having tendered his resignation. Meetings will be held quarterly and the organization has been made a permanent one. Treasurer Weeber's report indicated the gratifying balance of over $200 in the society's treasury after all the bills of the convention had been paid. The reports made by Messrs. Phillips and Plumb were interesting, and the general impression as to the great convention was that it had been a success beyond even the anticipations of the society, which gratefully expresses its appreciation to all whose assistance was so cheerfully given, and to the firms below, whose donations added so much to the beauty of the banquet's decorations. These were: James Hartshorne, carnations; Schloss Bros., ribbons; A. N. Pierson, asparagus and Adiantum farleyense; S. J. Reuter, carnations; H. A. Molatsch, carnations; W. C. Krick, letters; J. A. Suydam, carnations and mignonette; Dailledouze Bros., carnations; Frank Manker, primulas; Charles Lenker, ericas and laurel; Charles Krombach, primulas and cinerarias; Charles E. Koch, palms; C. W. Ward, carnations.

Anthony Wolmers, the florist of Twenty-fifth street, Brooklyn, died on Wednesday last, at the age of seventy. He has been in business near Greenwood Cemetery during the last twenty-one years. He learned the gardening business in Germany, where he was born. His two sons will continue at the old stand. Mr. Wolmers was one of the veterans of the trade in Brooklyn and universally respected.

The sympathy of everyone is sincerely felt for President Rackham in his great bereavement. Everybody in Brooklyn and New York who met the genial president-elect at the convention feel deeply the sorrow that has overtaken him.

Quite unexpectedly the express companies have all given notice of a return to the old rates, the concession to take effect immediately. So satisfactory has been the early wagon deliveries, however, that it is more than probable this system of shipment may be continued.

Mr. Perkins is brightening his branch store in West Thirtieth street, enlarging the office and making other improvements that indicate a satisfactory experience in his venture.

The supply men report an enormous demand for fancy pot covers in all colors and some handsome novelties are in stock.

Mr. Kreshover tells me the call for Porto Rico mats is far ahead of expectations and the supply is limited.

Leucothoe sprays and wild smilax also are ordered away ahead for Easter requirements as never before.

John J. Foley, of 226 Bowery, is offering a handsome album of floral designs to the trade, the pick of the photos of his own artistic work, and at a reasonable price.

The landlord has been demonstrating his nefarious influence on Twenty-eighth street and boosting the rents generally upon the patient wholesalers, and unreasonably in some cases, when the strenuous season is considered. However, the boys have "stood the raise" and business will continue to go on "at the old stands." J. Austin Shaw.

BOSTON.

We have had a very slow week until its closing day, which was the smartest since Christmas. Roses have been most plentiful, violets and lilies quite so, carnations so part of the time, but bulb goods none too much so at all.

The committee appointed to confer with express companies concerning rates of express on flowers and plants feels elated at news of its success. A communication from the express companies announces a reduction of rates to the old scale, but that they retain the privilege of special prices for special services.

Benj. Grey, a well-known florist of the older school, died at his home in Malden on Thursday of last week. He sustained a paralytic shock some few months since, and a second one on the Tuesday preceding his death. He was born in England, coming to this country when a boy, and has figured in the flower business at Albany and Glen Ridge in New York, and at Newton Lower Falls, Boston, and Malden in this state. He was a veteran of the Civil War, a Mason and a member of the G. A. R.

John Davie, a grower of Dedham, is in hard luck, indeed. His place got quite badly frozen out, he came down with a severe case of the grip, and his wife, in attempting to care for the greenhouse in his illness, contracted a case of pneumonia and died in a few days from its effects. A paper circulated in the Co-Operative Market raised nearly $100 for his benefit, and if your name is not upon the list you can do as Mr. Zirngiebel did—telephone in for it to be put on immediately. J. S. Manter.

PITTSBURG.

Club Meeting.

The last regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, held Tuesday evening, 3rd inst., was a carnation meeting. There was a large attendance of members and we had a magnificent display of flowers from home and distant growers.

Mr. L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y., sent large bunches of his magnificent white Albatross, scarlet Flamingo and yellow Sunbird. From the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., came great bunches of superb blossoms, clean, clear, big flowers on long stiff stems of Her Majesty and Marshall Field. Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., sent the inimitable Enchantress, that most useful white Boston Market and the lovely white variegated Mrs. M. A. Patten. Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush, N. Y., sent a sheaf of Fragrance, a light satin pink, of solid substance and fine stem, and it is deliciously clove scented; and the white Bradt, a variety which for size and make-up appealed to everyone. Fine blooms of the white Innocence came from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

From C. W. Ward, the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., came fourteen distinct kinds of new carnations, eight of these being yet unnamed seedlings. It was a feast of loveliness and goodness and elicited many compliments for the persistence and zeal of Mr. Ward. His exhibit included Alpine Glow, pale pink, fringed, good flower, stiff stem; Mrs. J. A. Thayer, light pink; Ethel Ward, a bright satin pink, finely built flower with good substance and good stem—a perfect gem; Judge Hinsdale, light variegated; Mrs. Roosevelt, deep cerise, fine big flowers with long stiff stems, and President Roosevelt, crimson, large flowers and long stiff stems—probably the finest crimson carnation of today. Among the seedlings, No. 613, a fine white, and No. 216, a fine crimson scarlet, very solid flower, with a deal of body to it, appealed particularly to the members.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., Bakerstown, Pa., sent bunches of seventeen distinct varieties. In the way of whites these included Norway, Peru, Lorna, Queen Louise and White Cloud; red, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Estelle; pink, Marquis, Dorothy, Cressbrook, Mrs. E. A. Nelson and the deeper Lawson; light pink, Mrs. Higinbotham, Goethe, Morning Glory, and variegated, Stella and Prosperity.

Ernest Fisher, Castle Shannon, Pa., sent a great bunch of unrivaled Lawson, the white Queen Louise, Marquis, Daybreak, and the pink Wm. Scott. Good, free and money-making the latter has certainly been, but the great Scott has had its day.

Fifteen of our members had been east to Brooklyn at the carnation convention and were full of what they saw and had learned there, so between them and those of us who didn't get east at that time the carnations before us and several kinds that were not here were pretty freely discussed. The following are a few of the comments.

Albatross is one of the best whites, if not the best. It has a good stem and a large well built flower, a good keeper and stands shipping well.

Lorna showed up well. It is fine, and a good improvement on White Cloud. Still the latter is one of Pittsburg's stand-bys.

Norway is good, but apt to split sometimes.

Queen Louise is a profitable variety. It comes in early and stays all winter, and is very free.

Peru is good, but it takes a longer time to develop its flowers than some others do, and it splits a little in fall.

Boston Market has a good reputation east. It has as finely built a flower as one would wish to see.

Innocence, good size, pure white, promising keeper, stiff stem. Better than White Cloud.

Enchantress, a great favorite. Its color, beauty, size and strength appeal to the people.

White Bradt: "Oh, if we could only grow it as the Dailledouze boys grow it, it would sweep the field." The Blind Bros. believe it is more vigorous and easy to grow than its parent.

Flamingo—Magnificent! And it stood up splendidly.

Fragrance—Its fragrance, color, substance and stem will make it a capital seller.

Lawson has strong friends here. Ernest Fisher declares it is the best deep pink extant. Some one intimated that while fine in clear weather it splits a little in dark weather. But Ernest pointed with pride to the flowers before us; there was no split there, "and it blooms with me from December until July."

Prosperity isn't free enough.

Stella is so free that it is hard to get cuttings enough from it; its shoots all run to flowers.

Morning Glory is very free, but Enchantress was more favored.

Estelle is very free, giving more flowers than anything else of its color, and it sells well.

Marquis is a large, fine flower and fragrant, and sells well, but it sometimes goes to sleep in spring.

Mr. Burki's foreman said they got more flowers and more money from Mrs. E. A. Nelson and Dorothea than from any other pinks they are growing. While Mrs. P. Palmer is free he wouldn't grow it extensively. Cressbrook is very good, but he prefers Nelson.

And we kept this up until after 10 o'clock. You carnation men who sell rooted cuttings of new varieties had better be very careful about what kind of plants you send to Pittsburg, for some of the members of this club got right up in open meeting and told us what kind of stock you sent them, and they don't mince matters or names, either. Don't send any rust-infested, emaciated or rootless stock to our boys if you value your reputation. It is fair to say, though, that firms that supplied first-class stock, clean and well-rooted, were boldly mentioned and recommended.

P. A.

Market Conditions.

Trade last week was very fair. Considerable complaint is being made as to business being affected by Lent. All kinds of stock is in good supply. Roses are not selling as well as they did; the supply is more than ample for all demands. The special and extra Maids and Brides are easy to dispose of. The values of these grades have changed some, the best selling at $10 to $12 per 100. The lower grades are difficult to dispose of, and plenty of them are being received. American Beauties are not selling nearly so well as they did. The supply of these flowers at present is quite heavy.

Carnations are better sale. All stock that is up to the average can be sold at reasonable figures. No scarcity is noticeable in this flower. The best grades sell at $3 per $100; some white bring $4, with ordinary stock at $1.50 per 100.

Bulbous stock is very plentiful. Daffodils and jonquils have dropped in price and are moving slowly. The better grades of tulips are easily disposed of.

The quality of lilies is improving and they sell slowly at $10 and $15 per 100. The outlook for a good crop of lilies for Easter is favorable.

Violets are in fair demand. Sweet peas are hard to sell. Smilax and Sprengeri remain scarce.

M. C. Dunlevy, of Carnegie, is sending the Cut Flower Co. quantities of very well-grown jonquils, daffodils, Dutch hyacinths and Narcissus poeticus.

Fred Burki is happy over a natural gas well which came in last week with a rock pressure of 500 pounds, which is sufficient to make the well of some importance. It will supply enough gas for use under all the boilers. It is located on Mr. Burki's new place at Bakerstown, Pa.

Notes.

J. B. Ferguson, of the East End, Pittsburg, formerly a landscape gardener and wholesale and retail florist, was shot down and instantly killed near the railroad station at New Castle Junction, Pa., at 10 o'clock Monday night, March 9. Mr. Ferguson was bound for Pittsburg, evidently returning from a commercial trip. Robert Neugin, an iron worker of New Castle, is under arrest for the crime. Mr. Ferguson was born forty-six years ago at St. John, Dalroy, Scotland, where he was married. Besides his brother, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Ferguson, and five children.

W. A. Clarke, treasurer of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., and Harry Dunlevy, of Carnegie, are doing jury duty this week.

The florists over in the Allegheny market sold flowers by candle-light last Saturday night. The burning out of the dynamos caused the darkness.

Casper Limbach, who attended the Brooklyn carnation convention, is very well satisfied with his trip. While down east he secured several good orders for greenhouse glass.

George W. Goldner, representing Reed & Keller, of New York, and Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, W. Va., were visitors during the week.

Express Rate Repealed.

Now that the exorbitant express rates have been repealed, I would suggest that the trade use more discretion and be more reasonable hereafter when making claims for damages. It is generally understood that the raising of the rate was due to so many claims (many unjust) for flowers frozen in transit or miscarried.

A. W. Smith had considerable funeral work for delivery in Philadelphia, Pa., last Sunday. Mr. Smith, Wm. Hall and Fred Riegelmeyer left for that city on Saturday, to make up the work.

Mrs. E. A. Williams reports business very good on blooming plants, which are grown by her to perfection.

Hoo-Hoo.

BUFFALO.

Robin Redbreast appeared in Western New York on March 4th, and in such numbers that you could not believe it was a case of a bold pioneer venturing to the north on some voyage of discovery. But an ornithological convention must have been held in the southern states and the majority decided that it was safe and proper to migrate to orchards of the north, to the birthplace of many, and to the scenes of love and domestic bliss of their parents. We were making cuttings of Nelson carnations on the 4th when we first heard the welcome notes of the blue bird perched high on a maple tree, and the local poet being present, he at once wrote on the white walls of the greenhouse:

Rock-a-by bluebird, on the tree top.
You are early to get here and hope you will stop;
Call loudly aloft for your mate to come—
'Tis sweet to our ears—your little love song.

We told the poet he had better see that the sewer in the stoke hole was not stopped up, as the rains and mild weather had made water very plentiful. Spring is here. We may get another cold week, and most likely it will be about Easter time.

Business has hardly kept up with the supply of flowers. Carnations are not very much overdone, except Lawson. Every body grew this wonderful variety, with the consequence that it is overdone, and white, scarlet, and Nelson pink are in more demand. Violets are too plentiful to be healthy. Some wonderful Princess of Wales are coming in from Coriu, yet with the majority the single violet is not the favorite. It will be yet, for it has size, sweetness and certainly beauty beyond the double, and if you can only introduce them once it's a go, and hereafter they will want them.

There is an automobile show going on this week in Convention Hall, and W. J. Palmer & Sons have fine floral "autos" in the windows of both their stores. One is of galax outlined with white carnations. The other is composed of daffodils, and each has a pretty little wax lady acting as chaffeur. They attract much attention from the sidewalk. You have perhaps noticed that a free show is always liberally patronized.

Like the advent of the robins, the opening of spring has brought a flock of Dutchmen. I regret very much that I was not in the wilds of Genesee county tapping sugar maples, but I was not, and in they came, all as persistent as a boil on your neck. There was Mr. Schepers, talking for Van der Gugten & Son; then G. Boehee, "spieling" for the Holland Bulb Co., and two others, whose names I could not pronounce for fear the attempt would produce tonsilitis, and last came Mr. Van Zanten. Well, you had better see them than be deaf and dumb. The trouble is that the young men on their first visit to this country are always polite and gentlemanly and it causes a pang to give them the cold shoulder. A seasoned one knows that he is going to receive no in most places, but the first visit ones die hard.

I don't know whether I mentioned the exodus of Mr. Thomas Coleman from 479 Main street. He occupied the store just a month, and we thought by his peculiar talents and acquaintance that he might be a success, but we are convinced now that his forte is the horse. He is mostly all horse, and I am not yet acquainted with any real good gardener or florist who was a success that divided his attention between flowers and horses. When you have made your little competence, turn to horses. Before that let your barn man study horses.

EXPRESS RATES.

The Old Rate Now Restored.

It is a pleasure to be able to report that the express companies have finally responded to the universal demand for a restoration of the former rate on cut flowers, and by the time this reaches our readers the single merchandise rate will again be in force.

One of the Chicago wholesale commission men, Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., and chairman of the committee of the Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Association, is entitled to a good deal of credit in this connection. His work was undoubtedly a most important factor in bringing about the desired result. And the reason it was so effective was that he gathered and submitted to the officials convincing evidence that the companies had lost revenue by the change. As the REVIEW has several times mentioned, this is the kind of an argument with which to command the attention of the officials.

TORONTO.

Canadian Carnation Exhibit.

The annual carnation exhibit was held at St. George's Hall on Thursday, March 5, and was very successful in all respects. While the display of carnations may not have been as large as last year, yet the varieties were well represented. The American growers of new varieties put up some very nice displays.

The Grand Challenge Cup given for the best vase of carnations in the show, and which was won last year by the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., with Adonis, was captured this year by J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, with a vase of Mrs. Lawson. Mr. Hill was unable to defend the cup on account of having exhibited so largely in the United States. A vase of Governor Roosevelt from the Dale estate showed up very conspicuously. Strange to say, these two varieties, grown by the same men, were close competitors for the cup last year. The prize for the best display went to the Dale estate, of Brampton.

The judges were Messrs. S. S. Bain, Jos. Bennett, J. McKenna, of Montreal, and E. Mepsted, of Ottawa, and their report of the exhibit is as follows, which I may say gives a very fair and impartial survey of the varieties exhibited:

The Grand Challenge Cup, Mr. J. H. Dunlop, with Mrs. Lawson. Best display, the Dale estate. Stella, Alba, extra. D. Whitney, Apollo, very good. Sibyl, not very large. Murphy's White, not in good condition to judge. Gov. Lowndes, fine stem but sleepy. Enchantress, sleepy, had been fine. Lillian Pond, a grand vase, good in every respect. Mrs. P. Palmer, very fine 30-inch stem. Her Majesty, fine not large. Marshall Field, good. Harlowarden, only fair, as shown. Sunbird, good, medium size, good stem. Flamingo, grand in every respect. Albatross, grand in every respect. Rose, Franz Deegen, a grand one; scent, stem and flower all of the best. Should recommend certificate of merit, if any awarded, to Flamingo and Albatross.

A slight misunderstanding occurred in regard to the best display, many of the growers considering that the display meant roses and other cut stock, as well as plants, etc. This was overruled by the judges, they claiming that, it being a carnation show, the display would certainly be for the best display of carnations. This I mention, as many who saw the display of W. J. Lawrence, of Eglinton, could not understand why he did not receive that prize, having a fine display of roses, Harrisii lilies, as well as some well-grown plants of spiræas, azaleas, etc.

Wm. Fendley, of Brampton, put up a nice exhibit of carnations and violets; Jay & Son, Toronto, carnations and other miscellaneous stock; F. R. Pierson Co. sent a specimen plant of the new fern Piersoni.

The executive of the C. H. A. met at Dunlop's and decided to have the annual convention during the first week of the fall exhibition in Toronto. Friday evening, March 6, the thirteenth annual banquet of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association was held in Webb's parlors, and there was a full house. After the assembled company had done justice to the good things, toasts, intermingled with speeches and songs, were indulged in. Several good songs were rendered by J. Milne, W. J. Lawrence of this city and S. S. Bain of Montreal. It may be worth mentioning that the speech of the evening was made by S. S. Bain in response to the toast, "The Horticultural Association." He pointed out that florists were men of brains, and should take their place with those of the best pursuits of the day. He said he was sorry that so many florists acted as though they were ashamed of the profession; they did not add to it the dignity of which it was worthy. Men who can make two blades of grass grow where formerly only one had grown are the men who are making the world better, and should have the respect of their fellow men.

A few of the visitors we noticed, besides those already mentioned, were E. Walker, E. Townsend, J. Morgan and C. Webster, of Hamilton; A. E. Cole, of Grimsby; J. Wells, Galt and Dr. Roe, Georgetown.

We notice that what we thought was to be a branch of J. S. Simmons' store is to have the name of the Queen Floral Co. We understand that Mr. Simmons is now looking for a man of some ability to take the place of Mr. Sewell, who is going to take charge of the Queen street store. D. J.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business is dull now—duller, perhaps, than usual at this season. There is a feeling that conditions are changing. Seasons of activity and depression are more sharply contrasted than formerly. Whether this is true or not time will show. It seems so now.

Prices are low and unsteady, with nearly all flowers in excess of the demand. Quite a lot of good shipping orders are sent out daily and the uptown stores are fairly busy at times. Conditions should improve in a short time.

The Rose Show.

The American Rose Society will hold its annual show in this city in connection with the spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, on March 24, 25 and 26. Every rose grower in and near Philadelphia will help to make the show a fine one by sending at least one vase of his best blooms. There are classes in every known variety for the big growers, and still others for the private gardeners. Then there are the big Beauty cup and cash prize, and prizes for pot plants and specials without number. Send to Secretary Rust for a full list and send your entry to help make the affair a big success.

Notes.

J. Horace McFarland was in town photographing plants and flowers.

Suzuki & Iida, representing the Yokohama Nurseries, are pushing business among our wholesale growers.

Isaac A. Passmore is sending some fine flowers of his white seedling, No. 3, to Samuel S. Pennock.

William J. Baker is receiving some nice Brides and Asparagus plumosus.

Walter P. Stokes is sending in some fine valley to Leo Niessen.

William Beasley is on the road for David Landreth & Sons.

Ernest Hemming spoke on "Hardy Perennials," and George Redles on "The Care of the Lawn," before the Germantown Horticultural Society on Monday evening. Phil.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply is not excessive, as a result of the continued gloomy weather, and demand is fair for the season. Though prices remain practically unchanged on roses and carnations there is a slightly firmer tone to the market as a rule, with occasional relapses, these being generally in the poorer grades of roses. Of carnations there are none too many, either colored or white, and they maintain their price level rather better than roses. The supply is inclined to be variable, being much greater on some days than others, indicating a tendency on the part of some growers to ship larger lots and less frequently. This is a mistake. Returns will average better if shipments are more frequent.

The quotations given elsewhere give the range on shipable stock, but it may be well to add here that we have heard of clean up sales of roses at as low as $15 to $18 per 1,000; and of carnations at $10 per 1,000.

The present weather which is keeping the cut down may be a good thing in the end. If it keeps the heavy cut back for Easter there will be no complaint.

Items.

The news of the reduction of the express rate on cut flowers to the old level was received with much satisfaction in trade circles. Mention of the matter will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bassett have returned from California.

There are rumors of a possible break in the glass market. The combination is having troubles of its own. But the latest quotations on imported Belgian was $3.50 per box in hundred box lots and $3.35 in car lots. The American 16x24 A is held at $4 per box in hundred box lots and $3.65 in car lots.

Iron pipe continues at the old level, 5 cents per foot for 1-inch, and 6½ cents for 1¼-inch.

The Dearborn Floral Co. has opened a store at 215 Dearborn street.

E. J. Fancourt, representing Samuel S. Pennock, Philadelphia, was a recent visitor.

Mr. George A. Rackham's many friends in this city were deeply grieved to hear of the death of his wife.

Bowling.

A meeting of the Florists' Bowling Club was held at the store of Mr. P. J. Hauswirth last Tuesday evening. There was a good attendance and the annual election was held, with the following result: P. J. Hauswirth, president; Geo. Scott, vice president; Geo. Stollery, secretary and treasurer; C. M. Balluff, captain. It was decided to start a series of thirty games on Tuesday, April 14, and to continue rolling three games each Tuesday evening thereafter up to June 16. Entries must be sent to P. J. Hauswirth before April 14 and must be accompanied by an entry fee of $1. Twenty-one games must be rolled to qualify.

MILWAUKEE.

Bad weather and plenty of stock were the prevailing conditions the past week. The peculiar feature was the continued large demand for carnations, especially white, while the demand for roses was extremely light. Bulbous stock was at a standstill. Daffodils and hyacinths were coming in from all directions and prices went down considerably below producing figures. Lily of the valley, Romans, freesias, violets and miscellaneous small flowers used for funeral work kept moving fairly well. White carnations brought from $3 to $4 per 100, while colored stock hovered around the $2 mark.

Nic Zweifel and C. Johansen, the North Milwaukee growers, are bringing in a fine lot of carnations, hyacinths and sweet peas.

Chas. Zepnick's violets are in their prime, and his pansies, bunched in his own peculiar style, find a ready market.

W. A. Kennedy, who looks after the greenhouse end at the C. C. Pollworth Co.'s plant, is exceedingly proud of his roses, and such Maids, Brides, Gates and Perles as he sends in were never equaled in this market before.

The Burlington Floral Co. is also sending in some fine roses, its Maids being of fine color.

Chas. Burmeister and John Howard are having excellent success their first year in carnations. The former is cutting some fine Prosperity, and both are growing Hill, White Cloud and Lawson, which bring top figures.

Chas. Helwig is cutting a lot of late Romans, which sell well, and his Evanstons look pretty much like Cranes.

John Dunlop is making a reputation for himself as a freesia grower.

H. Schwebka still has great faith in Daybreak and is doing it well.

Heitman & Baerman are cutting a grade of carnations which sells on sight.

Frank Dilger is growing a large quantity of bulb stock for Holton & Hunkel, and Loeffler Bros. are likewise supplying a fine quantity of violets.

A. Billings is supplying the market with a large portion of the Harrisii used.

Kapsalis & Co. opened their new store Saturday, and although the weather was very unfavorable the store was thronged with visitors the entire day. The store is a model in equipment and is finished entirely in white, and so arranged that cut flowers and plants can be effectively displayed. W. G. Schucht is the decorator, and their spacious window the past week attracted considerable attention.

The executive committee of the S. A. F. O. H. will meet at the Plankington Hotel Tuesday, March 17.

Warren Manning, the landscape artist from Boston, is in the city laying out plans for the new addition to Mitchell Park.

C. G. Carpenter, of Omaha, may be our next park superintendent. His application is receiving favorable attention.

The bulb men are coming thick and fast. The recent visitors were: Kroeschell, Krawel, Van Leuven, Taate, Van Zonneveldt, Hugenholz and Tegelaar, from Holland; Henry, of Henry & Lee; Wm. Hagemann, Loechner, of Suzuki & Iida, and Chessman, of Vaughn's. In the supply line, B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co.; Martin Reukauf, with Bayersdorfer, and Mr. Fancourt, showing a fine lot of ribbons for S. S. Pennock.

Club Exhibition.

Carnation night at the Florists' Club brought out a very large attendance. Displays were made by nearly all the local growers as well as a great many from outside sources. Fred Dorner, of Lafayette, Ind., sent some Apollo, Dorothy Whitney, Smyl, Alba and Stella. They were all well grown, large flowers borne on stiff stems and made a very creditable showing.

E. T. Graves, of Richmond, Ind., sent President McKinley, a large pink and a very attractive variety.

Chicago Carnation Co. exhibited Mrs. Potter Palmer, Her Majesty, Marshall Field, and Harlowarden. These arrived in excellent condition and all the varieties were at their best.

J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., exhibited Enchantress, also Governor Roosevelt, Nelson Fisher, Harry Fenn and Mrs. Patten. The Enchantress showed up well and was much admired.

W. N. Rudd exhibited Marquis, Phyllis, and a good white seedling. Both of the latter made a very favorable impression.

Weber & Sons of Oakland, Md., exhibited Governor Lowndes and in spite of the long distance it came it showed up well.

Prizes were awarded to the local growers for the best twenty-five blooms of any one variety. Heitman & Baermann took first prize on Marquis; Nic Zweifel, second prize, on Genevieve Lord, and C. C. Pollworth Co., third prize, on Dorothy.

At the close of the exhibit the stock was auctioned off to the highest bidder and there was some lively competition for some of the varieties. Kapsalis & Co. bought most of the leading varieties.

C. C. Pollworth Co. also exhibited a very fine line of Golden Gate, Brides and Bridemaid roses.

Lunch and refreshments were served. The members are now looking forward to the coming of the Executive Committee of the S. A. F. C. C. P.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Contrary to expectations, business has kept up wonderfully well the past week. Everybody is busy with some kind of work, and Lent hasn't interfered with us as yet. Funeral work continues steady and all kinds of white flowers are scarce and in great demand, but some of the colored stuff is left over.

The feature of the market the past week was the increasing quantity of roses, and of course a drop in the prices was expected. Some extra fine Beauties are now in the market. These always sell well, but the price on them dropped to $4 per dozen for select. Brides, Maids, Meteors and Golden Gates are of good quality and in great demand. Very few are left over. Prices have dropped a cent or two and another drop is expected by the last of this week.

Violets sell fairly well and are disposed of in large quantities and often at very low figures.

Dutch hyacinths are more plentiful and sell quickly. Tulips and daffodils are slow sellers. Romans and paper whites are very scarce and are much sought after just now. Harrisii is also very scarce, but callas are quite plentiful.

Carnations are having a great call, with plenty of them in the market, but none too many for the demand. Three and four cents are the prices they are bringing at this writing.

Smilax is looking up again and sells well with other greens, including galax. The latter has been used very extensively during the scarcity of flowers.

A very active shipping trade was reported for the past week, and our wholesale men say it is much larger than last season's.

Notes.

John Young spent a few days in Chicago recently visiting his daughter.

R. F. Tesson, of Ellison & Tesson, reports that they have had a great season in dinner and wedding decorations, which with funeral work still keeps them very busy.

Down at Union Market some activity is shown in plants. Today (Monday) the weather is fine and warm and plants in full bloom do not look out of place. A few days like this will find the market fairly alive with them.

At the club meeting this week, Thursday, a large vase of Franz Deegen, the new yellow rose, will be exhibited by the South Park Floral Co. This rose has been awarded five silver and one gold medal. J. J. B.

DETROIT.

Death of Mrs. Rackham.

All the florists here have been greatly shocked by the death of the wife of Mr. George A. Rackham on March 2, as the result of an attack of pneumonia.

Mr. Rackham having recently returned from Brooklyn, the florists of Detroit were preparing to welcome and congratulate him on his election to the presidency of the American Carnation Society, but their intended words of congratulation have been replaced by those of sympathy, and he certainly has the heartfelt sympathy of all in his bereavement.

The funeral was attended by nearly all the local florists and the pall bearers were Messrs. Philip Breitmeyer, J. F. Sullivan, F. H. Beard, Jas. Taylor, G. H. Taepke and Robt. Flowerday. The club sent a large wreath of Golden Gate roses, the work of Mr. B. Schroeter, and the majority of the retailers sent personal tokens of sympathy.

Rev. J. F. McCollester, prelate of Detroit Commandery No. 1, K. T., of which Mr. Rackham is a member, officiated at the interment.

Mrs. Rackham had long been an invalid and suffered severely. An operation for cancer was performed soon after the S. A. F. meeting in Detroit, which was not entirely successful, but through it all she was most patient and cheerful. A severe cold, contracted during the bitter cold week of the Carnation Society meeting, developed into pneumonia.

She was 43 years of age and leaves a family of three boys and one girl, the youngest being 6 years old. F.

A Card From Mr. Rackham.

I wish to use your columns to thank the florists of Detroit for the great kindness and sympathy shown me in the sad loss of my wife, who died of pneumonia March 2.

It has been a great comfort to me to know that I have the sympathy of so many friends, and it is with a grateful heart that I thank each and every member of the craft. And I pray that the day may be long hence when they shall be called upon to pass through a like experience. Geo. A. Rackham.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Flowers are only fairly plentiful, with the exception of violets and bulbous stock. Narcissi, except some late varieties, are on the wane, but daffodils are in great quantity and good quality and very cheap. Princeps were offered today at 75 cents per 100 and good long-stemmed Sir Watkin at $1 per 100. The glut will be over in a week and then any late blooming bulbs will have a better show.

Violets are selling wholesale at 50 cents per dozen bunches, each bunch containing about 100 flowers. How is that for cheap? These are all of the Princess variety, as there are no Marie Louise in quantity in market yet. The latter is a very late bloomer in this locality and are not so popular as the single purple varieties.

Roses are in short supply and the prices keep up in good shape. Carnations have not changed any in price since last week, and they are only in fair supply. Extra good flowers are really scarce.

Lilium Harrisii and longiflorum are coming in in small quantities, and the prospects are fairly good for the Easter supply. Easter, by the way, comes a couple of weeks later this year than last, which is a boon to some of the growers.

Business is only fair. No swell weddings through the week, but a goodly quantity of funerals helped to make business for the stores.

Notes.

Mr. James Cleary, the well-known florist with H. M. Sanborn, of Oakland, has been on the sick list for several weeks and has been compelled to stay at home. He is recovering slowly and expects to be "on deck" again in the near future. G.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Roses are in better supply than they have been for some time, and all orders are being filled nicely with a good quality of stock. The short-stemmed ones, of which there is a large supply, are well sought after, and are closed out at good average prices. American Beauties are more plentiful and find a ready market. The supply of Golden Gates is increasing. Liberties are still scarce, but a few very fine quality ones are coming in. Brides and Maids are about equal.

Carnations, both fancy and ordinary grades, are getting scarce, and the keeping quality is not as good as it might be. Bursted calyxes are still very much in evidence. White ones sell best, with red ones in very good demand.

Bulbous stock sells fairly well, but the price is going down. Harrisii and calla lilies are the best property to have. Valley is moving slowly. Some good white Dutch are to be had, and they go very nicely. Daffodils and Von Sions have a pretty hard road to travel and find but poor sale.

The violet market is very erratic, one day you cannot get enough and the next you have them to throw away, and the price is up and down likewise.

Smilax and plumosus are very scarce.

There is a little Sprengeri, but not nearly enough to supply the demand. Even ferns and galax have been short lately.

The carnation show of the Florists' Club, March 14, promises to be the best exhibit of the season. Several out-of-town growers have signified their intention of staging blooms, and a very good show is looked forward to.

Geo. Myers, of the Avondale Floral Co., who has been very sick with typhoid fever, is about again.

J. T. Conger took a flying trip to Dayton and Springfield, O., during the past week.

The entertainment committee of the Florists' Club now has everything in readiness for the progressive euchre party which is to be given at the club rooms of the society Thursday evening, March 26. A large attendance is expected. The tickets are out now.

C. J. Ohmer.

WASHINGTON.

The market the past week has been very dull, with lots of rain and plenty of Lent, which has brought prices down to the lowest notch. Southern jonquils are coming in in great quantities, and good stuff is selling at from 25 to 50 cents per hundred, which naturally hurts the sale of our Dutch bulbs. Virginia violets have been as low as 50 cents and $1 per thousand. Tulips can be had at almost any price. From indications there will be nothing made on any of the Dutch stuff this season. Good roses, such as Brides and Maids, are bringing 8 to 10 cents. Beauties from $2 to $4 per dozen. Carnations 2 to 3 cents. Valley 3 cents.

We learn with regret of the death of Mrs. Hoover the mother of Mr. Hoover, of the firm of Mayberry & Hoover.

Mr. J. B. Freeman, of Thirteenth street, had some very fine work in the way of large wreaths, for the funeral of the late Hub Smith, whose remains were brought through here from Genoa, Italy. There were also many other handsome designs at the depot.

PIPING AND WATER TUBES.

We have three green-houses which we wish to heat with steam, changing from hot water. The houses run east and west, are in sheltered place on south hillside, built on Dietsch plan, 12 x 60, no side ventilators nor glass on sides nor back end. Ridge height ten feet, eaves six feet, 12 x 16 glass. One house is separated by glass partition which we would like to have at about 50 degrees, the other two houses at 60 degrees. How many 1-inch pipes would it take for each house?

What effect will direct heat have on 4-inch water tubes riveted and caulked into stationary heads (water having free passage through tubes, the heat passing around the outside of the tubes)? Would it cause them to buckle and crack? Also would the tubes be liable to leak at the joints? B. B.

In reply to B. B., for effectively heating the two connecting ridge and furrow green-houses 12 x 60, as he describes, by steam to 50 degrees on coldest nights, six lines of 1-inch pipes would be advisable. For the one house of same dimensions to 60 degrees, seven lines of 1-inch pipes, or their equivalent in circumferal measurement.

In the reply to B. B. No. 2, the effect of heat on the 4-inch tubes expanded into stationary heads will depend largely on the freedom of circulation through these tubes and also on the length of the tubes. If the circulation is very free, the expansion of the tubes will be less than if sluggish, and the longer the tubes, the greater will be the total expansion. In cases of short tubes, no serious trouble may be looked for, but in long tubes, screwed connections should be made, and, if possible, provision for expansion should be made by a bend or offset at some point, otherwise the troubles mentioned by B. B. would be liable to occur at any time.

PIPING.

I expect in the spring to build a house 21 feet wide, 120 feet long, and 8 feet high, three-quarter span, long span to south, running east and west, with glass on the ends but not on the sides, the house to contain three beds —one 4 feet, one 8 feet and the other 4 feet, divided by two sunken walks 2 feet wide, house to be heated with hot water. The boiler must be at the east end of the house. Please tell me how to pipe the house, the overhead flows being 2 inch, to a temperature of 55 degrees in zero weather. R. A. B.

In reply to R. A. B. I would suggest the arrangement of piping as shown in engraving, which consists of one flow and two returns on the north wall, two flows on the central column and two returns in the north walk, one flow on the south column, two returns in the south walk and one flow and two returns on the south wall, all the pipes to grade upward away from the boiler end, having air cocks at their highest point, the circulating pipes, in all cases, to be 2-inch; the main flow and returns from the boiler will depend largely upon the make of the boiler used; if a single flow and return lead from the boiler, they should not be less than 3½-inch, if a number of smaller connections are made to the boiler, their combined area should be not less than 11 square inches. The expansion tank can be placed at any convenient point but must be on a higher level than the highest point of any of the coils. Henry W. Gibbons.

New York.

BOILER AND PIPING.

Answering the questions of S. T. D., the 50 H. P. boiler which he describes would have a capacity of heating about double his present requirements, therefore if he can buy it at a reasonable price, it would be policy to do so. The capacity of the boiler for greenhouse heating, if by steam, would be about 4,000 feet of radiating surface, or if by water, about 8,500 feet of radiating surface, which is equal to about 8,500 lineal feet of 3½-inch pipe. The flow mains may be taken off at the dome and the returns should be brought in at the bottom near the front end of the boiler, as suggested.

For heating the present houses, if by steam, a 4-inch main should leave the dome branching into a 3-inch main leading to the south part of the range and a 2½-inch to the north. The returns can each be 2-inch. If for water heating, a 6-inch main must leave the top of the boiler branching into a 3½-inch and 5-inch, and one 3½-inch and one 5-inch return will be necessary. This arrangement is for heating the present range only. If extension is contemplated, increased size of mains or additional mains will become necessary.

Regarding the chimney, it will not be practicable to advise without some knowledge as to the construction, size of footing, depth of foundation and other details. Henry W. Gibbons.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Report on Test of American Grown Bulbs.

In response to the request made through the columns of the trade papers last season, home grown bulbs were sent to the convention at Asheville, N. C., for exhibition and testing as to forcing qualities by Misses Wilson, Sorrento, Fla., and Poat Bros., Ettrick, Va. These bulbs, consisting of Narcissi in several varieties, were placed in the hands of W. H. Siebrecht, Astoria, N. Y., and received from him the ordinary treatment given to bulbs of this class as forced for the production of cut flowers. Mr. Siebrecht's report thereon is as follows: "The paper whites were as good as the French. The Golden Spur not quite as large as the Dutch grown, but all flowered A 1. The Trumpet Majors were as good as any grown. Incomparable, all flowered. The Poeticus Ornatus were a little weak. Emperor and Empress O. K. Sir Watkins gave plenty of bloom. Campernelles were very floriferous. These were all the varieties supplied, and they proved, for the size of the bulbs, more than satisfactory, those from each of the exhibitors being equally good."

An opportunity will again be given to American growers of forcing bulbs and dealers in these products to demonstrate the qualities of their goods at the convention in Milwaukee, Wis., next August, and the gratifying outcome of the small display made at Asheville, as above recorded, should result in an increased number of entries this year.

Wm. J. Stewart, Secretary.

CANADIAN HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

The executive committee of the above association met in Toronto on March 6 and arranged a program for the sixth annual convention, which will be held in Toronto on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 3 and 4, during the first week of the Industrial Exhibition. Railway rates are at their lowest at this time and there are excursions from all over Canada and adjoining states. The trade exhibit will be staged in one of the buildings on the exhibition grounds and will consequently be viewed by thousands. The program for the four sessions of the convention will be of special interest. Full particulars will be available later.

HYDRAULIC RAMS.

In your issue of Dec. 25th "Sufferer" asks as to the cause of his hydraulic ram failing to give satisfaction and was replied to by Mr. Gibbons, whose authority we do not wish to dispute, but having had long experience with these rams we venture to suggest that the right point was not touched upon in the reply.

The trouble with the ram is, we think, not in the service pipe but in the size and length of the drive pipe. If "Sufferer" will increase the drive pipe to 1½-inch and leave it at its present length or shorten it by 25 feet and use 1¼-inch with the same fall he now has, we think he will have no more trouble with the ram stopping, and it will have a much more active motion.

R. G. MILFORD.

Sherbrooke, Que.

WILMINGTON, OHIO.—Mr. George H. Moores, who has been gardener at the State Hospital at Athens, Ohio, for the last five years, has bought the business of the Wilmington Floral Co. and started in business on his own account. The business here will still be known as the Wilmington Floral Co. Mr. Moores' place at Athens will be filled by Mr. George C. Kinnamon, who has been assistant florist at the Central Hospital at Columbus.

ARAUCARIAS.—H. H. Berger & Co., New York, give the following directions for sowing seed of Araucaria excelsa: "Use leaf mold mixed with a small percentage of fibrous loam. Set the seed upright and as close together as possible, leaving a small portion of germ end exposed. Keep shaded. Temperature should be even 65 to 70 degrees. Do not allow to dry out nor overwater. Seed should sprout in three months."

Seed Trade News.

CARIBOU, ME.—The George W. P. Jerrard Co. reports that a recent fall of 30 inches of snow on top of what was on the ground made the snow five feet deep on the level, and this has kept the farmers from moving their produce to market as fast as they otherwise would. Owing to the unfavorable weather last summer only one-half as many seed potatoes were harvested as the previous year and trade is brisk in all varieties except Bliss Triumph. These are sold mostly to the southern trade and at present the supply seems to exceed the demand, with prices a little off. Some of the Aroostook potatoes are shipped a long way for seed. Last season the above named company shipped a trial lot of 45 different varieties to Honolulu, Hawaii, and they gave such satisfactory results in their soil and climate that the same parties have ordered a much larger shipment this season.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Wernich Seed Co. reports that trade has opened late, as catalogues were mailed two weeks later than last year. If orders now coming in are any indication the business outlook is excellent. Orders are large, especially for vegetable and flower seeds. In farm seeds the demand is mostly for grass and clover seeds. Local canners are buying up almost any old seed sweet corn and cucumber seed, paying fancy prices for it. Unless heavy frosts set in we shall have an early planting season.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Cleveland Market Gardeners' and Producers' Association has been organized with officers as follows: S. B. Chester, South Brooklyn, president; L. Zeager, Rocky River and T. W. James, Parma, vice presidents; W. A. Potter, Rockport, secretary; T Peterson, Rocky River, treasurer. An executive committee of five members will govern the affairs of the association. Meetings will be held once a month for the present.

WORCESTER, MASS.—Ross Bros. report indications for an unusually large trade this season. On account of the total failure of nearly all vine seeds and early varieties of sweet corn, buyers, especially the canners, are trying to get their orders in, but it is difficult to get early varieties of sweet corn to supply the demand and corn that was harvested in the fall and put on the racks to dry, instead of drying as it usually does, molded and is of no value whatever for seed purposes.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—On July 1 last Frank S. Platt took into partnership three of the young men who have been with him from eight to fifteen years, and to adjust these matters had the business incorporated as the Frank S. Platt Co. The business has been established 27 years and has attained such dimensions that assistance in the management became necessary, and it has been his policy to reward faithful service.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—H. F. Thorup reports excellent prospects for seed trade this season. There is promise of a good supply of water for irrigation and this will cause general planting. The winter has been a very cold one and there is no sign yet of a break, but a change is looked for soon.

St. Johnsbury, Vt.—Charles F. Gibbs, the florist, died suddenly Jan. 1 of neuralgia of the heart. He was born in Hartford, Sept. 15, 1850, and had been in the florist business here for over twenty years. His trade was important and not entirely local. He is survived by a widow and two adopted children. The business will be continued by Mrs. Gibbs.

Ionia, Mich.—Fire almost destroyed the greenhouse plant of Vincent Bros. the morning of January 31, the loss being estimated at $2,000, with no insurance.

In roses, Beauties of all grades are coming in freely, and find ready market at good prices. Carnations are not any too plentiful in any color, being used up very close. No flowers have gone to waste yet. Can even say there are hardly enough to go around, especially so in the line of white flowers, which are being picked up at once. Bulbous stuff is plenty. Violets come in a little heavy. The dark weather, which is now prevailing, is detrimental to their sales. Lilies are moving well, as is also a variety of other stuff. DILGER.

Headquarters for EASTER PLANTS
We make a specialty of BLOOMING PLANTS for Easter week. I have the largest stock in Philadelphia; larger and in better condition than ever before. All the large greenhouses and frames are crowded with the choicest stock, at lowest cash prices.

AZALEA INDICA—3 houses full. It is not necessary to mention that all my customers know that I am the agent of a large concern in Belgium, Ghent. I go there every year, if possible, and secure for my customers the best that can be had. I have all the leading American varieties, raised all winter in pots, and not stored away in cold frames, without being potted, like some do. White—Niobe, B. Andre, Alba, Deutsche Perle. Pink—Van der Cruyssen, Dr. Moore, Simon Mardner and many others. About 1 doz. variegated varieties, such as Vervaeneana, Empress of India, etc., and many new varieties, double and single, in 6 to 7-inch pots. Prices from 60c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. As a special I must mention my Mme. Van der Cruyssen this year. They are unusually fine, as round as an apple, covered with buds. Price 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Specimen 10 to 11-inch pots, $5.00 each.

AZALEA MOLLIS, a novelty when in bloom, 6-in. pots, 60c to 75c each.

LILIUM HARRISII and BERMUDA-GROWN LONGIFLORUMS, fine plants in 6-inch pots, 15 to 36 inches high, from 5 to 10 buds, at the rate of 10c per bud.

CINERARIAS HYBRIDA. I have an enormous quantity, about 2,000 5½ to 6-inch pots, all shades, $3.00 to $4.00 per doz.

SPIRÆA COMPACTA, 6-in. pots, $3 per doz.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA. Have a house full this year better advanced than ever, 6-inch pots, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00 per doz. 7-inch pots, 75c to $1.00 each.

DAISIES, yellow or white, 6-inch pots, $3.00 per dozen.

BEGONIAS, Pres. Carnot, Metallica and others, 5½ to 6-inch pots, at $3.00 per doz. Begonia Vernon, red, 6-inch, $3.00 per doz. Begonia Vernon, red, 4-inch, $1.50 per doz. Mixed varieties, 4-inch, $1.50 per doz.

HYACINTHS, about 10,000, my own importation, named varieties, best size, all shades, $10.00 per 100.

TULIPS, Tournesol, dbl., red and yellow striped, best Tulip in the market, 3 in a 4-inch pot, $1.50 per doz. pots.

DAFFODILS, Von Sion best dbl., double nosed, 3 in a 5-inch pot, $5.00 per doz. pots (worth $8.00). Cash with order please. All goods shipped at purchaser's risk. Can supply many thousands of references on application.

To save express charges, please state whether to ship in pots or not.

SMOKE-STACKS.

Would 24-inch glazed sewer tiles on a good foundation make a satisfactory smokestack if held together by three 1-inch round rods inside the pipes, an iron band being placed every five feet to hold the iron rods against the pipes? And if so, would it be necessary to have any wire on top? Would there be any danger of crumbling or cracking from heat of boiler?

We are getting tired of putting up a steel stack every year and painting them both inside and out. We would have to have a stack 40 feet high. With 24-inch sewer pipe at $1 per foot and brick at $10 per 1,000, which is the cheaper?

An Idea.

In reply to "An Idea," we have occasionally used salt glazed tile for short length smoke pipes on emergency or low cost work, but would not, for a moment, construct a stack such as your correspondent suggests, as we believe it would be impossible to maintain tight joints and the stability of such a structure is open to serious question. By all means, we will advise the building of a brick chimney; it is, in the end, far the cheaper; its life is indefinite and the draft is increased, which means a better fire with less waste of fuel.

New York. Henry W. Gibbons.

GLASS SURFACE.

Will you please explain in your next issue the proper method of figuring the correct amount of glass in a greenhouse. There seem to be three different ways. One is to give merely the ground surface covered by the house. Another is to add the length of the rafters on each side and multiply by the length of the house. Still another goes farther and adds in the glass on the ends. Which is correct? C. K.

[To be technically correct, the actual glass surface should be computed, and the last method comes the nearest, though to be quite accurate the bead of the sash bar between the lights of glass should be subtracted. But few in the trade take time to bother with such details now and are satisfied to name the amount of ground surface covered by glass, which is certainly more rational and conveys more definite information. In the interest of uniformity and accuracy we suggest that the last named method be generally adopted, and that instead of naming "square feet of glass" we in future say "square feet covered by glass."—Ed.]

THE PRIZE WINNER.

It's fine in September and improves as the season advances. It's a grand Carnation, healthy and free; and we realize we are making a bold assertion when we say—"It is superior in many respects to the famous Lawson." Better speak while there is yet time. Rooted Cuttings, $2 per doz.; $12 per 100; $100 per 1000. We have a nice stock of other varieties ready to go. Also a limited amount of American Beauty, Golden Gate, Ivory and Pearl Roses.

We guarantee quality.

BAKERSTOWN, PA.

The tendency among the large growers to transfer their ranges into the country has been well exemplified by Mr. Fred Burki, who within the past eighteen months has built a modern range of houses in Bakerstown, a station on the P. & W. R. R., within eighteen miles of Pittsburg. A more ideal place for the purpose he could not possibly have chosen. His farm, consisting of 210 acres, 70 of which are timbered, presents all the advantages of high ground, a rich loamy soil, plenty of water, and last but not least, plenty of sunshine, pure air, and no smoke from the Pittsburg iron mills or coke furnaces.

Like all progressive business men, who hold that the best is invariably the cheapest in the end, and prompted by personal experience, Mr. Burki has built a range of six houses that may well rank with the best and most modern structures of the kind to be seen anywhere in the United States. They are divided into two sections, the three carnation houses, each 350x25, being separated from the rose houses by a distance of 300 feet, although the steam pipes lead to both places, supplying the heat from the two great boilers, each 250 horse-power.

The rose houses are but three in number thus far, but their dimensions may give some idea of the quantity of roses that could be grown here. Two of these cover 400x28, and the third one 450x50. Tiled benches, iron frames, iron posts, etc., will about describe the condition of these structures. And this is but the nucleus of what promises to become one of the largest places in the country. Extensive additions will be made during the coming spring and summer, and with the Bellevue range of houses over 100,000 feet of glass—which in the course of another year, or a year and a half, are to be transferred to Bakerstown, a big slice of the farm bids fair to be covered with glass.

A stroll through the houses proved of more than passing interest. Here both carnations and roses thrive as nowhere else in the vicinity of Pittsburg. Among pinks, such varieties as Lawson, Marquis, Higinbotham, Floriana, Nelson, Dorothy and Cressbrook are grown in quantity, and nowhere else in my travels have I seen them better. In scarlets, Estelle takes the lead, with Hector as a close second, though Mrs. Potter Palmer and Apollo do equally well. Hector is now but little known and but few grow it. From the first, however, it adapted itself to Mr. Burki's soil and proved a fine paying variety. Gaiety, Bradt and Stella constitute the only three fancies, and serve the purpose admirably. In white, there is Queen Louise for quantity, Lorna, Alba and White Cloud for both quality and quantity. In whites, Peru and Norway are equally in trim here. It goes without saying that the best varieties of this year's introduction will be given a fair trial.

In roses, Brides, Maids, Perles, Meteors, Cusins and Baldwin are grown to perfection. It may seem too broad an assertion, but I doubt not that anyone, having seen Mr. Burki's roses, can help but substantiate it. Nor has he any less success with American Beauties, which at the time I saw them presented a sight fit for the gods. X.

Be sure to have a strong adv. in our Special Spring Number.

CARNATIONS.

NOVELTIES: THIS YEAR'S INTRODUCTIONS.

MRS. THEODORE ROOSEVELT—A brilliant shade of deep cerise pink, flamed with carmine. Finely formed. Average 3-inch flower on strong, stiff stems. Habit vigorous, early, free. Fragrance, strong clove. Selected, strong, well rooted cuttings now ready. $12 00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

ALPINE GLOW—A deep salmon pink on opening, which finishes a bright Daybreak tint. Good sized bloom, averaging 2¾-inch at this season of the year. Flowers of great substance and a splendid keeper and shipper. An extra vigorous grower; early, profuse and continuous bloomer. Cuttings taken last April produce plants carrying 25 to 30 blooms by the 1st of March. We believe this will prove one of the most profitable of the Daybreak colored carnations. We shall have the following rooted cuttings ready for delivery at the dates specified: March 15th, 25 000; March 21st, 5000; April 5th, 5000. Price $8.00 per 100; $75 00 per 1000. Quantity limited to the above.

LILLIAN POND—2000 selected plants from 2-inch pots, ready for immediate delivery. $10.00 per 100.

THERE IS MONEY IN MUMS

If you have the right varieties. You don't want too many of the very early ones. You want the large, fine blooms of the second earlies. I have watched the market carefully for several years and found that it is there where you make your money in mums—to have the right varieties—those that come in at the right time.

In yellow there is nothing better than MONROVIA and ROBT. HALLIDAY. The first is a few days or a week earlier, but the latter is the best bloom. They are both money-makers when grown right. I also have a white sport of Glory of Pacific. It is a large and better flower than its parent and I have grown it for my own use for three years, and it is the best second early white I know of. The only trouble is that I have not made enough fuss about it or given it a fancy name. I have a large stock of the three above varieties—fine, sturdy, cool-grown stock from 2 and 2½-in. pots, ready to ship. You can get many cuttings from each plant if you buy now and keep propagating. Also a few Appleton, Eaton, Bonnaffon, etc. All at $4.00 per 100. No better stock in the market.

Rooted cuttings of above varieties and Mrs. Murdock, Golden Wedding, White Bonnaffon, Intensity, etc., at $1.50 per 100. Cash with order. Express prepaid on orders of $4.00 and over.

BOBBINK & ATKINS, RUTHERFORD, N. J.

NORFOLK, VA.

Norfolk is a city that seems to have been left out of the news columns of the florist papers. But, nevertheless, there is a number of energetic, wideawake up-to-date florists here, who are striving to educate the people of Norfolk and vicinity to buy flowers and beautify their surroundings.

Messrs. A. J. Newton & Sons have a large establishment comprising upwards of 60,000 feet of glass, devoted to roses, carnations and general stock to supply their large and increasing retail trade.

Lloyd G. Blick reports a brisk demand for cut flowers and plants, and the carnations and roses at his greenhouses reflect great credit on him.

Messrs. Satter, McNaughton & Van de Geer, late with A. J. Newton & Sons, have opened up the Park avenue greenhouses and are getting things in good shape for business. They report good business at their greenhouses; also at the Norfolk market.

A visit to Hugh Aumann's greenhouses showed a fine stock of Easter and spring stock. They report good business at the store and market. H. McN.

NAME WANTED.

I send you a cutting of a plant of low, compact growth which is used quite extensively in cemeteries and parks in this section. Will you give me its name? I consider it much better than Centaurea gymnocarpa as a border.

H. H. C.

Nebraska.

As far as may be judged from the scant and evidently immature leaves of the specimen, the plant may be Gnaphalium lanatum, which was used as a white-leaved plant in bedding years ago, but is now not so frequently seen.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

We are headquarters for Hardy Perennials and can supply all the leading and popular varieties in immense quantities. We offer below a few specialties in this line.

ANEMONE JAPONICA.

35,000 plants in stock. Alba Japonica, Lady Ardilaun, Whirlwind and Queen Charlotte. Field-grown plants. $1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

CAMPANULA PERSICIFOLIA MOERHEIMI.

This beautiful new bell flower is a wonderful advance over previous varieties of this type, its flowers produced during June and July remind one of a double white Cammellia. 2 to 2½ inches in diam., strong plants. 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

CLEMATIS RECTA.

Forms bushy, erect clumps, 2 to 3 ft. high, producing masses of delicate white flowers, most useful for cutting during June and July. An old plant that is rarely seen but worthy of extended cultivation. Two-year-old plants. $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

HEMEROCALLIS "FLORHAM."

To those who are only familiar with the old Day Lily this new variety—a hybrid raised by Mr. Herrington—will be a revelation. Its sweet-scented, golden-yellow flowers are fully five inches across and produced very freely. A plant that should have a place in every garden. 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

JAPANESE IRIS.

(50,000 home-grown roots in stock.) 25 finest named varieties, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000. Choicest Mixed sorts, 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

PERENNIAL PHLOXES.

(75,000 plants in stock.) One of our leading specialties. The plants we offer are field-grown, were divided in fall. They have from 3 to 6 eyes and will make a grand show this summer. 50 leading varieties. 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

STOKESIA CYANEA.

(Cornflower Aster.)

One of the most desirable hardy plants in our collection. A gem in every way. A most useful flower for cutting. Its flowers are not unlike a giant cornflower of a pleasing lavender blue color and produced without intermission from July to October. Strong plants. $1.25 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Business has not been so good the past two weeks. None of the florists are complaining of overwork, but all through December and January everybody was busy. All had plenty of funeral work and other trade was very good. Flowers of all kinds have been very scarce, but are getting more plentiful now.

R. E. Nofftz has been cutting some very fine paper whites, Romans and Von Sion. He has a lot of Dutch hyacinths now in bloom.

F. H. Pasell is bringing in a nice lot of single violets.

A. B. Hathaway is cutting some very fine Lawson.

Everyone that has seen H. A. Jahn's new white seedling says that he has a white pink that is O. K.

The new Horticultural Society had a meeting in Cushing's hall Monday evening, February 16, and elected the following officers: Wm. Keith, president; Peter Murray, vice-president; A. J. Fish, secretary; Geo. Woods, assistant secretary; Wm. F. Turner, treasurer; Dennis Shea, S. J. Donaghy, Peter Murray, H. A. Jahn and James Gattley, executive committee. The society was only started about three weeks ago. It takes in everybody that is interested in the culture of flowers. The society has been given the name of New Bedford Horticultural Society.

W. G. Kroeber, James H. Cleary, E. S. Haskell, E. H. Chamberlin, E. Bliem, H. V. Sowle, Wm. P. Pierce, Wm. L. G. Brown, A. B. Hathaway, R. E. Nofftz, E. Y. Pierce, W. H. Davenport, Geo. H. Borden, Geo. A. Neal, Jr., S. S. Peckham, Elliott C. Sabins and J. S. Peckham have all signed a paper and are about to organize a florists' club, to be known as the New Bedford Florists' Club. It is to be composed of florists only. The object in starting it is to have a club that the florists can call their own, and to get together once in a while for a social time and for the discussion of anything pertaining to the business. COOLING A BOILER.

Never open the fire doors to cool your boiler. Close the ash-pit doors and open the smoke box doors in case you get too much steam, as opening the fire door causes too much contraction by the cold air cooling the furnace. It would be better to allow steam to blow off from the safety valve, which will not in any way injure the boiler.—Popular Mechanics.

DAHLIAS.

We offer a choice lot of Dahlias in varieties suitable for cut flowers as well as the best bedding varieties. Dahlias being one of our specialties, we devote a large acreage of ground to their cultivation.

Show Dahlias.

Arabella—An early and profuse flowering variety, large and perfect form; color, pale primrose shaded with rose and lavender.

Emily Edwards—Blush-tipped lavender.

Eclipse—A fancy standard dahlia; color, bright scarlet.

Dr. J. P. Kirkland—Dark velvety crimson, the largest on our list.

John Walker—Pure white, very free bloomer, grand for cut flowers.

Lucy Faucett—Straw colored, mottled Magenta, large and free bloomer.

Decorative Varieties.

A. W. Tate—Deep yellow, and excellent bedding variety.

Perle De Tete la d'Or—Pure white, tinged purple, long stem, free flowering.

Oban—Rosy lavender, a free bloomer.

Wm. Agnew—Large, scarlet crimson, excellent for bedding or cut flowers.

Pompon Varieties.

Catherine—Yellow, long stems, excellent bedding variety.

Snow Clad—White, good for bedding and cut flowers.

Eleganta—Bright pink, very free bloomer.

Raphael—Deep maroon.

Fern Leaf Beauty — Crimson, striped white.

Mixed Single Dahlias—A choice lot consisting of distinct colors, also striped and blotched varieties, $5.00 per 100.

Mixed Double Dahlias—$6.00 per 100.

All the above stock is strong field-grown roots and cannot be compared with the small cheap roots offered by some growers.

Send your order at once and we will ship when desired.

UTICA, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Utica Florists' Club, which was held at its rooms March 5, was very largely attended and we had a very fine meeting. Three new members were elected and application for another was made for next meeting. Still they come. Our club was never before in such a flourishing condition as at the present time. I think perhaps our drawing card at this meeting was the notice that one of our members, Mr. J. C. Trandt, of Canajoharie, would give us an essay on how to grow that beautiful begonia, Gloire de Lorraine, which he does so well. The subject was so ably handled by Mr. Trandt that it left no room for criticism and a vote of thanks was extended to him for his very interesting paper.

Mr. Harry Mathews brought to the meeting a sport from Mrs. Lawson of that beautiful Daybreak color. It was certainly fine, of as large size and good stem as Lawson, and if it should stay would be a grand addition to the carnations.

It was decided to send an invitation to our Syracuse florists to cross the bat, or ball I should say, in our alleys on March 18. We shall expect a large delegation of well trained Onondagas, but the Oneidas will be on hand. You will hear more about it after the battle is over.

Several rumors are in the air that there will be some building this season, but I am not at liberty to say to whom they refer just yet.

It is all up to President Baker now. He has something new to show us that grew on his place. It arrived March 5, and I believe weighed eight and one-half pounds—a fine boy. It will take only a few bottles of wine to go around, Frank, and don't you care.

The GARLAND IRON GUTTER

What Mr. WILLIAM SCOTT thinks of it after a trial:

BUFFALO, February 2, 1903.

MR. GEO. M. GARLAND, Des Plaines, Ill.

Dear Sir: — The 750 feet of your cast iron gutter has now been in use since last August, so it has had the heat of summer and 14 below zero and incidentally a foot of snow falling in 24 hours.

I am glad to say that the gutters are most satisfactory in every way. After I had ordered them of you last Spring, I was told some alarming things about them, but also heard from most reliable firms of the good points that your gutter possesses. I was told they would drip from condensation of warm air on the cold metal. I have a steam pipe within 18 inches of bottom of gutter and there is absolutely not a drop to be seen. I was told that in the expansion and contraction of length of gutter (mine is 150 feet) there would be a slight parting at the joint. It would take a powerful microscope to discover an opening the fraction of a hair — there is none.

By observation I have proved that a heavy fall of snow will disappear from roofs and gutters at least 48 hours sooner than a wooden gutter, in fact, with the steam pipe as I have it, it vanishes as it falls. There may be other excellent metal gutters, I have not tried them, but I am more than satisfied with yours.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM SCOTT.

"Most Caldwell Towers are painted GREEN, You'll know 'em by the color."

NEED WATER AT ALL TIMES. A

can be depended upon to give it to you. You won't find the contents of the tank half gone because of leaks. The Red Gulf Cypress is the best wood for use in water tanks and we employ no other kind. The towers are built of best mild steel and will safely hold the tank.

TOUGHKENAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902.
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.
Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

Hotbed Sash and Frames

Adapted for Growing Vegetables, Violets, etc.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST.

Our Hotbed Sash are made of Red Gulf Cypress strictly free from sap. They are made in a thorough manner and combine strength with durability. Joints are white leaded and fitted with steel dowel pins. Each sash is furnished with an iron rod running through the sash-bars, tying the sash through the center and supporting the bars. They are glazed with good quality double thick glass and painted two coats. We keep them in stock 3 ft. x 6 ft. Other sizes made to order.

Also carry in stock Cypress Hotbed Frames to hold any number of sash. These are portable so they can be readily taken apart for storage when not in use.

Freight Allowance covers most points in eastern and middle states. Can make Prompt Shipments. Write to our New York Office for price list and circular.

BASKET OF FLOWERS.

The accompanying picture shows a huge basket of flowers, ten feet high, sent to President Roosevelt by Captain Flannagan. The flowers used can be easily identified in the picture. They are largely set in vases ingeniously combined to produce the effect of a basket and by this means were kept fresh for a considerable length of time. There were 100 each of Beauties, Brides, Maids and Liberties, 500 Roosevelt carnations, 200 Kaiserin and 600 valley. Twenty yards of wide ribbon were used in the sash.

ROSE NOTES.

Meteor.

From the time a Meteor cutting is put in the sand, during its life in pots, and after it is benched up until the very time of throwing it out at replanting time, the method of treatment to be a success is very different from that of any other rose under commercial greenhouse culture in this country. And being so, it will pay the student to investigate this difference and find out the reasons for it.

There are many good growers of Maid, Bride and other roses who, year after year, make a failure of Meteor, simply because they cannot convince themselves that what is good for one class of roses may be detrimental to another. This is particularly the case with their treatment of Meteor in regard to temperature and the quantity of water required by it, which is much in excess of that required by any other rose.

Meteor cuttings should be made from the most robust of half-ripened blind wood, and should have at least three eyes; two with fully developed leaves attached and one from which the leaf is removed at the heel of the cutting, to be inserted in the sand. They require a few degrees more of bottom heat than most other roses. Keeping the sand steadily at 65 degrees the roots will form in and be in condition for potting in about twenty-four or twenty-six days.

As the roots make an exceedingly rapid growth, potting must not be delayed, else it will be difficult to get them into a 2-inch pot uninjured. During the time they are in the sand they require to be syringed liberally and frequently, because of the higher temperature. After potting the same conditions still exist, because of the very vigorous root action for which they are noted while in a young state. The young stock should be placed in a house of 60 or 62 degrees, as this keeps them growing vigorously, a condition which should be kept up during their entire lifetime.

By reason of the higher temperature maintained this variety is particularly subject to insect pests, the most persistent of which is red spider. To keep these in subjection syringing must be practiced daily. To allow the young stock to become pot-bound is courting failure, as it takes a long time to recover from this check, and if the check is serious I question very much if they ever fully recover and attain that free and vigorous growth so characteristic of a well-handled plant.

To have good-sized, thrifty plants for fall blooming, planting should be done early, as this gives them the benefit of the best growing months—May and June. As they require copious supplies of water during the growing season, and indeed all the season through, the benches should be provided with ample drainage. If the bottom of the bench is of wood, the slats should never be more than 6 inches wide—in fact, 4 inches is better, with spaces three-quarters of an inch between. Being a gross feeder, they can use a richer compost than Brides or Bridesmaids and luxuriate in a soil with a generous supply of bone flour added.

At planting time a little depression should be left around the ball of each plant to facilitate watering. These depressions should be filled individually with water at least once a day, and during very bright weather twice. Syringing should be done every morning, and on bright days again in the afternoon about 2 o'clock. This will give them ample time to have the foliage dry by sundown. In two weeks the soil should be ruffled and the surface made even and level. Overhead watering should now be commenced; that is, the whole of the soil in the bench can be made evenly moist, and as the days get longer and hotter, that can be done almost to the point of saturation.

A Huge Basket of Flowers. Arranged by Alexander McConnell, New York.

Once each week the soil should be allowed to become moderately dry, so that it can be cultivated without clogging, and this is one of the most essential points to success—persistent cultivation. No other duty should be allowed to cause any neglect in this.

The temperature during the growing season should be 68 or 70 degrees, but always with a fair amount of ventilation; during bright weather 80 or 82 degrees is none too high during the day. During dull, cloudy weather, both night and day temperature can be reduced 5 to 8 degrees with advantage.

As the syringe has to be applied with a good deal of force, staking and tying should be strictly attended to, so that the stems and foliage may maintain their upright position.

It is obvious, from a study of these conditions, that this variety cannot be grown with any reasonable success along with any other variety, but should have a house entirely to itself, the heat and moisture required being almost fatal to any other rose.

By the month of September, when the real blooming season begins, the night temperature should be set at 68 degrees and kept steadily at that point during the rest of the season, with a day temperature approaching 80 degrees, according to weather. Some growers prefer a night temperature of 70 degrees. Having tried both, for general health of the plant, quality of flower, stem and foliage, I prefer the lower temperature.

A word of advice to the smaller growers: If you wish success with Meteor, it is better to partition off a part of a house and put in an extra line of piping than to attempt to grow a bunch of them in a mixed house, as by this latter method there can be little profit and no pleasure. Ribes.

PROPAGATING H. P. ROSES.

Please tell me the most usual way of propagating hybrid perpetual roses—preparing stock plants, time to start cuttings, where, how—in short the whole story. Beginner.

The first question propounded by this inquirer is an easily answered one, but on reading his concise and condensed interrogations it fairly "took the wind out of me." "The whole story" would require a bigger book than I can ever hope to live long enough to write.

The most usual way of propagating H. P. roses (I presume they are for outdoor culture) is to use half ripened wood, which can be cut any time during the summer after the plants have been in bloom. In dry seasons this happens sometimes late in June, in moist seasons in July.

Construct a hotbed from stable manure which has been turned over two or three times to get rid of the most intense heat. The aspect of this bed should be to the north. Put in 18 inches of the manure and tread it down firmly. Leave it to ferment for a few days and when the temperature falls to 80 degrees put 4 or 5 inches of loamy soil on the manure. As soon as the soil has become of the proper temperature (which should be 68 or 70 degrees) put on 3 inches of clean sand. The bed is now ready for the cuttings. The cuttings, should have at the least three eyes, two above the sand with fully developed leaves on, and one below the surface from which the leaf has been removed. Insert these in the sand to the depth of at least one and a half inches. Cover with a glass filled sash and keep the sand as moist and cool as possible by shading with matting and giving only ventilation sufficient to let superfluous moisture escape. Give more ventilation during the night than during the day.

In about 28 days they will have formed roots large enough to require potting. Pot into 2-inch standard pots and place in a cool frame, watering and shading carefully until the roots begin to work, gradually increasing the amount of ventilation so that in three weeks they can stand fully exposed. This young stock should have the protection of a cold frame during the winter and be planted out in the following April.

There are many other methods of propagating H. P. roses, such as by cuttings from dormant wood, by budding, by grafting, by suckers, etc., which would require too much space to fully describe.

Wm. Scott, in his Florists' Manual, has devoted quite a little space to this very subject and I would advise "Beginner" to secure a copy of this valuable work, as no beginner can afford to be without it. Ribes.

ROSE SOILS.

I send you samples of four different kinds of soil. Which is the best for roses? No fertilizer has been added to any of the samples. J. R. E.

Sample No. 1, or "gumbo" soil, while containing many of the elements necessary for rose culture, has too large a percentage of clay. I may also say that all the elements are reduced to such fine particles that it is altogether too solid for this purpose.

No. 2. This soil, if taken as the top spit six inches deep from old pasture land, and composted in the proportion of four of soil to one of well decomposed cow manure, and thoroughly incorporated with a sprinkling of bone flour added at planting time, would be capable of producing good roses. I have used worse with success.

No. 3. Ordinary prairie soil. Largely used in Illinois with success.

No. 4. Percentage of clay far too high. Ribes.

ROSE HOUSES.

Will you give us a little advice about building a block of rose houses? We are obliged to run them southeast and northwest, and don't know whether to build even span or short span to south. If houses 22 feet wide, how high should ridge and gutter be? A word as to width and general proportions would be acceptable. I. B. L.

Cal.

For rose houses which must be built with this aspect an even span or nearly even span—that is, a combination between an even and a three-quarter span—would be the most suitable. For such a house, if designed for growing Brides, Maids, or roses of such like habit, the gutter should be six feet from the floor and with the pitch of south roof of an angle of 32 degrees the ridge-pole will be something like 13 feet from the floor.

This width of a house is rather awkward to divide economically without having the benches either too narrow or too wide. The house should have for convenient working four walks of 20 or 22 inches wide. A house of 22 feet 8 inches would have room for four benches of 4 feet wide each. The bench at the north part of the house would be close up to the posts supporting the gutter. One side can be worked from the south path of adjoining house.

By making the width of the house 25 feet 4 inches, the benches can be made 4½ feet each and the walks 22 inches, which is a good practical width for each. The ventilator sash should be 3 feet in depth, not continuous, but broken every 6 or 8 feet to prevent jamming from the expansion of the wood during damp weather. These should be placed on the north side of the house.

A house much favored by growers the past two seasons is the "short-roofed" pattern. These houses have the short span to the south, are 13 feet 8 inches in width, and contain two walks and two benches each. The gutters are from 7 to 9 feet high, according to the variety of crop to be planted. From what I have seen of them they seem to fill the bill. Next season I shall be able to speak from experience, as this is the design adopted for the block we are to erect this season. Ribes.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

As the sun gets stronger your plants will need more water and nourishment, and if you want to keep up your quality into the hot summer days you will have to look after your plants closely now. A mulch of well rotted manure will not only be food for the plants but it will also prevent evaporation, which is just as important in bright weather. There are over three months of good business in this season yet, and during the latter part of these three months the plants will have their hardest struggle to keep up to the top notch in quality, so you must train them for the ordeal beforehand. Most of the varieties are throwing up a crop of buds now that will be in bloom during April and May and it will take more nourishment to enable the plant to produce all large, perfect blooms than it did when only two or three blooms were produced each month and when the bloom took at least twice as long to grow and develop.

Look after the disbudding closely now, as the side shoots come faster than ever. You are through making cuttings and instead of taking out the side shoots down to the first good cutting you should take off these, too, as far down as where you will cut the stems later on. All these things will help the bloom. See that the shoots stand up straight so the stems will be straight.

The Lawson and a few others will want a light shade to keep the color good, but only put on just enough to break the sun's rays a little. You don't want to soften the growth by it, so be careful.

By the way, if you intend growing any of your carnations inside all summer you should begin to handle them accordingly. We find Mrs. Lawson does best with us inside all summer. We are shifting them into fours now, and by June 1st we expect to have them planted in the bed, nice bushy plants with a good start. We get longer stems and a continuous crop from October until the next July and all high grade blooms. Pot about one-fourth more than you want to plant; you will need them. It is said that plants that are grown in the field during summer will produce more blooms than those grown inside, and perhaps it is true in a small way, but I don't think those plants will bring you any more nor even as much money in the season. They will produce heavy crops of blooms when they are in crop, but they will not produce right along like the inside grown plants will and the quality will also vary just as much.

If you have a bench or bed that you can spare now, I would advise you to plant the young plants right where they are to remain; it will pay you well. They will have a good hold on the soil when the hot weather strikes you and you will lose less of them during the summer. The same holds good with any variety you may wish to grow inside. We used to grow Jubilee inside altogether and the best we ever had were a bench that was planted about April 1st. Mrs. Bradt also always did best grown inside with us.

A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Shading.

Different styles of houses require different methods and times of shading, also the latitude and surroundings have to be taken into consideration, and last, but not least, some varieties need it sooner than others.

The practice of shading is, of course, unnatural, or perhaps it is better to say it is a violation of the laws of nature in so far as excluding light is concerned, but carnation growers are looked to for a supply of blooms in and out of season; and it is for their interest to furnish as good quality as possible, so then we must resort to shading for the double purpose of keeping the temperature down and to prevent fading the color of the blooms.

We always delay shading as long as possible, especially if it is to be of a permanent nature, for should a cloudy spell come on, a soft growth is produced. Many experiments have been tried, with the result that we now use a combination of cheap, open cheese cloth, whiting mixed with weak soap water and naphtha mixed with lead.

The cheese cloth is employed early in the spring to shade varieties of delicate color and put up in such a way that it can be easily removed during a stormy or cloudy period. Whiting and soap water, the soap being added to make the wash adhere more readily, is put on the inside with a brush. Naphtha and lead is used last on the outside and applied either with a brush or syringe.

Our plan is to arrange varieties so that when using cheese cloth it can be suspended high over the middle benches, where, of course, we have placed those varieties most liable to fade. By this method the strong light is greatly tempered during the midday hours.

Later the whiting wash is applied thinly on the lower lights of glass, covering perhaps one-half of each light at the first time going over. Whiting has the advantage of being easily removed and being put on the inside one can judge better what he is doing as he proceeds.

When the sun gets very strong, the cloth is taken down, the whiting removed and the whole outside is treated with naphtha and lead and what returns come in after that is almost all velvet. The one thing to observe above all in shading is not to overdo it. Do not put it off too long, but proceed with caution. The above applies to even span houses running north and south. With houses running east and west it is obvious that the plan will have to be modified somewhat.

Summer Bloom Outside.

Speaking about cheese cloth brings to my mind that I promised to give you my plan for growing a supply of blooms for summer.

I trust you have kept your plants topped as occasion demanded and that they are now in 3½ or 4-inch pots. As soon as safe to plant out prepare a bed about four feet wide, or two beds three feet wide, and as long as will accommodate the number of plants you desire to experiment with as follows:

After the plants are well established set a row of light posts about six feet apart on each side of the bed or beds, calculating for a path or paths, posts to be six or seven feet above ground when set. Another row of posts might be set same distance apart through center of space eight or nine feet above ground level. Stout galvanized wire run along each line of posts stapled on top of each forms the frame work of a cheese cloth covered house.

This can be modified in many ways, but my idea is to adopt the method now used extensively in this state for the growing of tobacco. Many vegetables and flowering plants have been tried under these so-called tents with great success.

Grasshoppers, bees and other insects can be completely shut out, and from what I have seen in the tobacco growing district, where other plants were tried, I believe the plan worth trying. The tobacco tents are, of course, flat on the top, but my plan is to make the shape correspond to an even span house.

Geo. S. Osborn.

CYCLAMEN.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a bench of cyclamen, grown by Arthur E. Chilman, gardener for F. S. Moseley, Esq., Newburyport, Mass. Regarding his methods of culture, Mr. Chilman says:

"We sowed our cyclamen about the middle of September in soil the same as we used for primulas and in a temperature of 55 degrees at night. As soon as large enough they were pricked off into flats in practically all leaf soil and allowed to remain until February in the same temperature. They make sturdy little plants if given plenty of light and kept moist, and come away from the flats with a little bulb as large as a marble and nicely rooted. We pot off singly into small pots and grow on in a temperature of 60 degrees at night until the season is far enough advanced and we have a cold frame vacant. There they are grown all summer, plunged in ashes and lightly sprayed with clear water two or three times a day, shaded with cheese cloth tacked on laths.

"Each plant is repotted as needed, giving just a small shift each time, with more loam added to the soil at each potting, until they reach their final potting in a good rose soil. They did well so treated until up to August 8, when we were visited by the most severe hail storm I have ever seen. The morning had been dull, so the shading had been taken from the cyclamen. The storm came over quite suddenly, and by the time the ventilators of the houses were all closed the poor cyclamen got a battering that I thought they would have been better without. When I first saw them after it my heart went down to where I usually keep my rubbers. However, the most of them recovered all right.

"Some of our plants we carried over from last year. They were planted out in the kitchen garden in June in the full sun, where they gradually went to rest. When they began to throw up their leaves we lifted them and potted them in good soil and grew them with the others in their present quarters and in a night temperature of 55 degrees. We fumigate about once every two weeks. Some of the plants were doing a turn in Boston for Christmas, and today, March 3, are carrying from seventy to one hundred and six fully expanded flowers in 8-inch pots."

DISEASED CARNATIONS.

We send a Flora Hill carnation plant taken from a bench of about 1,000 in similar condition. These plants were grown in the field and were in fine shape when taken into the house. They did finely up to the holidays, at which time they commenced to make some brown or dead foliage at the base of the plant, and this kept on until the plants died or dried up one after the other, until the whole lot was dead. Can you tell us the cause of the trouble? The temperature was about 50 degrees at night and 65 during the day. Other varieties in the house are in fine condition.

G. F. Co.

The plant you sent me of Flora Hill was quite dry and I was unable to see what was wrong except that it was dead. I would like to see some of the plants before they are quite dead in order to form an opinion of what was killing them. I do not know of a disease that acts just the way you say your plants were affected. I have seen plants of Armazindy and its sports dry up in a similar manner here and there, but never F. Hill. I have always thought that it came from a weakened constitution and that these varieties had a tendency to act that way.

If your plants did finely up to the holidays, I take it for granted that they were housed at the proper time and that they were well established on the benches, but if they were housed very late and planted in poor soil they would likely go off in the manner you describe. When I first looked at the plant, before I had your letter, I remarked that the latter had likely been the case and that the plants had never taken hold of the new soil, but your letter knocked that theory. F. Hill does not dry its leaves any more than most varieties while growing.

As the other varieties in the same house are not affected, I guess it is not caused by a disease, but rather by improper treatment in one way or another. I found some rust and some bacteria, both denoting a weakened constitution, the former very seldom appearing on this variety when in robust health.

A. F. J. Baur.

VENTILATION.

In building a lean-to 15 ft. wide, facing the south, to be used for carnations, would one continuous line of ventilators at the top be sufficient, and should they be hinged at the bottom or the top?

As the ventilators cannot be put within a foot or so of the top, because of the wall on which the sash rests, how can I keep the roof from leaking under the sash?

Subscriber.

In addition to the ventilation at the top of your lean-to you should provide for ventilators in the side wall, which will allow the heat to pass away from the lower side of the house. This will be far better than to try to set ventilators into the middle of the roof.

If I were building that house and had your difficulties to overcome I think I would find a way out, as I would know just what was wanted, but I have not seen your house and I cannot tell you how to proceed. Without a drawing or a good description of the construction of the house, etc., one cannot be sure what is wanted.

I would not put a continuous line of ventilators on a house of mine. Better leave one row of glass between each ventilator. After a few years there is bound to be more or less unevenness in the roof, and there is where your trouble commences. This will also allow you to run the water from above down between the ventilators.

A. F. J. Baur.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Trees and Shrubs.

Never in our recollection have we moved shrubs so early as the 16th of March, but the frost is gone, the ground dry, and there is no occasion, if you have that work to do, why you should delay a single day, as our spring season for outdoor work is all too short, and many seasons winter lingers until past the month of April, and then two weeks of warm weather and deciduous trees and shrubs are out in leaf. So we must have a longer season this year, and if we do have a return of winter for a few days it will do no injury to these hardy shrubs.

If you handle shrubs, or have an acre or two on your own place, it is well not to prune them until your customers have seen them planted, or they may think they are getting very little for their money; but insist on pruning them as soon as they are planted, no matter what kind they are. It is their salvation and the making of a future well shaped shrub, yet it is strange how difficult it is to convince some of your patrons of the benefits of this.

As above said, all trees and shrubs should be pruned when transplanted, but those established should not all be pruned in the early spring or late winter, or you will lose the pleasure of the blooms for that season. To begin with, how few of our deciduous trees—the elm, the maple, the oak, and others—are improved by any pruning at all. If crowding, or giving too much shade, or hanging their branches too near a sidewalk, you must occasionally use the saw and knife, but with room to grow I know of none of our fine trees that can be improved in form or beauty by any pruning that we can give them. I have before now quoted the sensible man, who, when asked the best time to prune trees, replied, "When your knife is sharp." There are, however, two seasons when it is better done if necessary. One is now, or late winter, and the other is July or August after the season's growth is made.

In Europe the term "evergreen trees and shrubs" is applied to what our nurserymen here call the broad leaved evergreens. There are so few that are hardy with us that it is scarcely worth while to mention them. The Mahonia aquifolia is one, and the late frosts of spring, followed by a bright, sunny day, terribly burns its glossy leaves. The ericaceous shrubs, the kalmia and rhododendron are broad leaved evergreens, and in the Southern states they may have flourishing the common laurel, the arbutus, tree box, aucuba, sweet bay, thylleria, golden euonymus, and many others, most of which are now only a memory with me.

The rhododendron and kalmia most assuredly should not be touched until they have flowered or you would cut off the flowers, and that is the case with our hardy deciduous azaleas. If any of the beautiful flowering shrubs need pruning, leave it until after they have flowered, but removing the old, withered flowers is about all the attention they ever need. Don't transplant broad leaved evergreens until the first of May.

Now we come to what are generally known in this country as evergreens, which are our familiar Norway spruce, Austrian pine, the beautiful retinospora, and all that large class known as conifers or cone bearing. Nurserymen's peddlers will take orders for these and deliver them along with the apple trees and raspberry bushes. It is all wrong and the cause of many dying, even if they had good roots. In our latitude early May is plenty early enough. In fact, no given week in the year is so good a rule as the time when they are just starting to grow. If you can transplant at that particular time you will stand a good chance of being successful. Still worse is it to receive these trees in October and November. That is almost sure death. From the middle of August to middle of September evergreens can be transplanted, but the month of May is the ideal season.

Few of the evergreens can be improved by the knife or shears, unless they are planted as a hedge. Yet occasionally it is desirable to prune back the branches of a Norway or hemlock spruce to make them more dense or compact, and July or August is a good time to do it. If, however, you should be late in transplanting any of these evergreens, and they have made an inch or so of young growth and show signs of wilting, don't be in the least afraid to shorten back every leading growth. It has saved the life of many a one.

The long list of our hardy deciduous flowering shrubs is perhaps the most familiar and useful for our Northern gardens, and they are surely the easiest to transplant and handle. I once thought that the absence of aucubas, laurels and other broad leaved evergreens from the little plots of ground surrounding the detached residences of our cities, as well as the more pretentious gardens and parks, would be most deplorable. Nowadays I think quite differently. We have in our gardens, avenues and parks just what suits the climate and our mode of life in these semi-hibernating winters, and the exquisite pleasure realized from the first blossoms of the forsythia and Japan quince more than compensates for the absence of the somber shrubs that grow and thrive in "evergreen winters."

I started off this article by saying that you should transplant deciduous shrubs at once, and you can keep at it until the leaves are fairly well expanded if well pruned. Many of us will be called in to do the spring pruning of the shrubberies of our patrons, and most all these shrubs, unlike our trees and evergreens, are greatly improved by some amount of pruning and thinning out every year, and the operation is quite different on different shrubs. I cannot afford space to give you a long list of what should be pruned now, or before they send out their leaf buds, and a lot of others that should be left entirely alone and pruned only after they are through flowering.

There are two distinct classes. In the first class, or those that should be pruned now, are the altheas, hydrangeas, hybrid perpetual roses; in fact, all those that make a growth and a terminal flower. In the class that should not be pruned until after the flower is gone are cydonia, forsythia, staphylea, lilac, etc. You can easily reason out that a shrub like the lilac, that sets its flower buds the previous fall, is ready to open its blossoms in the genial, warm days of May or June, and if you prune it now you will cut off the flower buds; while a shrub like the Hydrangea P. G. should be severely cut back, for then it will break strong and make a vigorous growth, crowned later in the season with a fine panicle of flowers.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

SOME HINTS ON PEONIES.

These flowers have come to stay and are being constantly reinforced by new varieties, so that interest will increase instead of diminish. Four points are to be observed in selecting a first-class flower:

First. Symmetrical and beautiful form. We want no defects here. We must have supreme excellence on this line, and many of our favorites score well on this point and can stand beside the rose without blushing.

Second. The flower should be fragrant. Without this there is something lacking. They vary essentially in the nature and quantity of their perfume. The glorious Humei is cinnamon scented. Some have the odor of heliotrope. Others have the perfume of the rose in greater or less degree.

Third. Readiness of propagation. I want a peony which I can push and get at least 1,000 from one in ten years, and I am now testing different varieties on this point. Some of the beautiful flowers are so slow in propagating that I have no patience to bother with them. J. Discaisne, for instance, is a glorious flower of ermine and gold, but it scores only two points out of the four. It is the tardiest and most reluctant flower to propagate on the whole list. It is a shy bloomer also. General Custer, one of Father Terry's productions, is almost a perfect pattern of it in beauty, and I think in fragrance, and is very vigorous and multiplies rapidly. It is one of the latest of the white and gold varieties, and I think fills all the requirements.

Fourth. Ready bloomers. Some people ask, "Why don't my peonies bloom? I have had them year after year and they won't blossom." Well, they are not built that way. They are shy bloomers with me. Edulis Superba is rather slow about blooming, while others bloom on the least provocation. Some flowers score up on all these points, in fact, quite a number.

Baroness Schroder fills the bill, but there is such a demand you cannot buy them. Even Kelway is out of them. I got one root four years ago at $2 and last fall sold seventeen at the same price. Had about as many to carry over. Canary Plume, a new sort, scores up well as a ready multiplier and ready bloomer. One merit it has is that it is early in flowering, coming on for Decoration Day in most northern states.

I suppose the finest flower in the whole family is Lady Alexander Duff. This fills all the requirements, but it is scarce and costs $5 a root at wholesale in England. There are others of great merit and it is interesting to watch them, get acquainted with them, find out the treatment best adapted and all their peculiarities. Herewith are four fine flowers: Richardson's Rubra Superba is a magnificent bloomer, one of the latest, a deep crimson. The flowers keep for weeks in cold storage. By forcing and retarding in cold storage, we can have these flowers four months out of the year.

VALLEY AND ROMAN HYACINTHS.

Will you give in your notes in the REVIEW at some future date how to handle lily of the valley and Roman hyacinths in a climate where the outside night temperature is about 40 to 45 degrees and the day 65 to 78 degrees? The flowers would have to be sheltered from the rains and dews. I have a call for these very often, but have never grown any bulbs except Lilium Harrisii, which grow to perfection anywhere they can get water. H. V. B.

Florida.

It is my opinion, though it may be erroneous, that up to the middle of February the roots and bulbs of both the above would want just the same treatment as we give them in the north; that is, the hyacinths in flats or pans out of doors covered with a few inches of earth or tanbark, and the valley stored away in boxes out of doors, but sheltered from the rains. As you are doubtless aware, the Roman hyacinth is the simplest of bulbs to force. After Christmas it grows and sends up its spike freely in a night temperature of 55 degrees. In January and February I think the valley roots would want just as much forcing to get them in flower as we need here, and that method has often been described in the pages of the Review. By the end of March we have to put the valley roots into cold storage if we want them to flower through the summer months, for they should not be the least bit started when put away. Now, I would think that the middle of February would be late enough in Florida to begin to arrest growth.

It is my misfortune that I have never been in the land of alligators, cocoanuts and oranges, but hope to go there some day. It is the land of flowers. Perhaps the winters are too warm for the beautiful lily of the valley. The hyacinth once planted should, I think, become almost a weed. It has just occurred to me that possibly H. V. B. has no glass and his inquiry refers only to cultivation out of doors. Then, all you can do is to have these flowers in their season, and I don't know when that would be.

Rain storms often spoil a fine bed of valley out of doors with us at the end of May, but that is easily prevented. Get some cheese cloth and give it a heavy coat of linseed oil and stretch that over the bed, tipping it in some direction to throw off the rain.

William Scott.

VIOLETS.

When is the proper time to propagate the double violet for greenhouse culture and how is it done? Also, how should young plants be treated during summer, and when is proper time to bench? V. A. W.

In answer to V. A. W.'s questions above would say first in regard to the "proper time," that it is nearly past and he will need to "hustle," as plants propagated late in the season lack in vigor and stockiness in comparison with those taken earlier in the season. If he has made no previous notes as to his best plants to take his stock from, he will have to do the best he can now, taking care to take cuttings only from thrifty, healthy plants, furnishing long-stemmed, double, dark-colored flowers. He should select only the stocky, firm, short-jointed runners, trimming off any roots that may have already started, and then place in sand in the propagating bed. They should have plenty of fresh, cool air and no bottom heat.

As soon as they have nicely struck roots they should be pricked out in flats, when they will require a shading for a few days from the sun until they have taken hold of the soil. Be sure to give plenty of air and light until the ground is fit to work out of doors, and you can then plant them out.

After planting out in the ground they should be frequently cultivated with the hand cultivator and kept free from weeds, and it will also be necessary to go over them with care every few days, cutting off the runners and picking off the dead leaves, etc., for in order to have good violets one must keep them always clean and growing.

They should be lifted in the fall as soon as it gets cool and the soil is in good shape for such work. If you can plan to do this when you are going to have several cool, cloudy days so much the better, and you will need to shade the house for awhile anyway. Give them a thorough soaking as soon as benched, then only keep the air moist and cool for a few days until they again take hold.

These directions are necessarily brief, as V. A. W.'s questions really cover a whole treatise on growing and would necessitate more room than "ye editor" would wish to spare in any one issue of the Review, but I have tried to touch the main points. However, if I have not made all clear I am ready to be further interrogated and will answer to the best of my ability.

I might add that violets on benches are with us always a failure in comparison with those grown in solid borders, and if you are so situated that you can grow them in the border I would advise you to do so by all means. If you do this, only plant out your surplus stock outdoors, planting your house as soon as you can get it in shape, and the young plants are nicely established and growing in the flats. Of course the house will have to be heavily shaded during the summer and given all the ventilation possible, and the violets will need the same care and cultivation that they would have in the field. You gain in several ways doing this; it is a saving of time in the fall for one thing, and they do not receive any check to their growth, not having to be moved, etc. There will naturally be some plants that fail, and whenever this occurs lift from the field stock and fill in at once.

American Institute Show.

If the schedule of the American Institute rose show had been published earlier, and some of the exhibits had not been sidetracked, there would have been a much more extensive report to make of this usually interesting spring exhibition. The entries for exhibits of roses from Henry Hentz, Jr., and Benjamin Dorrance were canceled at the last moment, but nevertheless a fairly creditable show drew the usual interested critics from the ranks of the six hundred. The gardening contingent from within fifty miles of the city were gathered in large numbers, and some interesting occurrences might be reported as to their conferences, did space permit. Hale's new seedling cypripedium and Bretanzel's new seedling rose both received certificates of merit. Siebrecht & Son's palm and blooming plant collections were very much required and appreciated, and the orchid exhibit of Lager & Hurrell was, as usual, most creditable. The judges were Frank Moore, William Turner and Mrs. Tanner.

The orchid exhibit consisted of forty-five varieties, among them a "Trichopilea" from Costa Rica, a beautiful variety, that has only been in the hands of this firm for a few months, and of which they have a nice stock. R. Allen received a cultural certificate for cinerarias; John N. May for "Bride" carnation; W. C. Russell, for new deep crimson carnation, "Daheim," and George Hale, for Primula obconica. Special prizes were awarded Dailledouze Bros. and C. F. Bretanzel for carnation exhibits.

In the rose classes Geo. H. Hale won firsts on Maid, Kaiserin and Carnot for single blooms; Howard Nichols for Meteor, Bride, Gontier and Balduin (Helen Gould); Peter Duff on Beauty, Golden Gate, Mrs. Ames and Testout; W. C. Russell on Morgan; F. Bretanzel on Perle. The Briar Cliff Greenhouses won the $50 prize for 50 blooms of American Beauty. Lager & Hurrell were first for display of orchids. C. H. Allen was first for five varieties of carnations and W. C. Russell for three varieties. G. T. Schuneman won first for double violets and Geo. H. Hale for singles. There was an interesting competition in the classes open to private gardeners and amateurs only.

Notes.

St. Patrick's Day caused a "flurry" and stiffened up prices a little. There was quite a demand for violets, and a fairly encouraging outlook for the week aided by the colder weather. Several dinners were on the list for the evening, and notwithstanding the cloudy weather the sun was shining rather more brightly for the retailers than for a week back. Shamrocks were much in evidence and green tassels quite the thing for violet dressing.

Mackintosh had the decoration for Deputy Chamberlain Campbell and violets and shamrocks made the tables appropriate for a "saintly" celebration. Bougainvilleas and Crimson Ramblers are the Easter specialties of this ambitious establishment.

A funeral order of $600 including a pall of violets and a grand wreath of the same, with many other designs and bunches, kept the whole force at Alex. McConnell's busy all night on Monday.

David Foulis, who has been superintendent of the landscape department of Mr. McConnell's business for some years, died of pneumonia Monday, aged 70. Mr. Foulis was one of the oldest florists in the city and a man of fine literary ability and sterling integrity. He was born in Scotland and came to this country in the early sixties, forming a partnership with Mr. Beattie in 1867 and opening a retail store at Twenty-first and Broadway. Some time after he started a store on Broadway between Forty-second and Forty-third streets, which he continued for many years, giving up retailing for landscape work, in which he excelled. Notwithstanding his age he was vigorous and efficient, and his sudden taking away was unexpected. He commenced his work in this country as gardener for the Hoyt estate at Astoria, was very fond of his national sport, curling, and a member of the Caledonian club. His last work was the superintendency of the construction of the sunken gardens at Lakewood, N. J. Mr. McConnell speaks very highly of his ability and character.

Many of the wholesale stores are handling blooming plants this year, and the wholesale cut flower region, which includes Twenty-sixth to Thirtieth streets, begins to look like a garden. Some splendid windows have already developed and before the end of the week very few of the wholesale houses will be without their "plant department."

The department stores are arranging for special decorations this Easter, and the purchases of blooming plants for these places has been enormous, both in Brooklyn and New York. As usual, with the exception of the few which maintain conservatories, the stock sent out will be cheap in every respect before it reaches the homes of customers.

Grippe is almost epidemic in the city. Few of the prominent members of the trade have escaped. Geo. Saltford has had a few rounds with the enemy, and after a three days' effort managed to overcome it.

Entrance to the Grounds of the Wagner Park Conservatories, Sidney, Ohio.

Young Mr. Sanders, of St. Louis, has returned to the World's Fair city more than pleased with his experiences under the guidance of his New York employers, Messrs. J. H. Small & Sons, and with their esteem and appreciation to reward him for faithful service.

This week opened with raw, cold, rainy weather, after many days of summer temperature and sunshine. In fact, the universal opinion was that spring had actually come to stay. It is so easy to forget blizzards and hear robins when the temperature is 70 degrees and overcoats are a burden.

The shops are all ablaze with Easter bloom. The demand for flowering plants this year is enormous. Bobbink & Atkins, Schultheis, Dressel, Dreyer, Keller, Roehrs, Scott and a host of others have grand displays of azaleas, lilac, Ramblers, hyacinths, heather, Bougainvillea, acacias and every popular flower in quantity and quality never before equaled. It will be the plant Easter of all the years.

Branch stores will be more numerous than ever and the strenuous weeks of Lent bid fair to be atoned for.

The grippe microbe continues its nefarious work among the trade, the last victim being Alexander J. Guttman, who just recovered from a severe bronchial attack, which kept him away from business the first time this season.

A. J. Fellouris, whose fourteen years' experience entitles him to the respect and good will of every florist in the east, has made great preparations for his Easter trade and has an enormous stock of galax and fancy ferns in anticipation of the increased demand. This firm has lately added a cut flower department to their business and are quite satisfied and hopeful, and will doubtless make this venture permanent.

It is rumored that the record bowling score made by J. K. Allen in the tournament a couple of weeks ago amounted to 280, but earnest inquiry does not furnish confirmation.

John, with Stumpp, of Fifth avenue, had an encounter last week with an automobile, and not only did his horse and wagon suffer, but his broken leg was added to the casuality.

McNeice has removed from West Twenty-seventh street to 359 Fifth avenue, where a retail business will be conducted.

The auction sales are now in full blast, the attendance encouraging and prices have been quite satisfactory. The usual hardy stock is offered and the demand seems to be not only early, but general.

On Saturday last the street venders of nursery stock were out in full force and so springlike was the weather that the commuters were loading up and carrying home roses, shrubs and bulbs enough to indicate the arrival of spring.

Messrs. Hagemann and Ward are both home from extensive trips to every part of the country and are quite enthusiastic as to the volume of business accomplished, and the prospects for the year. Mr. Ralph M. Ward, the eastern representative of Hagemann & Co, is also at home.

Mr. C. W. Meyer has returned from a prolonged visit to his western customers and he expresses entire satisfaction with the results of this, his first extended journey among his patrons. This new house starts the year under the most favorable conditions, and both Mr. Meyer and Mr. Schwake have enthusiastic comments to make on the general welcome they have received from the trade.

An effort is being made by the New York Market Association to locate a new market for the coming season where larger space and facilities may be assured.

The Tree Planting Association of New York has been doing a good work in this city and the result of its labors during the past year has greatly encouraged them. Nearly all the trees set out—over 8,000 altogether—since this organization began, are in a thrifty condition and arrangements are being made for the further beautifying of the city to a much greater extent than in the past.

The special spring number of the Review has awakened universal interest. That it may be as promised—the finest issue of your paper ever sent out to its 10,000 patrons—is confidently anticipated.

J. Austin Shaw.

BOSTON.

Lack of sunshine has kept flowers scarce enough to keep the market well cleared up at fairly good prices.

The trade exhibition was the event of the week and even more of a success than usual. Its objects were well attained and attendance proved that its value is well appreciated. The ground of the printed schedule was thoroughly covered, except in the field of roses, where the only entry was a vase or two of W. H. Elliott's American Beauties, from New Hampshire.

Daniel Iliffe was on hand with a good display of his new ideas concerning iron greenhouse construction.

In spite of the unfavorable weather the carnation exhibit was complete and first-class in every way. All the best known varieties were represented by several of our best growers and quite a few new ones were introduced.

For best carnations shown Peter Fisher took the prizes with his Enchantress and Mrs. M. A. Patten.

Patten & Co. and H. A. Stevens Co. scored first and second in white, both showing Gov. Wolcott. Patten & Co. and S. J. Goddard divided the scarlet honors with Manley and Crane; dark pink went to Lewis Small and G. H. Bean, for Lawson; Paul Richwagen and C. W. Ward took crimson, with Roosevelt and Harry Fenn; Patten & Co. secured variegated by use of Gaiety, and yellow capitulated to Backer & Co. and Patten & Co. (Eldorado vs. Dorothy Whitney).

The chapter on violets was profusely illustrated. Double went to H. F. Calder and J. S. Smiley, on Campbell; single to G. W. Ayer and Wm. Sim, with Princess.

A noticeable feature was a vase of very fine Blanche Ferry sweet peas of Sims'.

In the seedling class C. W. Ward scored 87 on Alpine Glow, 89 on Sensation; S. J. Goddard struck 82 on his No. 3; Geo. E. Buxton, 82 on Marian Buxton; Roper, 96 and 76 with E. Shepherd and Seedling 305; L. E. Marquisee counted 85 on Albatross; A. Covall, 67 with Ruby and Buckman 72 with his Octavia.

H. K. Southworth, one of our heaviest and best double violet growers, has contracted such a violent case of malaria that he decides to make a business of shaking and wants to shake all other business, including his huge greenhouses in Stoughton. He has had great success with them and it may be a good plan for some enterprising party to catch them while the fever of oscillation is on.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market took a turn for the better on Saturday, the demand increasing considerably. This improvement has been continued this week. Prices have not advanced, but will certainly average much better than they have lately. There is no especial demand for fancy roses but a good many are sold at moderate prices. Carnations go well, colored being more sought than white, reversing the conditions of last month. Violets are fine and plentiful. E. Bernheimer is handling a fine lot of singles. Mignonette is rather hard to sell, though fine. Bulbous stock is in its glory, the heavy home supply being reinforced by shipments of southern daffodils, which proves coals in New Castle. S. S. Pennock is receiving a fine lot of gardenias. Arbutus is about, also pussy willows. Smilax and asparagus are in active demand.

Hugh Graham.

One of our best known florists died last Saturday of pleuro-pneumonia after a week's illness at his home near Logan. Mr. Graham was in his seventy-second year. He came to this city when he was seventeen years of age and was associated in turn with three large dry goods firms. In 1867 he started as a florist at Eighteenth and Thompson streets, where he built greenhouses and developed a large business, chiefly in funeral work. About eighteen years ago he removed his entire plant to Logan Station, on the P. R. railroad. This place has been increased until today it contains considerably over 100,000 square feet of glass. The business part of this enterprise was moved down town first to 1204 Chestnut street, and later to Thirteenth street below Chestnut, where it is at the present time. Mr. Graham's specialty of late years has been decorating for the large balls. He owned all the rugs, curtains and other furnishings used in Horticultural Hall, thus having a practical monopoly of the decorating done there. Many friends mourn his unexpected death.

Jersey Again.

Did you ever have something that you wanted to do, which press of work or other reasons had prevented you from doing? If so, you will understand the pleasure I felt in a trip across the river last Sunday afternoon. There were certain little obstacles to overcome which increased the pleasure. It was raining. It is an experience to cross the Delaware in mist so thick that bells and whistles sound all around from unseen craft. There is only one train; taking it means no dinner. There is something Bohemian about two sandwiches done up in brown paper in one's pocket, followed by a feast at a street corner to the delight of the ever present small boy. There is no return train; what of it? A ride on the front platform of a trolley car through the Jersey towns is better. Then, to sum up, there was a cordial welcome at East Moorestown and something worth seeing.

Walter P. Stokes improved his plant last summer and now has it in good working shape. The first house—a new one—was filled with carnations in nice condition. Queen Louise is grown for white and shows vigor—blooms large, stems stiff. Joost is the pink. It looked the picture of health. Maceo, Crane and Prosperity are grown in smaller quantities. Gov. Wolcott will be tried. The young plants were established in small pots. A north side house was filled with tulips in flats, chiefly La Reine, potted in a way to win a smile of approval from the novelty man (George Klemm) himself. Cyclamens are about over.

The next house contained hydrangeas, remarkably compact and well clothed with foliage, the buds developing nicely. The side tables in this house contained a variety of stock for garden and truck patch—coleus, geraniums, egg plants, tomatoes, sage, etc.

The next house contained the valley—Mr. Stokes' specialty. A very fine lot it was, twelve to fourteen large bells on each spike, plenty of foliage, stems a foot long. Seventy-five hundred is the weekly forcing. Sifted coal ashes are used at times as a substitute for sand and preferred as less subject to fungus.

The Easter lilies were the next plants of interest. Twenty-five hundred are grown. They are remarkably vigorous, the stems heavy and of moderate length, no staking being required. The flowers are about right for Easter. A remarkably nice single-span-to-the-south house was filled with the more advanced lilies and some 5-inch Brunners and Chartas to be kept cool. A good sized potting shed, well lighted, was filled with azaleas. I have omitted the foliage plants, of which a few are grown, also rubbers, taken from fine stock plants, areeas, Boston ferns, Pandanus Veitchii, etc.

Outside were large frames and a sash house now filled with early cabbages. These, with the tomatoes and egg plants before mentioned, form the bulk of that part of the stock which will go to Johnson & Stokes this season. There will be 10,000 tomatoes and 1,000 pot grown egg plants.

Notes.

John L. North, of Sewell, N. J., is sending in some very fine calla lilies to the Flower Market.

The Rutledge Nursery Co. has been sending in some very fine Crane to Edward Reid. John McIntyre believes them to be the best coming into the city today.

The express companies returned to their former cut flower and plant rates on the 10th inst., much to the gratification of the florists generally.

Herman Schoenfeld will occupy his new store on or about April 1st.

H. H. Battles returned from Florida last week.

F. W. Whiteley has sold his plant, consisting of five greenhouses, at Lansdowne, Pa., to W. A. Leonard, the transfer to be made June 1st.

Eugene Bernheimer is handling large quantities of hardy ferns of fine quality.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are receiving heavy shipments of Easter goods from Europe this week.

The Flower Market will make a specialty of Easter plants, taking orders from samples.

The Century Flower Shop reports the largest flower business in its history last week.

A. Fahrenwald has decided to increase the number of greenhouses to be built this season from seven to eight.

H. Bingham Myers is greatly pleased with the success of his new store, the Colonial Flower Shop.

Leo Niessen reports business as steady and satisfactory. His new place is convenient and well appointed.

St. Patrick's day, Tuesday, was a great day with W. K. Harris's specialty, shamrock.

Edward Reid had heavy extra orders for carnations on Saturday.

Milton W. Woodroffe has secured a number of consignors and a neat store at 1344 Ridge avenue.

BALTIMORE.

Various Notes.

March has been merciful this year and soft weather and high temperatures have contended for the mastery since the month of storms and winds came in. Last week has a record of four rainy days and one at summer pitch—yesterday being like a perfect day of June, sending thousands to the country side and to the parks. The trailing arbutus is in flower, far earlier than the average, and azaleas and bulbous stuff is way ahead of the intentions of the growers. On Saturday the markets were full of Dutch hyacinths and the southern shipments of narcissus are already enormous, depressing prices and overdoing the markets. Violets will have a short season. They are already declining in numbers and in quality.

Trade continues moderately brisk. There are no big entertainments, but many smaller social events, all of which require their quota of flowers; weddings and funerals go on, as usual, and there is a fair division of business all around.

The Gardeners' Club had its annual election of officers last week. Robert Halliday, who has been its president for several years, on retiring was presented a silver loving cup as a mark of the esteem in which he is held by the members.

He is succeeded by Richard Vincent.

A Field of Cannas on the Grounds of the Wagner Park Conservatories, Sidney, O.

Jr. Mr. Vincent is an Englishman by birth, who, from a modest beginning, has built up an enormous greenhouse plant and business. The bulk of his trade is in vegetable plants, which he grows by the millions and distributes at all seasons from the New England coast to the Gulf of Mexico and across the continent. His production of flowering plants is also a great one and his energy and business astuteness are illustrated by his ample use of the advertising pages of the REVIEW and other trade papers.

John A. Cook, son of our veteran rosarian, John Cook, was made vice-president; John J. Perry, long the efficient secretary, was re-elected to that post; Philip B. Welsh was made financial secretary; F. G. Burger, treasurer, and John Wagner, librarian.

The return to the old rates of carriage by the express companies is received with thankfulness, which would be enhanced if the service was also improved. It seems, so far, unfortunately, that it is in vain to expect this.

The dean of the gardeners here is Anthony Cook. The old gentleman recently completed his eighty-fifth year. He may be found at his routine work every day at his old homestead on West Mulberry street, where he has lived for over half a century, as much interested and as enthusiastic over the objects of his professional care as though he were a beginner. He keeps up with the trend of the trade, knows what is new and good, still imports his seeds from the great houses of Germany and France, and is an example to many of us much younger for attention and zeal in his calling. May he live as much longer as life is comfortable and pleasant! R.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

On Tuesday the supply seemed to have shortened up some since previous report and with a good demand for the season prices were rather better held than the same time last week. This was especially noticeable in carnations and $2 was practically the bottom on any decent flower. The outside demand was strong and it was impossible to fill all orders in full, certainly a remarkable condition for the season. But we have had a phenomenally long stretch of gloomy and foggy weather and many plants have stood pretty nearly still as far as flower production is concerned. Even the supply of bulbous flowers seems to have shortened to a considerable degree.

On Wednesday came the first bright sunshiny day for about two weeks and it is likely that conditions will change speedily should the sun continue to favor us, though a number hold that the plants haven't the buds with which to suddenly expand the supply even with favorable weather conditions.

There is a good deal of guessing as to the probable supply for Easter, but there seems nothing definite to base opinions upon. We hear some gloomy predictions as to the supply, but are inclined to believe that it will be fully as large as ever before. When the stored up energy of the plants is tapped by a week or more of sunshine, which seems morally certain to come between now and Easter, things are sure to happen. It is up to the weather.

Notes.

A. L. Randall is spending a week with his mother at the old home in Pennsylvania.

C. W. McKellar has returned from his southern trip and reports a warm time.

President Burton and Secretary Stewart of the S. A. F., and Alex. Wallace and Geo. C. Watson stopped in the city on Monday on their way to the executive committee meeting in Milwaukee. They were given a dinner at the Auditorium on Monday evening at which numerous libations were poured, and left Tuesday morning for Milwaukee.

Messrs. Tesson, of St. Louis, and Coles, of Peoria, were also visitors.

Several local florists, including P. J. Hauswirth, accompanied the S. A. F. committee party to Milwaukee.

Leopold Koropp, the Ravenswood florist, has invented a very useful wire hanger that can be quickly attached anywhere to a greenhouse sash bar and be as quickly removed. It will be very handy for taking the place of objectionable screw hooks in suspending hanging baskets, shelves, etc.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have had a steady downpour of rain for the last four days and as a consequence business outside of funeral work has been very quiet. Roses are scarce. I have seen no really good Beauties all week and good Brides are scarcer than hen's teeth. John Young, of the Dwight Way Nursery, has been bringing in a few good Bridesmaids, but nothing is up to color or length of stem. Carnations are scarce—that is fancy stock, but everything points to a big crop with all the growers in about two weeks.

The prices have not changed in the last month. Violets are a drug in the market and daffodils are somewhat scarcer. Lilium Harrisii are coming in in fair quantities and will be in good supply I think for Easter. Valley is plentiful and tulips are about equal to the demand. A few Narcissus poeticus have made their appearance and the paper white variety is about finished for this season.

California wild flowers will be in market in a few days. These include eschscholtzia, buttercups, wild Ranunculus, blue bells, trillium and wild currant. Fruit blossoms are handled extensively by many of the florists. Quantities of cherry, plum, almond, Cydonia Japonica, wild peach and apricot are offered for sale. They make a good showing and are valuable for decorating. Marie Louise and Swanley violets are being brought in from San Mateo and Marin counties in small quantities and in a few weeks we will be at the height of our spring flowers.

Notes.

The spring exhibition of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society is to be held in the Maple room of the Palace hotel, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 30, May 1 and 2. The premium list is quite extensive and includes prizes both for professional growers and florists and also for amateurs. They range from new roses and carnations to pansies and fruit blossoms. A very successful show is anticipated by the committee having the exhibition in charge. G.

PITTSBURG.

The market conditions for the week just closed proved very satisfactory, and were contrary to all expectations.

The early part of the week was very dull and stock began to heap up at the wholesale places; everything was more than abundant; relief came Wednesday, business became very active in funeral work and trade continued brisk for the balance of the week.

Roses are somewhat shorter in supply due to the dark and gloomy weather; however, the supply is sufficient for the demand.

In carnations the crop is also slightly off; this may be a good thing, as it will keep back the heavy cut for Easter. American Beauties are very plentiful and are sold as low as $3 per dozen for the best blooms. Lilies are arriving in large quantities and are offered as low as $10 per 100. The quality is very good. There will be no lily scarcity this Easter in this section; very satisfactory reports are heard that the crop will be good and of a sufficient supply for all demands. This can also be said of tulips.

The demand for bulbous stock is very limited. Daffodils and hyacinths are a glut and can be bought at your own prices. Tulips are practically the only bulbous stock that is asked for.

Violets, sweet peas, mignonette and other miscellaneous small flowers have dropped in price.

Miss E. B. Maxwell, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., is spending a few days at Hotel Riverside, Cambridge Springs, Pa.

Last Monday a rather amusing incident occurred. A street fakir was selling yellow daffodils and calling out, "Yer's your official shamrock flowers." If the sons of Erin permitted him to survive the day he was a lucky boy.

These are the happy happy days when ye growers can afford to laugh at the coal barons.

Mike Blaha, of Aspinwall, Pa., lost one of his horses last week. The animal became untied during the night, wandered around and fell into a cistern and was found drowned the next morning.

Mr. Robert Faulk, of Allegheny, has returned from Cambridge Springs, Pa.

Mr. Jacob Elicker, of Homestead, Pa., is seriously ill at his home.

Resignation of Mr. Falconer.

Mr. William Falconer, superintendent of the Bureau of Parks, tendered his resignation to Director McCandless March 16th. He will become superintendent of the Allegheny Cemetery May 1st, and it is understood that he will better himself in a financial way by the change. There is universal regret in trade circles, as well as among the citizens generally, that the parks are to lose the services of this remarkably able man. Mr. Falconer will succeed John Perring, who retires after being superintendent of the Allegheny Cemetery for almost thirty years.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The expected glut has not made its appearance and the great demand for stock keeps up. Lent has not been noticeable with the wholesaler or retailer, and the great struggle each morning for stock indicates that everybody must be busy in the cut flower line. A great amount of funeral work was turned out the past week, some of which consisted of extra large special designs, making white flowers have the greatest call.

Violets are in great abundance—rather more than are needed. Still a hundred thousand of them were disposed of last Saturday by our wholesale houses, the price averaging $3.50 per thousand. Bulb stock seems rather scarce, especially so with Romans, Harrisiis, and paper whites. Valley is plentiful, with a good demand.

Roses are more plentiful and of good quality, both home-grown and imported. The demand is big on all varieties. Beauties had an extra call, but extra select are very scarce just now.

In carnations there are not nearly enough to supply the demand. The poorest stock brings as high as $2.50 per 100. Never before was stock in so great demand and so scarce at this season of the year.

The Easter plants at some of the large establishments are looking well. Some of the growers say that if the warm weather keeps up for any length of time they will have trouble in keeping their lilies back for Easter.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held a very interesting meeting last Thursday afternoon at its club rooms in the Odd Fellows building. The attendance was not very large, but sixteen of the regulars being present.

President Dunford opened the meeting at 2 o'clock. The entertainment committee, that did its work so well, was discharged with a vote of thanks. The committee on express rates was happy to report that the old rates had been restored.

The South Park Floral Co., of New Castle, Ind., had on exhibition a large vase of its new golden yellow rose, Franz Deegen, which was greatly admired by all the judges. Messrs. Ammann, Tesson and Beneke reported it a grand yellow rose and a big improvement on Perle.

Young Walter Gillies, who was highly recommended, was given the club's Shaw Garden scholarship.

E. W. Guy was reinstated as a member of the club. W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, and A. G. Bentzen, of St. Louis, were elected members. New applications for membership were made by Walter Gillies and D. R. McAnally.

President Dunford read a paper on what he saw on his recent trip to Florida, or, as he called it, "Some Impressions on Florida and the South Lands." This was very interesting and was much enjoyed by those present.

The next meeting of the club will be our annual rose meeting, and a prize of $10 is offered in three parts—$5 for first, $3 for second and $2 for third—to be competed for by local growers only. Mayor Halstedt was present and invited the members to meet at Belleville next month, which invitation was accepted with thanks. The date of this meeting will be a week later in the month, April 16, the original date, April 9, being too close to Easter, when all hands will be too busy to attend.

News Notes.

Walter Sanders, who has been with Small & Sons, New York, for the past seven months, has returned and is assisting his father. Walter's many friends in the trade are much pleased to have him home again.

Eddie Gerlack, who is in the cut flower department at Kuehn's, was confined to his home all of last week. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Samuel Parsons, Jr., expert landscape gardener, of New York, has recommended to the Board of Public Improvements that the bond of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co. (World's Fair) be raised from $100,000 to $650,000, this being the estimated and probable cost of restoring Forest Park after the World's Fair.

Seedsmen Busy.

Dickmann-Dustard Seed Co., Plant Seed Co. and Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. are all preparing for a busy season. They are engaging extra help and report orders coming in heavily thus early.

C. Young & Sons Co. report busy times in their plant and seed departments, mail orders being especially heavy.

F. H. Weber reports that he expects to open his new place at Maryland and Boyle avenues about April 1.

At the Odeon yesterday (Sunday) afternoon W. B. De Las Casas, president of the Boston Park Commission, gave an illustrated lecture on the "Metropolitan Park System of Boston." The talk was under the auspices of the Civic Improvement League. Mr. De Las Casas talked entertainingly on park systems and said that $25,000,000 have already been spent in securing the magnificent parks and driveways. The illustrations were scenes in the several parks, and also showed the territory which will eventually be secured by the commission. J. J. B.

Don't fail to have a strong adv. in the Review's special spring number, and send copy for same now.

WHICH IS RIGHT?

I would be pleased to have a competent opinion as to the proper way to lay glass in a greenhouse roof, whether with the bend of the glass up or with the bend down, and why? DOUBTFUL.

In reply to Doubtful, the better way to lay the glass in the greenhouse roof is with the bow or bend up, as shown in upper figure. In this drawing I have exaggerated the bend somewhat in order to emphasize my points. With the bow up the lights form a series of arches, thus presenting the strongest possible surface against the pressure of wind, snow or hail from the outside, whereas, if these arches are inverted as in the lower figure, it will readily be seen that the roof is materially weakened. You will also note that pressure exerted on the outside of a "bow up" light has a tendency to hold the glass tighter between the bars, whereas, in the case with the "bow down" light, the tendency is to loosen the glass. With the "bow up" light, the condensation on the inside is carried outwards to the bar and taken care of by the condensation grooves in the sash bars, these grooves being made for that specific purpose, but with the "bow down" light the condensation is carried to the center of the light, there to be dropped off at the next lower lap or to get between the laps, freeze and break the glass.

The Market.

Business is very good, but stock is getting scarcer every day.

Roses are holding their own better than anything else, the supply being nearly equal to the demand. There is quite a run on short-stemmed American Beauties. Long ones, too, find a ready market. Liberties still remain in short supply, but the quality is fine and they sell quickly.

In carnations is where the trouble lies, as they are scarce, and many more could be disposed of, especially in fancy varieties.

Bulbous stock is doing very well, especially Harrisii lilies, which are much sought after. Callas also sell well.

The supply of violets is slacking up and good ones are bringing a fairly high price. As usual, single ones have the call; it is very hard to make double ones move at any price.

Smilax and asparagus are still very scarce, there being hardly enough to supply the demand. Easter ferns are holding out very well this year.

Various Items.

The carnation show of the Florists' Society proved to be the best ever held by the club. While the show was not as large as it might have been, the quality of the stock exhibited was fine. Quite a number of out-of-town florists were present, including Herbert Heller, of New Castle, Ind.; Henry Weber, Oakland, Md.; Jas. Hartshorne, Chicago; E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind., and Mr. Kunzelman, Louisville, Ky.

The judges of the show were T. W. Hardesty and Chas. Jones, and the awards were as follows:

Best vase fifty white carnations—1st, H. Weber & Sons, with Gov. Lowndes; 2nd, Chicago Carnation Co., with Polar Queen; 3rd, Chicago Carnation Co., with Her Majesty.

Best vase fifty pink—1st, D. Witterstaetter, with Enquirer; 2nd, Witterstaetter, with Lawson; 3rd, H. Weber & Sons, with Lawson.

Best vase fifty red—1st, Chicago Carnation Co., with Mrs. Potter Palmer; 2nd, Witterstaetter, with Estelle; 3rd, H. Weber & Sons, with Estelle.

Best vase fifty variegated—1st, H. Weber & Sons, with Prosperity; 2nd, Chicago Carnation Co., with Marshall Field.

Best vase any other color—1st, H. Weber & Sons, with Genevieve Lord; 2nd, W. Rodgers, with Genevieve Lord.

Best vase seedlings—1st, R. Witterstaetter, with Adonis; 2nd, H. Weber & Sons, with Gov. Lowndes; 3rd, R. Witterstaetter, with No. 822 A.

Best general display—R. Witterstaetter, with a very fine collection of his own seedlings.

The S. A. F. O. H. silver medal was awarded to R. Witterstaetter, for Adonis, and the bronze medal to H. Weber & Sons, for Gov. Lowndes.

A certificate of merit was awarded to Peter Crowe, of Utica, N. Y., for two vases of roses; one of Maids and one of Brides. He also exhibited a variety of adiantum which is a marked improvement over Adiantum cuneatum.

E. T. Grave staged a vase of Pres. McKinley, which was fine.

Huntsman & Co., staged a pink seedling of medium size, which they claim to be a great bloomer.

J. W. Rodgers made a display of violets.

This is the last of the shows for this season, and the society wishes to thank all those who so generously helped to make these displays a success.

In the evening the regular meeting of the club took place. The principal business was the formation of a schedule for two flower shows, to be held during the fall festival this coming September. The fall festival committee has offered $1,000 as prize money, provided a suitable schedule can be formulated. After considerable discussion it was decided to call a special meeting for Saturday, March 21, at 9 p. m., at the club room.

Jas. Hartshorne was unanimously elected a member of the society.

J. O'Malley has just returned from Pittsburg, where he was visiting a sick brother.

Ben Glins is about again after a three weeks' siege of the grippe.

Frank Huntsman is confined to his home with the grippe.

C. J. OHMER.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Hartford Florists' Club held its annual meeting on the evening of March 10. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Theo. Wirth; vice president, J. F. Huss; secretary, Alois Frey; treasurer, Robert Scrivner; trustees, T. J. McRonald, J. F. Coombs, Geo. S. Osborn. The retiring officers presented to the club a block and gavel, suitably engraved, made from the historic Wadsworth elm.

Hon. A. C. Sternberg gave an interesting history of the fruit growing industry in Connecticut, pointing out the various steps in its development during the past fifty years. Prof. G. A. Parker in taking up the subject dwelt on the peculiar advantages in the soil and climate of Connecticut as being peculiarly adapted to the industry. The club voted to present the retiring secretary, J. F. Coombs, some token in recognition of his two years' service.

Visitors: Mr. Ruppert, representing H. A. Dreer; also Mr. Henry W. Gibbons, of New York, who is engaged in making exhaustive tests at the Heublein Conservatories to determine the cause of plants contained therein dying off at such an alarming rate. O.

RAMBLINGS.

ALBANY, N. Y.—John Dingwall has a fine lot of hydrangeas for Easter. From what I have seen good forcing stock will not be superabundant this year. Lilacs and azaleas are plentiful. Lilies, Crimson Ramblers and hybrid roses are on the scarce list.

AT SLINGERLANDS Fred Goldring has a good crop of roses and carnations in sight for Easter. There is a demand for fine specimen Boston ferns. Fred says small ferns for dishes have had a big run this season.

AT UTICA I found Frank Baker packing a big order for small ferns. This is one of his specialties. He grows them as he raises carnations—prime. Witness Red Jacket, for example, one of the parents of Flamingo, the scarlet "bird" of Syracuse. Whilst speaking of ferns you should see Peter Crowe's adiantum. It's a gem of the first water. Wm. Mathews is an orchidist of the old school. I do not believe any other flower could induce him to forsake his first love. His cattleyas are immense—Backhousianum, Corningii, Trianae in its varied forms, alba—all very beautiful. They bring a good figure right along and are sent all over the Union. In carnations Marquis, Fisher and Prosperity are among the fancies. A new Chadborn automatic ventilator has just been installed in a large rose house. J. C. Spencer is an advocate of the solid bed principle. He has some plants of the old Mermet rose that yield heavy and continuous crops, the roots of which have penetrated under the walks and entered another house. Peter Crowe's stock grows in a similar way. Must be something exceedingly nourishing in the soil. Utica is famed for its immense tea roses. Wm. Rowlands has just returned from attending his first carnation convention. The boys stand ready to pay his car fare if he will only tell them what new varieties he considered most suitable to grow in the home of Red Jacket and Oneida.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y.—J. C. Hatcher is negotiating for a ten acre lot upon which to erect a new range of glass. He wants to get farther away from town. George, the junior member of the firm, has a whole budget of new ideas in decorations and the like.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y.—J. O. Graham reports a very good season. He has a nice stock for Easter. He is one of a trio, the other two being W. H., of Binghamton, and G. L., of Bradford. The latter gentleman, by the way, was recently presented with a bouncing daughter, which, he says, knocks Mrs. Lawson carnation sky high, and he is a successful raiser of carnations at that.

OLEAN, N. Y.—Mrs. F. H. Johnson reports the busiest season on record. She had the contract for putting up the most elaborate decoration ever seen here. Her able assistant, Mr. Johnson, had the misfortune to strain his right knee, which has kept him in the house for several weeks. D. Herron is picking fine carnations. Those new houses are producing some excellent stock.

BRADFORD, PA.—W. Rockwell returned from the convention filled with the good things he heard and saw in the City of Churches and J. Austin Shaw, who is an old friend of Mr. R. There is an up-to-date flower store for disposal here at a moderate figure—a first-class paying investment. Owner has decided to give up, owing to ill health.

Auburn, N. Y.—Alfred Patrick says he will not go back on Marquis while it gives him such satisfaction. He has rebuilt several houses and contemplates adding to the plant during the coming season.

Geneva, N. Y.—W. & T. Cass report an exceedingly busy planting season.

WASHINGTON.

Business for the past week was excellent in spite of the rainy weather. Funeral work has been plentiful and has kept all hands very busy. A number of the dealers say last week was the best of the season. Flowers of all kinds have been abundant. Tea roses brought 8 to 12½ cents; La France, 10 to 12½; Beauties, $3.00 to $6.00 per dozen; carnations, 2 to 3 cents; tulips, 2 to 3; hyacinths and valley, 3; jonquils, 50 cents to $1.00 per 100; violets, $1.00 to $1.50 per 1,000.

If the weather continues as warm as at present the chances are that Dutch bulbous stuff will be gone by Easter, but on the other hand the weather is good for lilies. Lilies promise to be plentiful and fine. It is too warm for lilacs and azaleas.

Below you will find the scores of the Washington Florists' Bowling Club team. It will be well for outside boys to keep their eyes on Mr. W. H. Ernest and George Cook's scores as they are two winners. Barber rolls a slow ball, but from looks of the score he is giving the others a pretty close shave:

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Rose Society will be held in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, Pa., on Wednesday, the 25th inst., at 2 p. m., when the usual routine of business will be transacted.

Prof. L. C. Corbett will address the meeting on the subject of "Propagating Roses from Flowering or Blind Wood." Mr. E. G. Hill will submit a report on "New Roses" and an address on the "Rose Society and Its Work" will be presented by Mr. Robt. Craig. There is considerable local interest in the exhibition and it is felt that the Philadelphia show will take on a character entirely different from what has been seen in previous efforts in New York City.

Port Allegany, Pa.—The Port Allegany Greenhouses report a good business and trade constantly on the increase. The coal question does not bother them, as they are burning gas purchased at a low price.

Don't be too late with your adv. for our special spring number, to be issued next week. Copy must reach us by Monday, March 23d, at the very latest.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Business has been very good the past week. A number of prominent people have passed away and all the florists have had a good share of funeral work. Azaleas, cinerarias and pans of hyacinths, tulips, and daffodils are in good demand. Some florists don't like to see so much money going out of town for flowers.

Peckham is going to grow roses another year.

Edward Shaw has been hired as manager of the Tuxedo Greenhouses, and he intends to grow violets and carnations.

A. B. Hathaway intends to enlarge his plant.

E. S. Haskell has been sending out circulars to the business men with the object of starting a stock company for the growing of cut flowers. He also intends starting a store down town.

The florists had a meeting at the store of Wm. P. Peirce, Friday evening, February 27, and voted to organize a florists' club to be called the New Bedford Florists' Club. James H. Cleary was elected temporary chairman; Wm. P. Peirce, secretary pro tem. W. G. Kraber, K. E. Nolftz, A. B. Hathaway, E. H. Chamberlin and Wm. P. Peirce were appointed a committee to draw up a constitution and set of by-laws and to nominate officers. The club starts with a membership of twenty and six more in prospect.

Mr. Rennie, of Providence, R. I., and Mr. Bryant, of A. H. Hews Co., Cambridge, Mass., were visitors the past week.

C.

A WARNING.

On Dec. 13th my office was burned and the plants in the adjoining greenhouses destroyed by a peculiar accident.

On the edge of the refrigerator stood side by side a bottle of ammonia and a jar of sulphuret of potash, with back of them a pile of books and papers. The door leading outside was swollen and it required a hard pull to shut it. Soon after being shut, probably somewhat harder than usual, an explosion took place that set the office afire and formed an inflammable gas that destroyed all the plants in the houses which had doors open into the office.

It is evident that the jar of shutting the door disturbed some of the books, which fell against and broke the bottle of ammonia, and that the latter combined with the sulphuret of potash to form a very dangerous gas. Had the two been farther apart it is probable the explosion would not have occurred.

W. P. Woodcock, M. D.

Spencer, Ia.

NEW BRIGHTON, PA.

The weather for the past week or ten days has been very cold, but warmed up with the rain. We are having a very high water flood, especially on the low land. In Meyer's greenhouses the water lacked only about three feet of getting into his boiler pit. His greenhouses are in fine shape. His carnations, lilies, bulbous stock and potted plants are in the best of health. He is cutting fine Lawson, Prosperity, Queen Louise and Norway. His carnation house is in fine shape for Easter.

Trade is good. Roses range from $2 to $2.50; carnations, 50 cents to $1.25; tulips, 50 to 75 cents.

Mr. John H. Meyer has recovered from the grip.

Ho Ho.

FREESIAS.

We have received from Mr. Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y., five varieties of freesia flowers that are certainly worthy of special mention.

One is pure white, and is probably the most valuable as a cut flower; two others are orange yellow, and one is white suffused with yellow and lilac.

Mr. Fischer writes that he has been growing this strain for over twenty years and that he intends to separate the types of which he sends us sample blooms and name them. They are certainly worthy of being perpetuated and of being named.

Kansas City, Mo.—The William L. Rock Flower Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are W. L. Rock, Chas. E. Heite, Louis Westervelt and Lucy B. Rock.

BUTTE, MONT.

Cut flowers are more plentiful than they have been at any time before since last fall. We are having some nice, bright days.

The Butte Floral Co. is cutting some exceptionally fine roses. Its Golden Gates cannot be beaten anywhere. The prospects for Easter are fine.

Messrs. Connor and Johnson have gone to Boise, Idaho.

Mr. Mitchell, formerly of the Salt Lake Floral Co., was in town, and has now gone to Boise.

Tom Vallmer, formerly in charge of the conservatory of W. N. Clark, Jr., has taken a position with Law Bros.

Mr. J. H. King has been down in Utah for the past week.

Mr. Arthur Ellison, with the State Nursery Co., was quietly married last week.

The Florists' Club met on the 14th and had a very enthusiastic meeting. Three new members were elected. An invitation to meet next time at Gregson was accepted. The club will leave Butte on the owl train on April 4 and return on the 1 a. m. train, and there will be something doing. No one can afford to miss this meeting. The club has received its constitution and by-laws and everything is velvet. We expect two more additions to the membership at the next meeting. We now have all the florists except two or three.

Some elegant tulips are to be seen in the florists' windows.

Mr. Creighton, representing Henry A. Dreer, was a visitor, also Mr. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.

RAMBLER.

BOISE, IDAHO.—The Boise Floral Co. (limited) has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The directors are Hugh Connor, C. A. Johnson, Elise Connor, W. S. Walker and W. E. Palmer. A general business will be done in plants, flowers, trees and shrubs. Mr. Connor, who is the prime mover in the enterprise, came here from Butte and is well known as an able gardener.

A CALL to the bird dealers of the United States to take steps to modify the new law which forbids the caging of native song birds in addition to other and more desirable provisions, has been issued by Edw. S. Schmid, the bird dealer and florist of Washington, D. C. All interested should act upon the suggestions in the pamphlet he has issued.

EAST CLEVELAND, O.—The local branch of the Euclid Avenue Nursery will be continued as a separate business by Mr. C. W. Metcalfe. The Painesville, O., branch will be continued as an independent business by Henry Kohankie.

SAGINAW, MICH.—The Wm. Roethke Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. The officers are Wm. Roethke, president; Mrs. Bertha Roethke, vice president; C. L. Roethke, secretary and treasurer.

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—The regents of the University of Michigan have received seven acres of land from the city which they undertake to devote to a botanical garden and biological farm.

BALTIMORE, MD.—John Cook has purchased the property at 318 North Charles street, now occupied by him. The lot is 23x45 and the consideration was $17,900.

WASHINGTON, PA.—The Washington Floral Co. has been organized with J. M. Dickson president and W. J. Warrick secretary and treasurer. The company will erect six or seven greenhouses, each 15x150, at once, with the expectation of increasing the plant another year. They will have natural gas on the place for fuel, a fine drilled well of soft water and ten acres of fine old pasture sod for compost. The establishment will be devoted to the production of cut flowers.

TO DESTROY ANTS.

Take a boiled ham bone from which the meat has been taken; place it near their haunts at night, and in the morning the ants will be sure to be there breakfasting, when they may be dipped in a pail of hot water and destroyed. Place the bone back for the late comers, when they can have the hot bath. We prefer this to poisons, as it saves the cats, which we find almost as necessary as sunshine in our greenhouses.

A Woman Grower.

Sandusky, O.—Chas. F. Krzysske, formerly of Ypsilanti, Mich., has purchased the establishment of the Sandusky Floral Co. and intends to make extensive improvements in the place.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 pages, and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid. If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

RADIATING SURFACE.

Replying to the inquiry of C. W., the proportion of radiating surface for use in greenhouse heating to the capacity of a tubular steam boiler per h. p. can be variously estimated at from 80 to 90 sq. ft. of radiating surface for each h. p., the exact proportion depending very largely upon the method of piping and other local conditions.

No material change in the market. Roses are getting a little more plentiful all along the line. In carnations no color remains on the table, and there seems no show for a let-up until after Easter. Lilies are moving well, and all bulbous stuff the same, except a little flurry in tulips and daffodils. Violets are moving better, with bright weather bringing out more calls. All are looking for good Easter trade. Lilies are going to be short in this market.

Headquarters for EASTER PLANTS

We make a specialty of BLOOMING PLANTS for Easter week. I have the largest stock in Philadelphia; larger and in better condition than ever before. All the large greenhouses and frames are crowded with the choicest stock, at lowest cash prices

AZALEA INDICA—3 houses full. It is not necessary to mention that all my customers know that I am the agent of a large concern in Belgium, Ghent. I go there every year, if possible, and secure for my customers the best that can be had. I have all the leading American varieties, raised all winter in pots, and not stored away in cold frames, without being potted, like some do. White—Niobe, B. Andre, Alba, Deutsche Perle. Pink—Van der Cruyssen, Dr. Moore, Simon Mardner and many others. About 1 doz. variegated varieties, such as Vervaeneana, Empress of India, etc., and many new varieties, double and single, in 6 to 7-inch pots. Prices from 60c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1 50 each. As a special I must mention my Mme. Van der Cruyssen this year. They are unusually fine, as round as an apple, covered with buds. Price 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Specimen 10 to 11-inch pots, $5.00 each.

AZALEA MOLLIS, a novelty when in bloom, 6-in. pots, 60c to 75c each.

LILIUM HARRISII and BERMUDA-GROWN LONGIFLORUMS, fine plants in 6-inch pots, 15 to 36 inches high, from 5 to 16 buds at the rate of 10c per bud.

CINERARIAS HYDRIDA. I have an enormous quantity, about 2,000, 5½ to 6-inch pots, all shades, $3.00 to $4 00 per doz.

SPIRÆA COMPACTA, 6-in. pots, $3 per doz.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA. Have a house full this year better advanced than ever, 6-inch pots, $3 00, $4 00, $5.00, $6.00 per doz. 7-inch pots, 75c to $1.00 each.

DAISIES, yellow or white, 6-inch pots, $3.00 per dozen.

BEGONIAS, Pres. Carnot, Metallica and others, 5½ to 6-inch pots, at $3.00 per doz. Begonia Vernon, red, 6-inch, $3.00 per doz. Begonia Vernon, red, 4-inch, $1.50 per doz. Mixed varieties, 4-inch, $1.50 per doz.

HYACINTHS, about 10,000, my own importation, named varieties, best size, all shades, $10.00 per 100.

TULIPS, Tournesol, dbl., red and yellow striped, best Tulip in the market, 3 in a 4-inch pot, $1 50 per doz. pots.

DAFFODILS, Von Sion best dbl., double nosed, 3 in a 5-inch pot, $5.00 per doz. pots (worth $3 00). Cash with order please. All goods shipped at purchaser's risk. Can supply many thousands of references on application.

To save express charges, please state whether to ship in pots or not.

Buyers coming to Philadelphia, are respectfully invited to visit my place and inspect stock. Take 13th St. or Germantown car to Ontario St.

FLOWER SHOWS.

The impression that Kansas City has solved the problem of making a flower show pay on its merits is evidently erroneous, judging by a report appearing in the Kansas City Star of March 8th regarding the last show and which we reprint below. And it should not be overlooked that in this statement there is no charge for rent, frequently a serious item in other cities.

Disbursements.

Premiums paid to exhibitors	$ 5,626.00
Decorations	1,646.01
Construction—Lumber, carpenter work, etc.	1,466.96
John Thorpe, superintendent, salary and expenses	1,054.43
Flowers for pyramids and garden	716.00
Music	569.00
Labor	430.55
Printing and stationery	672.60
Lighting	361.64
Expenses	432.29
W. E. Lindsay, assistant superintendent, salary and expenses	349.85
Scenery—Washington's home	320.00
Posters and advertising in florists' papers	339.25
Express charges—White house plants, etc.	172.95
Flower pots	135.33

RECEIPTS.

Sale of tickets	$ 9,427.50
Sale of flowers, posters and programmes	313.25
Salvage—Lumber and plants	150.00
Premium subscriptions received	4,305.00
	$14,195.75
Loss	97.11
	$14,292.86

If we read the statement aright, the show lost on its merits (that is presuming no premiums had been donated) $4,402.11 in addition to the rent, and we understand that the rent usually asked for Convention Hall is $1,000 a day, making a total of $6,000 for rent, and a total loss of $10,402.11. This is not very encouraging.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

At the meeting to be held in Philadelphia, March 25, a motion will be made to amend the constitution so as to provide for twelve members of the executive committee, instead of six, of which four are to be elected each year.

A new special prize for the coming exhibition has been offered by Benjamin Dorrance. It is a silver cup, valued at $50, and is offered for the best rose blooms grown outside a radius of 150 miles of Philadelphia, as measured by railroad distance, not less than five varieties and not less than 25 blooms of a kind.

MADISON, N. J.

Mr. Chas. H. Totty, who has for the past eight years been in charge of the greenhouses at Florham Farms, with Mr. A. Herrington, has purchased a greenhouse establishment here and will embark in business on his own account on April 1st.

Mr. Totty leaves Florham Farms with the best wishes of all his associates, and his host of other friends in the trade will join with them in wishing him the fullest success in his business venture.

Columbus, O.—John Underwood, the well known pioneer florist, died March 4, aged 83 years. He was born in Ireland and came to America about 50 years ago. He had been a resident of this city 38 years and was widely known in the trade.

Dear Sir: I have used your Wire Carnation Supports for the last two years, in all about 12,000. They fill the hill in every particular. Nothing could be more satisfactory, and it would give me a great deal of pleasure if I can bespeak a good word for you to the trade, and you are at liberty to refer to me at any time.
Yours very truly,

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

A meeting of the Horticultural Society was held February 26 with President David McFarlane in the chair. J. B. Sackett, W. S. Connell, George H. Martin and A. P. Husted were elected to active membership, and David Tanter, of Glenville, was proposed for active membership. The prize box of cigars for best display of flowers cut from bulbous stock was awarded to Mr. James Ballantyne, gardener to Mrs. George Lewis. For the March meeting a similar prize is offered for best dozen of cut roses other than American Beauty.

The F. R. Pierson Co. exhibited three new carnations, which will be sent out January, 1904—Flamingo, Albatross and Sunbird—for which the judges awarded certificates of merit. The F. R. Pierson Co. offered the following prizes, to be awarded at the annual flower show in November: A silver cup for thirty-six chrysanthemum blooms, twelve varieties, three of each, which must be chosen from the following varieties: Mrs. T. W. Pocket, Durban's Pride, Godfrey King, Chas. Longley, Lord Salisbury, Mrs. Thurkell, Mabel Morgan, Mme. Herwedge, Convention Hall, Earl of Arran, Fair Maid, C. J. Salter, Queen Alexandra, Millicent Richardson, Mrs. Geo. Milcham, Florence Molyneux, W. R. Church, Edith Pillington, Yellow Timothy Eaton, Mrs. J. C. Neville, Madam Reboul, John Pockett, Bessie Godfrey, Mme. Cadbury. Also a cash prize of $25, to be divided as follows: 1st, for best plant of Nephrolepis Piersoni, $15; 2nd, for best plant of Nephrolepis Piersoni, $10.

H. J. Rayner, Cor. Sec'y.

GLASS SURFACE.

Ed. Florists' Review: I notice your explanation of method of figuring the glass surface of a greenhouse in your issue of March 12th, and while heartily endorsing the suggestion contained in the last paragraph, viz.: that "square feet covered by glass" be the expression used where it is desired to indicate the approximate producing capacity of a house or range of houses, I would advise that where size of the house or houses is stated in glass surface, with a view to figuring the required heating capacity or the structural costs, the actual total measurement of all glazed surfaces in roof, sides and end be quoted. This is secured by adding together the length of each slope of the roof, also the height of glazed portions of the vertical sides and multiplying by the length of the house and adding the result to the area of the glazed portions of the ends, and in such cases "square feet of glass" should be the expression used. I would be glad to read opinions of others on this subject. Henry W. Gibbons.

CARNATIONS.

NOVELTIES: THIS YEAR'S INTRODUCTIONS.

MRS. THEODORE ROOSEVELT—A brilliant shade of deep cerise pink, flamed with carmine. Finely formed. Average 3-inch flower on strong, stiff stems. Habit vigorous, early, free. Fragrance, strong clove. Selected, strong, well rooted cuttings now ready. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

ALPINE GLOW—A deep salmon pink on opening, which finishes a bright Daybreak tint. Good sized bloom, averaging 2¾-inch at this season of the year. Flowers of great substance and a splendid keeper and shipper. An extra vigorous grower; early, profuse and continuous bloomer. Cuttings taken last April produce plants carrying 25 to 30 blooms by the 1st of March. We believe this will prove one of the most profitable of the Daybreak colored carnations. We shall have the following rooted cuttings ready for delivery at the dates specified: March 15th, 25,000; March 21st, 5000; April 5th, 5000. Price $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000. Quantity limited to the above.

LILLIAN POND—2000 selected plants from 2-inch pots, ready for immediate delivery. $10.00 per 100.

HER MAJESTY—From 2-inch pots, March 10th to 15th delivery. $10.00 per 100.

MERRILL, WIS.—Mr. N. Greivelding built a new house, 20x18, last fall and intends to put in a second boiler next summer, the new boiler to be about twenty horse-power. Mr. Grievelding has a simple device for mending broken glass that he has found very valuable. It consists of a very short-shanked brass bolt, with rounded head, that he had to have manufactured to order to get it of the right size. When glass is broken he chips out enough of the glass at the fracture to enable him to insert the little screw bolt and then screws up the tiny bolt from below. If any brother florists are interested in this and will send postage to Mr. Greivelding, he will probably be accommodating enough to mail a sample, so that others may h them manufactured if they desire.

THE Hartford (Conn.) Florists' Club has recommended to the city that it create a forestry department with a sufficient yearly appropriation to develop and maintain tree planting along all highways in an efficient and practical manner, the department to be clothed with sufficient power to carry on its work after a uniform and systematic plan. This action was taken as the result of the report of a committee consisting of Theodore Wirth, G. A. Parker, Robt. Karlstrom, H. J. Koehler and J. Wesson Phelps, appointed to investigate the street tree question.

A REPRINT of a very interesting illustrated article on the Missouri Botanical Garden, by Prof. William Trelease, the director of the Garden, that appeared in the January number of the Popular Science Monthly, has been issued. It gives a great deal of information regarding the origin and aims of the institution and should be read by everyone interested in botanical gardens.

TOLEDO, O.—B. Schramm reports business as fair with a brisk demand for cut flowers. Carnations are scarce owing to so much cloudy weather. Coal continues scarce and high priced, but trade prospects generally are bright.

JENKINTOWN, PA.—Fire caused a loss estimated at $3,000 at the private greenhouses of Clement B. Newbold, Jan. 10. Many fine specimen plants were destroyed.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The entire nursery business of the late Thos. W. Bowman and his son has been purchased by Chase Bros. Co.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

We are headquarters for Hardy Perennials and can supply all the leading and popular varieties in immense quantities. We offer below a few specialties in this line.

ANEMONE JAPONICA.

35,000 plants in stock. Alba Japonica, Lady Ardilaun, Whirlwind and Queen Charlotte. Field-grown plants. $1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

CAMPANULA PERSICIFOLIA MOERHEIMI.

This beautiful new bell flower is a wonderful advance over previous varieties of this type, its flowers produced during June and July remind one of a double white Cammellia. 2 to 2½ inches in diam., strong plants. 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

CLEMATIS RECTA.

Forms bushy, erect clumps, 2 to 3 ft. high, producing masses of delicate white flowers, most useful for cutting during June and July. An old plant that is rarely seen but worthy of extended cultivation. Two-year-old plants. $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

HEMEROCALLIS "FLORHAM."

To those who are only familiar with the old Day Lily this new variety—a hybrid raised by Mr. Herrington—will be a revelation. Its sweet-scented, golden-yellow flowers are fully five inches across and produced very freely. A plant that should have a place in every garden. 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

STOKESIA CYANEA.

JAPANESE IRIS.

(50,000 home-grown roots in stock.) 25 finest named varieties, $1 50 per doz.; $10 00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000. Choicest Mixed sorts, 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

PERENNIAL PHLOXES.

(75,000 plants in stock.) One of our leading specialties. The plants we offer are field-grown, were divided in fall. They have from 3 to 6 eyes and will make a grand show this summer. 50 leading varieties. 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

STOKESIA CYANEA.

(Cornflower Aster.)

One of the most desirable hardy plants in our collection. A gem in every way. A most useful flower for cutting. Its flowers are not unlike a giant cornflower of a pleasing lavender blue color and produced without intermission from July to October. Strong plants. $1.25 per doz.; $10 00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

For the most complete list of Hardy Perennials offered in America see our Current Wholesale Price List. SENT FREE TO ALL FLORISTS.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, held on Wednesday, March 5, continued the feature of the monthly flower show. Roses and carnations in profusion were exhibited by President George Smith, Vice President William Bennett, John Hayes, Peter Duff and Dietrick Kindsgrab; orchids by Arthur Bodwell and Dietrick Kindsgrab and vegetables and fruit by Peter Duff, D. Kindsgrab and George Smith. Four silver cups have been provided, the judging to be on a number of given points, the gardener receiving the largest number to receive the award. The judges were Charles Totty, Malcolm MacRorie and J. E. Williams.

The paper of the evening was presented by Charles Totty, of Madison, on "The Chrysanthemum," the speaker confining himself to cut flowers. Its presentation was the method in vogue at Florham Farms and included packing and transportation and was practical and concise.

Four new members were elected and letters from the New Jersey Horticultural Society asking co-operation, and from the Chrysanthemum Society asking for the conferring of a prize by this society, were read. The former was referred to individual members; the latter was given to the executive committee with power.

FARMINGTON, CONN.

Hitchings & Co. are building a handsome private greenhouse on the Pope estate. It will be 100x20 feet, of iron and cypress, and will be first-class in every way.

Business is quite dull just now. Lent seems to have quite a depressing effect.

Roses are now doing finely, particularly American Beauties. Carnations, violets and bulbous stuff are all responding vigorously to the beautiful sunshiny days we have had. Azaleas will be early for Easter this year. Lilies are coming on finely, and it looks now as though there would be plenty for Easter.

Send your order at once and we will ship when desired.

Wagner Park Conservatories, - Sidney, Ohio.

OMAHA.

Trade in general has been most satisfactory in every respect and the Lenten season seems to make very little difference. It is the opinion of the writer that Lent affects the cut flower market less and less each year. At least that is the condition in Omaha.

Prices have remained higher for this time of year than ever before; stock is of good quality, especially in roses, but the latter seem to be somewhat off crop.

The retail prices of cut flowers prevailing March 16 are as follows: Beauties, first grade, $6 per dozen; second grade or medium, $3, and short $1 to $2 per dozen; Maids, Brides, Meteors and Golden Gates, $1.50 for selects and $1 for commons. Carnations, 60 and 75 cents per dozen, tulips and daffodils, 75 cents, while some very fancy tulips brought $1. Violets plentiful and sell readily at $1 per 100. Valley, 75 cents and $1 per dozen.

The recent opening of new offices of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad attracted much attention, partly through the fine floral display. Many fine azaleas, made-up designs, bunches of Beauties and other flowers were received from congratulating friends.

The youngest son of J. J. Hess is in a very serious condition, owing to being scalded with hot water a week ago.

Messrs. Bauman and Reukauf were calling on the trade last week.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

It still rains. The Grand has overflowed its banks and the lowlands of the city are all under water. Flowers are badly affected, showing a tendency to take a nap. If this weather continues it is problematical whether there are going to be any flowers aside from lilies and bulb stock for Easter.

We hear it reported that the extra express charge has been removed. Now, if we could get the tariff taken off glass and the price of coal reduced to its normal level, the average florist could gulp down a bottle or two of patent cough mixture and go about his routine ways happy and contented. The price paid f. o. b. Grand Rapids for 18x20 D. S. A. glass was $3.88 per box of 50 square feet. Now that same glass can be had for $3.52 per box f. o. b. Grand Rapids.

Last call for advs. for our special spring number, to be issued next week. Copy must reach us by Monday, March 23d, at the very latest.

The PRINCESS OF WALES VIOLET...

Violet growers cannot afford to be without this grand and popular variety. Growers in the vicinity of Boston know that this Violet is rapidly and surely becoming more popular and sells for higher prices than any other variety, either double or single. Growers in other sections have a great opportunity for taking up and growing this variety.

I have the largest and healthiest stock in the country and am booking orders NOW for strong young plants for April and May delivery, at $2.00 per hundred; $15.00 per thousand. 500 at thousand rates.

The GARLAND IRON GUTTER

What Mr. WILLIAM SCOTT thinks of it after a trial:

BUFFALO, February 2, 1903.

MR. GEO. M. GARLAND, Des Plaines, Ill.

Dear Sir: — The 750 feet of your cast iron gutter has now been in use since last August, so it has had the heat of summer and 14 below zero and incidentally a foot of snow falling in 24 hours.

I am glad to say that the gutters are most satisfactory in every way. After I had ordered them of you last spring, I was told some alarming things about them, but also heard from most reliable firms of the good points that your gutter possesses. I was told they would drip from condensation of warm air on the cold metal. I have a steam pipe within 18 inches of bottom of gutter and there is absolutely not a drop to be seen. I was told that in the expansion and contraction of length of gutter (mine is 150 feet) there would be a slight parting at the joint. It would take a powerful microscope to discover an opening the fraction of a hair — there is none.

By observation I have proved that a heavy fall of snow will disappear from roofs and gutters at least 48 hours sooner than a wooden gutter, in fact, with the steam pipe as I have it, it vanishes as it falls. There may be other excellent metal gutters, I have not tried them, but I am more than satisfied with yours.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM SCOTT.

TORONTO, ONT.—Ninety members of the Market Gardeners' Protective Association were present at the recent annual banquet. Some very stirring addresses were made, the sentiment, "Canada for Canadians," being the dominant note. One suggestion was that the gardeners get in closer touch with the florists, and it was suggested that by united action a fine new market, taking in both gardeners and florists, could be secured.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.
Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

Lilies for Easter

FOR several years lilies have averaged of poor quality and undoubtedly a good many flower buyers through the country have been disappointed in their Easter supply. Good lilies have been scarce because of so much disease. Months ago we took steps to insure satisfaction to lily buyers for this Easter by arranging with a first-class grower to force a lot of special stock for us. For Easter we shall have 15,000.

These are all true longiflorum and in perfect condition. We are now ready to book your orders at the following prices:

$2.00 per doz. $15.00 per 100. $125.00 per 1000. 500 AT 1000 RATE.

We shall have other stock in quantity. Easter Price List ready for mailing March 25th.

10,000 pots of Lilium Longiflorum for Easter

We have an exceptionally fine lot of these, and plants are in perfect condition, with fine, healthy foliage, and A-No. 1 in every respect, averaging from 4 to 8 buds each.

We are now booking orders for Easter delivery or earlier at the rate of 12 cents PER BUD OR FLOWER. Cut Lilies at same price.

When ordering please state whether plants in pots or cut lilies are wanted.

Customers at a distance wishing to procure a supply will find it safer to order early, just before the flowers open, as plants can then be shipped cheaper and with greater safety. You will then have the plants on hand and avoid the rush at the last minute. A great many of our customers order in this way and find it a decided advantage.

We can ship at any time now plants selected so that they will just come into bloom in nice shape the week before Easter.

We should be glad to have buyers from nearby points call at our Scarboro greenhouses and inspect the stock. Plants can be selected and laid aside and reserved at any time and delivered when wanted.

We have also an exceptionally fine stock of FICUS ELASTICA, KENTIAS, BOSTON FERNS, ARAUCARIAS, lage size LATANIA BORBONICA for decorating, etc.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

A retrospective view of the situation at this time will reveal many curious facts, especially when we compare it with many former seasons which seemed far more favorable to rose culture. The very limited amount of sunshine since planting time, accompanied by such an excess of moisture, would naturally lead one to suppose that the product would be of a very inferior quality and deficient in quantity, and which would stand no chance in comparing it with other seasons with over three times the duration of sunshine and less than half the amount of moisture.

Every season we look for the gloomy period when Beauties and other pink roses, especially Maids, will be off color more or less, usually more, and as we rarely miss it we naturally expected it in such a season as the past in double doses. The result, however, so far as I can gather and from experience, is in quite a different ratio. Taken altogether Maids have produced heavier crops, the quality of the blooms both in substance and coloring has been ahead of many former years, while the foliage has been simply grand. The percentage of short and weak stemmed flowers has been considerably below the average. Sales have also been prompt, prices good, and a very much smaller percentage of waste has to be recorded.

Reports on Beauties have also been more gratifying. One year ago there were many complaints of malformed buds, losses from the ravages of thrips, etc., while many of the long promised long-stemmed buds failed to come to time at Easter. Although prices may have been a little better for high grade stock last year, the grower will be compensated this year by a heavier cut. In Brides, Golden Gates and Ivory the reports look equally well alongside of last year's returns.

Meteors have produced as good crops as in any former years, while the quality of bloom, stem and foliage has been superior, short stems being up to the present almost entirely absent. The market for these and other reds has been unprecedented and prices have ruled high. Never during any part of the season has there been a glut of these.

This also seems to be an off year so far as the introduction of new varieties is concerned, indeed many of us are real glad of the fact; a rest from the mental worry and strain which accompanies an investment in these will perhaps renew our strength and resolution to again tackle "the something new" by the time it is trotted out.

Reports for Easter crops are of a rosier hue than those of last year, and if all present indications meet with fulfillment the joy of the brethren will be substantial and lasting.

Taking it altogether the current season promises, despite of all the seeming drawbacks, last but not least being the scarcity and exorbitant price of coal, to be one of the most profitable and satisfactory in the history of American rose growing. Long may it continue is the wish of Yours truly,

RIBES.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Some Varieties of 1903.

Every grower is intimately acquainted with the standard varieties and the best way to handle them, but new varieties are coming up all the time, each with its own individuality of growth, disposition and adaptability and the grower of extra choice flowers has to keep posted on the peculiarities of the new varieties. When a new variety is merely a sport from an older variety, such for instance as Yellow Eaton, it is of course well understood that the same treatment will give good results in the case of the sport as has been found successful in the case of the parent. In the case of imported varieties one can only proceed on the lines generally laid down and see how the stock finishes with such treatment.

It is generally considered that the chrysanthemum is such an easily grown flower that no special treatment is needed, but if you want the best that can be grown you will have to give your plants as much attention as you would in growing any other crop.

In looking over the novelties (and more especially the new Australian varieties which were brought to the notice of the readers of this column last fall) they seem generally to be of good, vigorous habit. The most important point to remember in growing any novelties of foreign origin is that they should almost invariably be taken on the crown bud, this being the bud in general use in England, France and Australia. There is also another point that intending purchasers of these novelties will do well to notice, and that is that some varieties while unexcelled for exhibition are useless for commercial cut flower work. Some of the firms are this year stating the varieties that are only suitable for exhibition and intending purchasers will do well to take notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly.

Mrs. T. W. Pockett, which is one of the most beautiful varieties I ever saw, will, I fear, never be of much service to the commercial grower. It is a Japanese, yellow in color, and the very long drooping petals make it a poor shipper when handled in the ordinary wholesale way. To a florist with a home trade who can market such varieties as Nellie Pockett, this variety will be welcome for it is a great improvement on Nellie Pockett in every way.

Another variety that I would not recommend for general use is Durbin's Pride. It makes tremendous flowers from the crown bud, but cannot be grown to stand erect, and when taken on the terminal the flower is unsatisfactory. It is, however, a splendid variety to grow for the classes that the National Society recommends to be inserted in schedules this year, that is, a class that permits of the flowers being supported in some way.

Mabel Morgan, on the other hand, is a variety that will serve equally well for any purpose, and these are the varieties that eventually become the standards. It is a clear yellow, gracefully reflexed flower, and will become a general favorite.

Mrs. Thurkell, while it also droops like Mrs. T. W. Pockett, seems to be made of sterner stuff, and ships well, some flowers being exhibited in Chicago at the last exhibition that had already been on exhibition for two days at a show a thousand miles away.

Convention Hall, if it proves to be an easy "doer," will become a standard white, for it is a beautiful thing and has the correct commercial shape, i. e. incurving petalage, which permits of its packing closely.

Matthew Smith is a variety that should not be taken on the early bud as the flower is apt to come deformed and shapeless. A bud early in September will give a perfect flower. This variety is a very fine keeper.

C. J. Salter is a variety that should be useful to those growers who look for a second early flower. It was in good shape for cutting by Oct. 10, and is the largest yellow that I am acquainted with flowering so early. I don't think any one will make a mistake if they invest in this variety.

This is an age of big things and chrysanthemums are no exception to the general rule, and the sooner our growers wake up to the fact that the days of such sorts as Ivory are numbered the better it will be for all concerned. The market today from early October to early December, is crowded out with a lot of rubbish that no self-respecting grower would be willing to decorate even his dump pile with, and this tremendous mass of poor flowers has cheapened the Autumn Queen until now shortly after the season opens everybody has become sick of the sight of it. Try the other way, fellow growers. Have only one-third as many flowers, but grow them three times as well. I warrant the market will have a more healthy tone at least.

TABLE CENTER PIECES.

Some Simple Forms.

The constant demand made of a decorator is for new arrangements and original ideas, as well as for a change in materials and colors, and quite often some odd conceit with a moderate outlay takes better than a superabundance of material worked up in a commonplace way. For example, as in the first illustration, place fifty scarlet carnations in orthodox style in a rose bowl in the center of a dinner table, all with stems in water, with sprays of Asparagus plumosus, as has been done hundreds of times this very day. The arrangement may be graceful and faultless, but it will arouse no more than a passing notice from the guests.

But as in illustration No. 2 take the same bowl, the same carnations, the same asparagus, without being conscientious about breaking, bending or almost destroying here and there. Drop two or three of the bright carnations into the water to color the base of the bowl and heighten the prismatic effect in the glass. With two or three sprays of Asparagus Sprengeri trace a simple scroll pattern on the cloth and follow the same with scattered carnation flowers, more thickly in front of the bowl and sparingly towards the end of the scroll. The use of the Sprengeri as a foundation gives more depth to the traccry and also holds the carnations airily above the surface of the table.

All recurved flowers are more or less hardened in their artistic appearance by being allowed to be flat on their own weight. It crushes in nearly half of the flower. The use of a supporting medium like the Sprengeri raises the flowers about an inch above the cloth, and the extra effort pays every time. An incurved flower like a half blown rose will lie very gracefully on a hard surface without losing any of its original outline.

No. 2 is a simple theme and No. 3 is the first variation. As pictured in No. 3 take the same carnations, the same asparagus, the same bowl and adding about twenty-five more carnations, enlarge and multiply the scroll patterns in a diagonal direction. Make the panel longer or shorter as space available requires. Here and there break the scrolls by throwing a flower or two out of line, and edge the panel with what carnation foliage is to be had. The whole will present a half scattered, but not a promiscuous effect.

Where the table is very long No. 2 and No. 3 might be alternated, or for a round or square table the simple scroll designs might be used at opposite corners, and the panel through the center.

The fourth illustration is a scheme in fruit and flowers with 6-inch moss baskets and ribbon to match flowers or fruit. The whole cluster is thrown in an easy position over the mirror. Two of the baskets are filled and standing upright, while others are empty and thrown on one side with the flowers and fruit scattered out or on the side of the baskets. The color scheme is one of green grapes and violets, a pleasing combination for a daylight occasion. The same plan will serve for a valentine, prenuptial, or wedding table, with the addition of several outline hearts traced upon the cloth with the violets.

Following the use of flowers out of water and overturned baskets amusing suggestions are often made to the decorator. People will tell you in a tone of distress that some flowers have fallen out! It is gratifying when one can so nearly approach the natural.

Gertrude Blair.

[We believe the set of pictures will be found interesting and suggestive, but fear Miss Blair has gone to the extreme in the fourth arrangement. The comment of one well known decorator to whom we showed the photograph was that while he sympathized with the attempt to get away from the conventional, should he put up such an arrangement for one of his customers he would receive orders to remove it from the table instantly. The use of fruit with flowers is frequently a great help in producing a pleasing effect, but with everything on a table upturned the impression is apt to be given that there has been an accident, rather than that the hand of an artist has been employed. But we give the engraving a place, thinking it may contain a useful hint to some.—Ed.]

SOME FLORIDA QUESTIONS.

Would like to know through your paper what is the best thing to do with old azaleas, imported plants, that have flowered in New York and afterwards been sent to Florida. If they were mine I would consider it the cheapest plan to throw them away. For one or two years they come out and do very well and after that begin to get worse every year instead of better.

What sized tubs do you use for Latania borboniea and phoenix palms with a spread of 10 feet?

I have a tree fern—Alsophilia australis—with a spread of 15 feet and fronds 12 to 15 feet tall, planted out of a 12-inch pot two years ago last November. Would this be considered extraordinary growth? Same age in pots are about three feet tall.

Florida. A. B.

I am delighted, Mr. Editor, to see by frequent evidence of late that the Florists' Review is read by many in way down south Florida. I know it is much appreciated in many parts of Europe, even to the steppes of Siberia. I have had letters from your subscribers in New Zealand and Australia, in fact, from all parts of the world except Western Springs, Ill., and the Congo Free State, and you will soon have to amend its title and call it the "Universal Florists' Review."

But to the questions. A. B. has doubtless read frequently of the treatment we give the Azalea indica in the north. Time was when the writer thought it was cheaper to throw them away if they had not sold the first spring after importing, but we think very differently now, and every spring some of the finest plants we have are those we have carried over the previous summer. After flowering they are well trimmed back and put into a night temperature of 55 degrees and kept well syringed. They soon break out into new growth, and after all fear of frost are plunged out of doors in the full sun, and all they want then is room to grow, plenty of water, and a daily spraying. Some growers who have a suitable soil plant them out and they lift well in the fall. Our soil has too much lime in it to admit of that.

Now, most likely all of the above is of little use to A. B., for perhaps he simply wants to know how to treat them as a hardy shrub, for doubtless they are perfectly hardy in any part of Florida. When received from the north, if in fair order, trim them well back; don't be afraid. Plant in a suitable loam, or a muck that is not too mucky and wet, and perhaps a slight shade would be helpful. Under these conditions I should think these azaleas would thrive fairly well in Florida.

Latania borbonica and phoenix palms need a larger tub when you are sure that their present tub is crowded with roots, and if they show roots on the surface you can be sure that the tub is crowded with roots. Either of these palms with a spread of ten feet would need a tub 2½ feet in diameter.

Yes, your Alsophila australis has made a wonderful growth, and that's what your almost perpetual summer can do. Planted out in our modern conservatories, or out of doors in your climate it is a handsome tree fern, but as a plant for decorating for the florist it is the most useless of all.

ASTERS.

Can asters planted out the latter part of April in a carnation house be gotten out in time for benching carnations in the fall? If so, what are the varieties best suited for cut flowers and when should seed be sown? Can you suggest anything else in the cut flower line that can be used for this purpose?

A Subscriber.

In the days when we thought that middle to end of September was early enough for planting carnations we grew a crop of asters for several seasons on the benches that had grown carnations and that were to be occupied again by carnations in the fall. That day is past and it is now well known by all carnation growers that the end of July or first week of August is late enough to plant carnations. I don't want to drift into an article on the divine flower, because we have friends both east and west more capable than I, but I will just drop this remark. Subscriber and others who think the dates quoted for planting too early, might say "Why, my plants would not be large enough by the end of July." Don't you think they will grow just as fast indoors as out of doors? And will they not lift when a moderate size with limited root growth better than when large plants with their roots spead deep and wide in the soil?

If you are growing only carnations in this house and give them proper care they will be as profitable until the first of July as anything you can grow, and if thrown out by the fourth of July you have but a short time to remove soil, repair benches, perhaps paint interior of house, get in fresh soil and replant. Some of the finest benches of carnations I have seen this winter were planted from 3-inch pots about the 10th of last May, never having been out of doors at all. So it is of no use for me to talk about varieties of asters or when to sow. Should your carnations be utterly useless after Easter, and you have some Victoria asters that are at this writing a good size—say almost as large as you should have them for planting out in May—then you could plant them on the benches after Easter and get a crop of flowers in July. Any sown now would be too late.

I can't think of anything that would be profitable during the short time that your benches would be unoccupied between the throwing out of carnations and the replanting, and even if it is bedding plants that you now have on your benches it would be middle of June before you got cleaned out and ready for something else.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Solid Beds and Raised Benches.

I have had a number of inquiries come to me direct in regard to solid beds and raised benches and I will take this for my subject this week. I can not give you any records of blooms cut nor the percentage of firsts, seconds and thirds, etc., but I will give you my opinion of their merits or demerits formed after having tried both on a large scale for several seasons.

The first and the most important question is, can you raise as good or better stock in solid beds as you can on raised benches? To this I will say that you can produce as high quality at all times and at certain periods higher, if you build your beds properly. The quantity will be the same during the winter months, but when warm weather sets in your solid beds will hold up in good shape longer than the raised benches, and this amounts to a good deal when you are able to dispose of the blooms to good advantage the year round.

The main thing you must look out for in a solid bed is a good drainage, so there will be no danger of overwatering in winter. To make sure of having good drainage we fill in about a foot of coal cinders and on this we fill our planting soil, thus making the top of the bed about 18 inches above the ground level.

You can go a little farther than this and lay a 3-inch tile in the cinders across the bed about every foot or eighteen inches and this will partly give you what many growers claim you must have by all means, namely, air passing freely underneath the soil. I don't consider it necessary, however. During the winter it will help to dry the soil quicker, but in the spring it will cause the soil to dry out too quickly. I don't think it will keep the soil any warmer as some claim. In fact if it were not for the fact that it makes so much more and harder work taking care of the plants, etc., I would just as soon make my beds right on the ground if the soil were sandy enough to pass the water off freely.

Last year we had a batch of White Cloud on a solid bed and another right across the aisle on a bench and the former were of better quality and the blooms more numerous all through the season. On this same bed were one thousand plants of Elma, and the way they bloomed all winter and way into the summer was wonderful. This year we have Mrs. Lawson on one of these beds and we never had it so good before. In the other varieties I can see very little, if any, difference, except that they hold up later into the summer. Some varieties seem to lack a little in strength of stem during mid-winter, but that might be in the soil to some extent. Last month when a party of about a dozen of us were shown around F. R. Pierson's places we came across a bed of American Beauty roses that was right down on the natural ground. Nothing was done except to put on and spade into the ground a liberal supply of manure and fertilizer and the young plants set in the same as on a bench. They looked as fine as any we saw and we were assured by our escort that they had done as well as any of the bench plants all winter and that the stems seemed stronger and heavier all along.

There are many different ways that you may build these solid beds and one way may be better in one respect while another way will be better in other respects. If you want something permanent build the sides of brick or cement, but until you are sure that you will like them I would advise you to use wood in your construction. Set your posts about three feet apart, two feet deep and eighteen inches above ground. Nail your side boards on the inside of these posts, thus not only will you keep the soil away from the posts, but all the weight will be on the posts and there will be no danger of the boards pulling loose from the posts, etc. Fill in one foot of cinders (you can use those from your own boilers) and five inches of good soil, same as you always used on the benches. You might spread a thin layer of manure on the cinders before putting on the soil same as you do on your benches. A bed made in this way will outlast at least three benches and the first cost will be considerably less than a raised bench.

I would not advise you to put in more than five inches of soil as I think it is best to change it each season the same as you do on benches. We replanted a bed last fall without changing the soil and the plants did very nicely, but not so well, I think, as they would have done in new soil. I do know, however, that the soil does not become so exhausted in these beds as it does on raised benches and much less feeding is necessary, and when you add to that the fact that they do not dry out so often you have the reason why the quality keeps up later into the summer.

You will also find that these beds will grow those varieties that are kept inside all summer much better, because in the hot summer months they will dry out less and the roots will be cooler right along. If you have any benches to rebuild this summer, put in one of these and see if you don't want more of them in the future, but don't tear out a lot of good benches until you know that you will like them.

Another question we are asked repeatedly is "how did your carnations do planted in the open ground in the new house?" Last summer when we were building our house we heard all kinds of discouraging remarks and numerous predictions of failure, but I am glad now that we paid no attention to them and I am glad to be able to say that we are more than pleased with the results. If we build any more houses for carnations we shall pursue the same course with the possible exception that we may try to put in the raised solid beds the summer before we build. This house is planted with G. H. Crane, E. Crocker, Mrs. Lawson, Elma, Roosevelt and America and all have done exceptionally well except America, which grew poorly last summer for some reason.

Last September we allowed the Crocker to come into a full crop on account of an unusual demand for carnation blooms, which caused them to lay off about six weeks in mid-winter. There was a big crop though up to Xmas and they brought three cents or more each all through Sept., Oct., Nov. and Dec., and now we are cutting a big crop of as fine blooms as you can find and they will be our top grade until the weather has ruined all the others. The G. H. Crane were a grand sight all winter and are doing fine yet. I never saw a bench of as fine Crane as these were. Roosevelt did fine all winter until we cut it up for cuttings and Elma has been a mass of buds and blooms all winter. The quality in this house up to Dec. 1 was away ahead of those that were lifted in the fall and since then it has been just as good. We will also be cutting fine blooms out of this house when all your benches are burnt up and ready to throw out.

Perhaps the greatest point in this operation was the work we saved by it. We were able to take our time in building this house because we had all summer to do it in, all we had to do was to see that it was glazed by about Sept. 20, before hard freezing set in. We were able to do our other replanting at the proper time and we saved the work of housing the 10,000 plants that are planted in this house. Building 10,000 square feet of glass ready to plant by Aug. 20 is no small undertaking unless you can hire enough extra men to do it. We were able to do all the painting, glazing, plumbing, putting in ventilating machines and purlins and posts and in fact all except sawing and erecting the framework of the house. And all just because we had all summer to do it in and we could leave it for a week or two whenever we had other work to do. As I said before, we shall do it again at the first opportunity.

STANDING WREATH.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a standing wreath arranged by Mr. M. A. Bowe, New York. The flowers and other material used can be readily identified in the picture and any description seems unnecessary. It was a very beautiful piece of work and was used at the funeral of a member of the Ohio Society of New York, as indicated by the lettering on the ribbon.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Preparation of Land.

In some sections it will be none too soon to begin preparations for planting out. There are several methods employed owing to difference in nature of soil, aspect of land and with us the limited amount of available ground.

I am obliged to use the same piece of land this year as last and while not exactly advocating the practice I have no fear that with our mode of proceeding we shall have any trouble in producing No. 1 plants. This land was heavily manured two years ago and produced a fair crop of potatoes. Last year it was again manured, plowed, harrowed and gave us splendid plants. Plowed last fall and left rough so the frost could get in its work this winter the soil is in fine mechanical condition.

We shall apply this spring a liberal coat of wood ashes from hard wood (unleached of course) and if possible harrow in a short time before plowing; if not it will be allowed to soak in, which it will if too wet to work in. When plowing we shall use no manure except to top dress lightly after the whole field is ready to plant. Deep plowing and proper quantities of fertilizers applied as the nature of the soil will determine is a long step toward success.

I do not recommend the use of bone meal in the field, preferring to confine its use to soil in benches of the house; neither do I advise planting out in soil overrich. What we want is soil sufficiently rich to produce a plant of sturdy habit; time enough to give intensive cultivation when plants are growing under glass. Much fertilizer is wasted in planting carnations too far apart; often times one-half the ground taken up would have sufficed.

My plan is to lay out the land in what may be called long beds eight or ten feet wide. This is easily done by making paths, throwing out a small quantity of soil both ways, afterwards raking it up on the surface and leveling off, applying the top dressing at the same time. If your land slopes in any direction it is best to make these paths in the same direction and in case the beds are very long I would put through cross paths, say 50 feet apart.

The chief advantage of this bed system is that in very wet weather the paths will, if arranged properly—that is, according to the lay of the land—serve as a conductor of surplus water and on the other hand can be put to advantage in a dry season to maintain a system of irrigation, but I shall have more to say on this subject in due season.

Insect Pests.

The warm spell we have experienced of late has brought about the right condition for a good crop of aphis and red spider. Regular fumigation will reduce the aphis tribe very quickly. Red spiders are like head lice as regards ownership; it is no sin to have or get them at times, but the sin comes in allowing them to stay or increase and spread.

When we have but a few plants affected at this time of year they are removed and burned as I believe it is time and labor saved to say nothing of the results of heavy syringing. By all means do not let your young stock get infested with any sort of insect. Also see to it now that everything is done for them before the Easter rush.

Geo. S. Osborn.

CARNATION JOOST.

Replying to C. J. the samples of Mrs. Joost you sent were not fresh enough to enable me to examine the half open buds very well and I am not sure that I can say positively what the trouble is. The stem and foliage look healthy with the exception of a few spots of bacteria, which, however, would not be enough to cause you such trouble.

The petals of the half open blooms seem to hang together and that is what makes me think that you have a heavy crop of thrips in your house. I did not see any on these specimens, but they were too far gone for the thrips to find any nourishment in them. Take a half open bud and part the petals one by one and look for a tiny insect about one-sixteenth of an inch long and usually of a light brown color. If you find them you need look no farther for the source of your trouble.

Tobacco in any form will destroy them but it will take a great deal of persistence to reach them all as they get in between the petals where even smoke can not reach them and so you have to catch them away from home. Fumigate as often as you can—every night for a week if you can—and blow the house full of tobacco dust every other day for a week or so and you will be rid of most of them. You will lose some blooms by this but you will soon make them up after you rid your place of this pest.

A. F. J. Baur.

THRIPS AGAIN.

I send some Scott carnations. Can you tell me why they do not open properly? Sometimes there will be good blooms and one of these others on a plant at the same time. The plants seem to be in excellent condition. You will observe that the petals of the blooms sent are somewhat grown or stuck together.

D. & S.

Your case seems to be just about the same as that of C. J. and I think that if you will follow the directions given him you will rid yourself of their enemy. Both Scott and his daughter, Mrs. Joost, have always been noted for opening their blooms freely and behaving themselves well in general and both have kept freer from disease than the average carnation.

Old Scott is far behind the times and unless it is better with you than it is with most growers you ought to stock up with some of the great improvements that have come since Scott was our breadwinner. This variety may have deteriorated some, but it was never so large and majestic looking as a Lawson or a Nelson, and I doubt if it ever produced more blooms to the square foot.

SPECIMEN CHRYSANTHEMUM PLANTS.

BY T. D. HATFIELD.

[Extracts from paper presented to the Chrysanthemum Society of America at the Chicago convention.]

We have constantly been changing our list of varieties suitable for specimen plants. It is one of the things I cannot understand, why we do so, and still we make very little headway. The explanation I believe lies in a desire to keep up with the novelties. It has proved a mistake, as varieties selected almost wholly because of some special merit, either size or color of blooms, are seldom suited for specimen plants; and among our best today, scarcely any are found which make good specimen blooms. Red Warrior does not; neither do Louis Boehmer, Fisher's Torch, the Bard or Phœbus. I often wish we could get Fair Maid of Guernsey, Belle Hickey, Jeanne Delaux, Jardin des Plantes or Lady Selborne.

Indoors our worst enemy is red spider. It is an insidious pest and very liable on account of its small size to be overlooked until it gets a strong hold. We have tried about all the nicotine compounds, both by fumigating and by spray, but none will kill them outright. There is nothing so good as water, and we are forced to continue spraying right up to exhibition time. I have tried it upon plants with the flowers expanded and it has done no harm when the day is bright enough to dry up all moisture before evening. There is always the danger of getting the plants water-logged, especially when they have been potted a long time.

I may go back to cutting time, and this begins right after the exhibitions. There are always plenty to get then, and often it is easier than later. At any rate, we make sure of all new and scarce varieties, and if we can get nothing better we can do very well with leaves.

Sometimes we took our early cuttings over again, as we thought they made better specimens when started in February, but often we did not resist the temptation to grow the originals on account of their size, hoping to make larger specimens, but seldom they did. We have tried growing old plants a second year. It is not worth the trouble, but I may mention a plant of Mrs. Alpheus Hardy which won a silver medal in Boston and a cup in New York the next season.

Cuttings will stand considerable saturation and must be kept close for a few days. When rooted they are potted in small pots, using light soil. We usually put in four cuttings and pot off two, saving one of each variety to put in boxes for emergencies. These may make just as good plants as those carefully potted. One can hardly go by the size of the cuttings, still, I should always prefer a strong one. They are stopped as soon as nice young growth is made, and when well rooted put into "fours," later into "sixes" and stopped frequently. For the next and, in most cases, our final potting, we pay more attention to the soil. After trying various kinds, our preference is for light loam. There is less danger of getting the plants water-logged—a serious condition.

A good rich soil with a moderate proportion of lime, in some available form, is the best. We have used Clay's fertilizer as an ingredient with excellent results. It stays with them to the end. For a liquid there is nothing better than horse urine when carefully used, say at the rate of half a pint to a two-gallon can, once or twice a week. But this should not be given until the plants show the need of it, which should not be a difficult matter for the ordinary practitioner to decide. More judgment is required to know when not to use it. It is easy to overdo. All this applies to plants which have had their final shift, but I meant to say, when making it, that they should be potted only moderately, and not too full, as the root development is liable to fill the pots up, and if potted quite firmly, too hard to allow of the free passage of water. With some of our plants, at this writing, November 1, it takes half an hour for them to soak, and one at least that I depended upon became so hard that I had to punch holes through the ball with a stout piece of wire, but it is injured beyond recovery. It is hard, too, to tell when sick plants want water. They will wilt when the sun shines and it requires the greatest restraint not to apply it. A sure test is to damp the floor and walls thoroughly and if they don't recover they need water.

Staking is in a great measure a matter of taste; I mean as to how and when to do it. It is easier to do it all at once. I can get a more shapely plant. I feel sure such wholesale work is injurious, although it is not decidedly apparent. And if it is done piecemeal, part in August and finished in October, there will be considerable rearrangement of the shoots —untying and retying. The advantage of staking with pliable stakes like willows consists in being able to draw the plants together so that there will be no friction. We first fill the plants all about the flowers with tissue paper and then draw them in with bands of cotton cloth.

I wish to say a few words about unusual varieties, old and new, which we used for decorative purposes, for cutting and massing. Say what you will, a specimen plant is of no use except for exhibition. Its formal character is revolting if seen too often. A number of small plants, grown in 7-inch and 8-inch pots, from one to two feet in diameter, mixed together, any way, gives a variety of form and color which we never get in specimen plants. No attempt is made by us to train them, only stakes enough are inserted to keep the shoots together. This informality is charming. All types are represented, pompons, pompon anemones, large anemones, incurved and reflex; even the larger flowering Japanese, when grown in this way, would hardly be recognized. The Mizpah type, single flowers, originated with E. D. Smith, Adrian, Mich. They have a distinct beauty. We are often asked if they are marguerites; we would rather compare them to single pyrethrums in form of flower. Grown in 6-inch and 7-inch pots, they are hardly more than a foot high and models of neatness. This season we have added some new colors and a slight variation in type—seedlings of ours, raised from Mrs. Filkins—one of the feathery ones, of the Golden Shower type. We would suggest an addition to the schedules of chrysanthemum societies, which would give these dwarf forms a chance to be seen. "Specimens in 8-inch pots, not more than eighteen inches high."

Though hardly in line with this essay, a little matter, at least interesting to me, is the fixing of sports. This can seldom be done by taking cuttings from the base of the plant which sports. As generally happens, it is only part of a branch, and shoots below may bear normal flowers. Oriental Glory, a satiny pink, sported golden bronze last autumn, and this has been fixed by leaf cuttings.

THE CALLA.

(Richardia Africana.)

The culture of this handsome and chastely white flower has been somewhat neglected during the past few years, at least they are not so much in evidence in the florists' stores as formerly. For this there are two principal reasons, viz., that the overwhelming taste for roses, carnations and violets during the winter has had some effect in sidetracking them, while lilies—Harrisii and Longiflorum—have snowed them under as an Easter attraction.

From its graceful habit, purity and shape of bloom, keeping qualities, general healthfulness and easy method of culture it certainly deserves a higher niche in public estimation, and if for no other reason than "Auld Acquaintanceship" it deserves a little consideration from the craft.

Many of these "old timers" are thrown aside by the modern grower under the idea that there is little demand for them or that the same space can be more profitably occupied by roses, carnations, etc. Investigation along these lines will sometimes give us quite a surprise.

To grow callas profitably we must follow the same general principle that we do with other crops of which we make a specialty, viz., grow them first in sufficient quantities so that we can fill a good sized order at almost any time, as we can usually do in roses and carnations. Second, by giving them the same careful attention and scientifically studying the best methods of culture as we do with these other specialties. They would then undoubtedly be as profitable as from present appearances the indications are that the demand is largely in excess of the supply.

Calla blooms usually command a ready sale during the Christmas holidays and in fact all through the winter and in order to have them in good blooming condition at that time they should either be potted or benched early in August.

Corms a little above medium size (not the very large ones) are the most suitable for forcing purposes. In the preparation of the bench due regard should be taken of the fact that they are marsh plants and will require an abundance of water during their growing and flowering season and consequently should be amply provided with drainage. By using tile bottomed benches the most perfect drainage is obtained and as callas can be allowed to remain on the same bench for two or three years without renewing there is no danger of the bench giving way through rot.

To secure an abundance of perfectly developed, good sized flowers with plenty of luxuriant foliage, they being gross feeders require a compost of equal parts of rich loamy soil and well decomposed cow manure. The corms should be planted about 18 inches apart each way and should have the crowns well under the surface.

They require no watering until the leaves begin to develop and the roots to show through the soil and on the surface, there being sufficient food stored in a well ripened corm to sustain them until this takes place. During this period the house should be kept cool and moist, by shading if necessary. As the leaves expand and increase in number the supply of water should be gradually increased and ventilation given freely.

A Bench of Callas at the Estab'ishment of G. Van Bochove & Bro., Kalamazoo, Mich. Photographed December 28 Last.

Being very subject to the attacks of red spider they ought to be thoroughly syringed from both sides of the bench on every favorable occasion. Thrips and greenfly are also much attached to them. Light and frequent fumigation will easily keep these pests in proper subjection.

By the beginning of September the first real good flowers will begin to appear. At this time a mulch of half rotted cow manure one or one and a half inches thick will help materially to develop the crop and strengthen the plants for a succeeding one. Before applying the mulch I have found it of great benefit to give a generous sprinkling of bone flour to the surface of the soil. When the mulching is partly exhausted feeding with liquid manure can be resorted to during bright weather, and if this is carefully and judiciously attended to the labor will be amply repaid by the positive improvement both in quality and quantity of bloom produced.

By mulching each alternate month and using liquid manure between times and keeping the right temperature 60 or 62 degrees, with a day temperature varying from 70 degrees during cloudy weather to 80 degrees in bright sunshine and giving abundance of ventilation these plants will continue to produce immense crops of bloom until the middle of July, when they should receive a partial rest.

The old method of drying them entirely off during the summer months and starting them again in the fall is almost entirely dropped. A partial ripening by gradually diminishing the supply of water and giving all the air possible for a period of three weeks if the weather is hot and dry or a week or two longer if the weather is dull being all that is necessary.

If the bench is to be carried over a second year (and this is usually the most profitable way) the ripened leaves should be picked off and the surface of the soil cleaned and given a thorough soaking. The remaining leaves should then get a good syringing every day and the house kept cool and moist. This is all the water they will require until root action again commences and fresh leaves push forth, when water can be gradually resumed and plenty of fresh air admitted.

To renew the plantation the plants after being partly rested should be lifted and divided, selecting for the new planting the best shaped and firmest roots. These should be planted immediately, before they are allowed to dry. If they are allowed to become too dry it retards the period of starting and has a tendency to weaken the first growth.

The smaller roots should be potted and placed in a cool frame, shaded and kept moist for two weeks, when they can be gradually exposed to the full sunshine. The largest of these will make nice specimens for the spring and Easter trade, the smaller ones if carefully attended to will make good stock for next season's planting.

During the past few years a disease has developed among callas which in effect and appearance very much resembles the work of some species of bacteria and which from a very small beginning soon assumes large dimensions. The disease is of a very virulent form and will in a few weeks entirely destroy a houseful of plants. From what data I can gather it seems to break out after the introduction of California grown stock into a house and will soon cause trouble among the established home grown stock if not segregated. Unfortunately, like the lily trouble, even a microscopic examination fails to reveal the danger signal and it is only after the plants are well established that the trouble apparently begins. As yet I know of no effective remedy.

Richardia Elliottiana is a yellow type of this old favorite. The bloom is of a clear orange yellow and very striking, the leaves are beautifully dotted with small transparent blotches. It is a beautiful variety but not quite so free a bloomer as R. africana.

NEW ROSES.

BY E. G. HILL.

[Presented to the American Rose Society at the Philadelphia meeting.]

Mr. President and Gentlemen—There is little to chronicle relative to the new additions to the rose family, and especially is this true concerning new varieties suitable for forcing purposes. Ivory, introduced last year, is a splendid producer of buds and flowers during the winter months, in fact is considered of unusual merit and value as a white forcing rose. This variety is thought highly of by nearly all the growers who have given it a trial this year, and we hear of large increases to be planted of this variety; this would seem to indicate its popularity and standing. The variety is lacking in foliage, and this is a very pronounced defect. Nevertheless the variety has so many good qualities that it more than counterbalances this weak point.

Souv. de Pierre Notting—This variety was supposed to have attributes and qualities which would commend it as a forcing variety. The flower is a beautiful combination of yellow and pink, with the yellow suffusion predominating; it is of good size, produces finely formed buds, but unfortunately so many of the outer petals are defective and lacking in texture that it practically disqualifies the rose for winter work. This variety should make a fine outdoor bedder in sections where summer bloom is desired. It should also make a fine rose for massing. Its fine foliage, with its deep coloring, lends a charm that is possessed by but few varieties.

Franz Deegen—My prediction is that this variety will grow in favor as its winter forcing qualities become better and more generally known. It is a good, vigorous grower, producing long canes not unlike those produced by Kaiserin Aug. Victoria, and is remarkably free in producing its buds during the winter months. It likes good culture and thrives with good feed and plenty of it. The color is a charming tint of yellow, which has a depth seen in but few roses. Would certainly advise a trial of this rose on at least a limited scale, so that it may have a universal test over the country. This variety has grown in our estimation, as we have noted its behavior the past few months.

Perle Von Godesburg—This was heralded as a yellow sport from Kaiserin

Aug. Victoria, but only one bloom out of a great number shows any pure yellow in coloring. It, in fact, has so few flowers that differ from the variety from which it sported that it will hardly pass as a distinct sort. There is, however, a sufficient number of yellow flowers to show its tendency to sport into a distinct variety.

Saxonia—This is a variety from Germany. It is claimed to be a seedling from Golden Gate. The growth and general make-up of the flower shows its relationship to its American parent. It has not been tested sufficiently to determine its winter blooming qualifications, but we are inclined to think well of the variety. It has a finer coloring than Golden Gate and is somewhat on the order of Mme. Pierre Guillot in its markings, and the bud has a much better form.

Duchess of Portland—This is one of Alex. Dickson's seedlings and a most magnificent rose it is. It is larger and of heavier texture than our famous Kaiserin—a truly noble flower, but its neck is so weak that its flowers look down at Mother Earth. This is most unfortunate, for it has many charms to its credit.

Mildred Grant—Another of Dickson's fine Hy. Teas, showing its hybrid blood in its growth and form of flower to a most remarkable degree. It is pearl pink in color, a choice, refined flower. This won the English Rose Society's Gold Medal. In favored places we think this variety will certainly be heard from, especially for garden purposes.

Prince de Bulgaria—This is a valuable new color in the Hy. Tea class—buff yellow shaded with apricot; the form of the bloom is not unlike many of the H. Ps., its flower being very prettily shaped, quite full and double. This should make a fine pot variety as well as a choice bedding subject. The petals are too short for its use as a cut flower and we hardly think it would force were it tried.

William Askew—The plant is of sturdy growth, producing freely its fine large flowers. This is a variety well worth a trial for garden or pot culture. It is one of Mr. Guillot's productions and is possibly the very best of his later varieties.

Laura Wattine—This is a superb production and, we think, here at Richmond, one of the very best that this firm has produced. It is a brilliant dark red, with a fine long bud and a good double flower. It is a cross between Marie Baumann and Caroline Testout. This should make a valuable addition for garden purposes.

The above mentioned varieties have all been flowered here in considerable numbers and we believe them to be promising roses in their respective classes. They are the pick of over a hundred new introductions of the past two years and are worthy of trial by all lovers of garden roses.

The prospect of some new American seedling roses is fairly promising, and we anticipate that a few good novelties will be introduced in 1904. The varieties will be grown in considerable quantity, and, if past experience is duplicated by these varieties when grown in large numbers, we anticipate a pleasant surprise for American rose growers.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Easter Crops.

With most of us there will be nothing weighing on our thinking apparatus so much as the Easter crops, and to get all plants intended for sale at this important time in just the right degree of development will keep us busy. As so often remarked, we are creatures of the weather, no other industry so much so, and nothing so uncertain. The June weather of the past week would have hurried things along at a great pace, but at this writing, Monday, March 23, 1903, it is about 40 degrees and raining.

Lilies.

It is often the case that the Japan longiflorum need a good deal of forcing to get them in by the middle of April. This year with us it has been no trouble and they are all in abundance of time. There is a trouble with them, however, although not 5 per cent are diseased. Their flowers are fine and perfect, yet 50 per cent are not over a foot to fifteen inches high. It is worth mentioning that these stunted or dwarf plants are nearly all confined to a thousand black stemmed variety, which I think had the prefix "grandiflora" attached to them. The bud is long, but we would be better satisfied if the plant had more longitude and the flower was a little shorter. It looks like a loss, yet it need not be serious. Three of these well-flowered lilies in an 8-inch azalea pot, or five plants in a 10-inch azalea pot, make a very handsome jar of plants, and with a white or green mat covering the pot will, I believe, sell well.

For church decorations you must have tall lilies, but only about one-third of the lilies sold go to church (like the florists), and the majority are sold as presents. We have within an hour put five dwarf lilies into a 10-inch azalea pot, and you don't want a prettier jar of plants for a present. There are twenty-one buds and flowers, and although the flowers are but fifteen inches above the soil I don't see but that it will be even preferred to one that is higher, for it is glossy, green foliage to the rim of the pot. Several times I have said what is perhaps generally known, that when the flowers are about ready to open you can slice the ball of earth of a 6-inch pot grown plant down to three inches and the plant will show no ill effect from it. The flowers will last just as long as they would if left in the original pot, and that is all you want.

Azaleas.

It is the sun that brings out azaleas. Keep them shaded if forward and as cool as possible, but look out for those like Van der Cruyssen that are well out. If the weather be dull and rainy they are liable to damp and rot with no fire heat at all. All your azaleas won't be too early, and some varieties will need a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees to get them into salable shape.

Lilacs.

I hope you got your lilac plants into the house in good time. If fairly well out a week before Easter it will do no harm, for they are much improved by a few days in a cool house. A few years ago we had an order for a dozen lilac plants ten days after Easter, and although these plants were in full bloom at Easter, in a very cool, dark cellar they keep perfectly.

Palms and Ferns.

Palms have taken a dreadful tumble. We know that by our sales, and no better proof of it is wanted than by the remarks of various representatives of firms who grow them. "It is no use to talk palms, I know," is the general remark. This can only be for a while, and their time will come again. The Boston fern seems to be in great favor just now, and if you are not supplied with nice plants in 6-inch pots, or pans of 6 or 8-inch, you should be, for they are going to be in great demand. And so, I think, will be plants of araucaria about eighteen inches to two feet high.

Plant Arrangements.

Made-up baskets of plants sell about as well at Easter as at Christmas. There is plenty of material to choose from. A small pink azalea, one or two of the dwarf longiflorum lilies, filled up with Primula obconica, will make a very pretty basket, and there is a great variety of material. If your trade does not call for baskets, which are expensive, you are sure to have some customers who want more than a single plant; they want something a little more showy. Then the ordinary pan can be made good use of. Now, I know that many growers plant their tulips, narcissus and Dutch hyacinths in the pans in the fall. We do largely, and perhaps it is the better plan, but if you have not done so, or want 8, 9 or 10-inch pans of varieties that you did not plant, then you can make them up from those you have grown in flats and they will last just about or quite as long and be as satisfactory to the customer; only don't do this making up into pans until the flower is fully developed. Dig them out of the flats with all the roots you can and as little earth as possible and they will never know it. There is certainly one advantage in this plan; there will be no blanks; the pan can be perfect. We kept cool during winter a number of cyclamens in 5-inch pots. They are now in flower. They make a beautiful pan of blossoms, and so do the primulas.

Frills and Tucks.

I am not much of a ribbon man, but there are some plants that can bear it without looking absurd. A handsome azalea or hybrid perpetual rose would, in my opinion, be spoiled by any ribbon amongst its foliage. Can you paint the lily or gild the rose? No. Yet there are plants of meager foliage that can be made more attractive with some frills and tucks that harmonize with their color. The Azalea mollis is one, and the Acacia armata is another. And, strange to say, the Crimson Rambler roses, which so often seem bare of flowers near the pot, will admit of some artificial additions. The Porto Rico mat we do believe in strongly. They cost but $15 per 100, and when an azalea, a pan of lilies, a crimson Rambler rose, a lilac or any good-sized plant is adorned with one it will add fifty cents to the value of the plant in the eyes of the customer. Green, pink, yellow and red are about all the colors you want. In the absence of a mat use colored tissue paper. Even that makes the plant look as if "dressed for a party." Don't hand a 50-cent plant to the poorest customer without some covering. The day of delivering a plant in a bare pot as an Easter gift is past.

Easter Preparations.

It may seem frivolous for me to say, have all these things ready in good time and do all you can a week ahead of the busy week. Boxes of all sizes can be made up and be in readiness. Pots can be washed of those plants you are sure will sell, for although they can be hid for a time, nothing can be more hideous than a greasy flower pot.

If you wholesale plants to the retail florist he can walk into the houses where they are to be found, but if you cater more to the retail trade, to people who want to select one or two plants, then make a fine show in one house, and that of course the most accessible. Don't mix them all up like a private conservatory; keep them in blocks. It is more impressive and far more convenient when you are looking out an order.

Sweet Peas.

I meant in my last notes to remind you that sweet peas should be sown the moment you can get on the ground without the mud sticking to your shoes. We plowed some land in the fall, and on the 10th of this month sowed the peas without any more digging or plowing. This is the earliest date I can remember getting them in. Make a wide, deep drill; sow thin, with the rows four feet apart if you are not short of room.

Pansies.

Pansies, either if wintered in the field or in cold frames, are sure to be lifted some by the frost and should be gone over and pressed firmly into the ground. It has been a good winter on these and they will be in full bloom by April 1.

Hollyhocks.

We have been struggling with hollyhocks all winter, and after a hard fight have subdued that dreadful fungus, at least for the time being, and it has been done by a weekly spraying with ammonical copper solution. They can be planted out at any time now. From experience I know that hollyhocks like a stiff loam, or clay if you like, dug deep with plenty of manure. If they do well they should need five feet between the plants.

Hotbeds.

I don't believe in a florist using more hotbeds than he is compelled to, and then only for stuff that can be put in about the middle of April. A month's growth on them will make such things as alternanthera jump, but it is time to look about for the material. Stable manure mixed with refuse hops (if your neighbors don't kick) makes a good and lasting bed. The material should be gathered into a big heap and turned over at least twice before it is made into the bed, or it will burn itself out or be too violent when first made up.

BANQUET DECORATION.

The accompanying engraving shows the very rich decoration arranged by J. H. Small & Sons, New York, for a dinner given by Mrs. Clarence Mackay at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The tables were placed completely around the Marie Antoinette room and there were covers for a hundred and fifty. On the table orchids and Farleyense ferns were used exclusively, over five thousand cattleyas being required. The corsages were of clusters of orchids tied with cattleya ribbon, and white orchids were provided for the gentlemen's boutonnieres.

The walls were festooned with southern smilax and asparagus, and as will be seen in the picture the bank of palms was interspersed with bougainvillea.

PITTSBURG.

Last week we experienced a week of extraordinarily warm weather for the time of the season, the mercury on Friday, March 20, reaching the 78 degree mark. This weather had no bad effect on business, but really stimulated it. The quality of stock was somewhat affected by the very soft and warm weather, being most noticeable on Maid and Bride roses. The supply of all kinds of stock was equal to the demand.

Beauties remain plentiful. The quality is very good, but prices are very low.

Carnations are selling better, and white ones are arriving in larger quantities.

Bulbous stock is not so much in evidence as last week; prices on same remain unchanged.

In greens, Asparagus Sprengeri is now quite plentiful and helps out the shortage of smilax.

The firm of Streiff & Neigel in the Allegheny market has dissolved partnership. Harry Streiff will continue the business under his name. Mr. Streiff has the best wishes of all his associates.

J. B. Murdoch & Co., 510 Smithfield street, have sold their down-town building for $135,000. This place is one of the oldest stands now doing business.

E. C. Ludwig was busy last week with funeral work. On Thursday, March 19, he made up work which amounted to $300.

believe it a good investment to keep up the display in their show windows. Something new and attractive can be seen at these places daily.

Citizens and business men of the East End have urged Mr. Snowden Randolph, of the firm of Randolph & McClements, to hand in his application as superintendent of the bureau of parks. This position was made vacant last week, by Mr. Wm. Falconer resigning.

John Bader reports business very good in blooming plants and palms.

T. M. Ulam went to New York last Friday.

Shipments of daffodils and callas from the southern states are being received by the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.

Sidney Gibs, of Carnegie, is able to be at his place of business again.

Hoo-Hoo.

BUFFALO.

There is a good excuse for anyone making a remark about the weather for the past week. Sixty degrees at night and 75 degrees in the day on the 17th of Ireland is indeed a record, and it's not one day, but many. Crocuses are in full bloom; muskrats are frisky; snipe are resting in our swampy lowlands on their long flight northwards; millions of tons of ice are falling over Niagara's brink every hour; I sowed sweet peas in the open ground on the 15th; the Buffalo Florists' Club is going to hold its annual banquet in the spacious and finely appointed Ellicott Club dining room on the 25th, and without any further signs you can be sure spring is here and here to stay until summer takes its place.

I can't say much for business, for I have not seen many of those who are in the rush. I know it's very fair and not suffering very much on account of the season of Lent. Flowers are quite plentiful, roses more particularly than any other. If this June-like weather continues it will bring on that state of affairs when violets are all leaves and no flowers.

We are all looking forward to a great and busy Easter, and if winter does not return on that identical week—which, alas, it too often does—all will be well. We should not only sell all we have, but at good prices. I am one that believes we are passing through a period of fictitious prices and inflated times. No matter what you buy or need, everything is up, from coal to corned beef. Why, a caterer who would have been glad two years ago to give you a modest spread for fifty at $1 a head now wants $2. Our employees are getting better wages. We go to the bank and all we can draw is our breath, so why not be in line and all keep a stiff upper lip and obtain good, big prices. Our goods are luxuries and the Easter buyer will forget in twenty-four hours what he paid, or promised to pay. Until the great downward flop comes, for come it will, let us share in the good times.

An expressman remarked to me the other day, just after the restoration of prices to the old rates, "This time your national society cut some ice." It's very gratifying to know that such mighty corporations will listen to reason and can be brought to time. One man may have done more than another, but more than all it was the vigorous kick all along the line. I don't often refer to or even remember the pleasant comments that are made when I happen very occasionally to speak the truth or utter a sensible remark, but I was "tickled" at the words of my brother florists of Pittsburg, who heartily coincided with me that we have brought the trouble on our own heads. Trumpery, frivolous claims for loss or damage to flowers handled by the express companies was the cause of their retaliation, and they are now going to give us another chance. So, brethren, beware, and make a claim only when it is pure negligence.

There is another week for me to tell you how the stock of Easter plants shows up in our little town, and I will get Mr. Dennis O'Connell to loan me his automobile (I will avoid the stone quarry at Jammerthal, because there is a Pennell-ty attached to that) and visit the many more or less extensive places from which our store men get their Easter plants.

There has been a dearth of visitors the past week, or they did not get to the suburbs of Cold Springs. Dan McRorie was the lonely one. I wish he would write up for your columns his adventures in the mountains of North Carolina while collecting Rhododendron catawbiense for W. A. Manda. The rugged mountaineer, whose civilization is that of two hundred years ago, the rushing mountain torrent, the mule, the log that saved his life, the primitive court of justice, the jury of three, the jug of corn juice which swayed the judge and jury—all well told would suit many readers of the Review better than "Gibbons' Decline of the Roman Empire."

A Model Little Place and a Great Gardener.

There are only two private gardens that have any glass in our city. Some commercial florist may say, "So much the better." I don't think so, but that's a question we won't discuss just now. One of these is the Buffalo residence of J. J. Allbright, not only perhaps our wealthiest man, but the one who has far outstripped all other Buffalonians in philanthropy. Visitors to the dear old Pan-American may remember seeing the unfinished marble palace just before they entered the gate of the Pan. It's now the magnificent half-million art gallery built and given to the city solely by Mr. Allbright. Some years ago when Mr. Allbright first acquired his beautiful house on W. Ferry street an Eastern firm built for him, attached to his residence, a very fine palm house built as good as horticultural architecture at that time could build.

Then another Eastern firm was given the contract to fill it, and it did fill it so full and at a cost of so many thousands that while there may have been more dollar bills to unroll, there was no room left in the house for a leaf or a petal to expand, no room to grow and develop the beauty of form of the individual plant. When a distant firm gets a chance of this sort, and the man that pays the bill does not pretend to know what's what in that line, it is tempted to take such a frightful bite of the cake that it leaves scarcely a nibble for either the local man or themselves. The local man has a local reputation, which he strives to keep, and no pretension to a national one, and can and will do far better if consulted in such cases than the distant big firm, who sees only a chance to unload a lot of stuff at a "splendid price." What the local man has not he knows well where to get.

In a few years this splendid structure was a jungle of frowsy, spindling, buggy vegetation. And the end was that Mr. Allbright gave structure and contents to the Buffalo Botanic Gardens, and although there was much rubbish, there were some most desirable plants—notably some large and rare cycads.

Thus endeth the first lesson. There still remained in a distant part of the garden two or three small houses used for growing flowers for the house. With the exit of the big palm house came the advent of a new gardener, and although so near I have not visited this new gardener and his four little houses until a few weeks ago. There are two three-quarter span houses not much over 30 feet long by 20 feet wide each, then a diminutive orchid house 20 by 12, and then a palm or warm house about 30 by 20. Most any man who is at all a gardener and is not lazy can grow orchids if he has several orchid houses, roses if he has specially constructed rose houses, carnations in suitable buildings, and palms if he has heat and a hose, but few men in a place of this size and without any other convenience or glass whatever can have such a display of blossoms and health and cleanliness as I there saw a few weeks ago.

There were American Beauty roses and Brides and Maids all yielding the finest flowers, carnations of several varieties, H. P. roses coming on for Easter, Chinese primroses and obconica, cinerarias, calceolarias, pots of freesias, and many flowering plants I cannot now recall. Now, there would be nothing wonderful in having this varied assortment if they were just existing and struggling for life, as you too often see them. On the contrary, every single plant looked as if it were some expert's specialty.

I send you a photograph of the little orchid house, which was taken at my request, and in flower three weeks ago, as the picture shows, were the following: Cattleya Trianæ, C. speciosissima (a magnificent flower), Cœlogyne cristata, Cypripedium Lawrencianum, C. Villosum, Dendrobium Devonianum, D. infundibulum, D. nobile, D. Wardianum, Lælia acuminata, L. anceps alba, L. Jongheana, Lycaste Skinnerii, Vanda suavis, and Zygopetalum citrinum. They were not only flowering, but looked at home and thriving. In the little warm house is a rare collection of choice palms and ornamental plants of a great variety. Now this is an achievement to have in this varied collection and in so small a place every plant bearing the look that says: "I am it; I get the care: the rest must do the best they can under the circumstances."

The genius that presides over this small but wonderfully managed place is Mr. Chas. Sandiford, well known among the gardeners of New England. I need not say what I think of him, for rarely have I seen the art of gardening so well demonstrated. It is far too small a scope for the ability of Mr. Sandiford, but his talents and character are highly appreciated by his worthy and kind employer, and it is most earnestly hoped that Mr. Allbright may in the near future afford a larger field for this grand gardener to show his skill and industry.

The Group of Orchids referred to in Buffalo Notes.

NEW YORK.

Notwithstanding that Easter is still nearly three weeks distant, it is quite unnecessary to wait until that time to foretell the usual accomplishments of the Easter season. The weather is delightfully springlike; the retail stores are crowded with blooming plants of every description, the windows are filled with brilliant coloring, all the novelties in baskets and ribbons and vases are already exposed to public view, and everything indicates perfect readiness for the great spring festival so close at hand.

Not only are the florists demonstrating the close of the long and strenuous winter, but the nurserymen are also much in evidence. In the usual places down near the ferries and on the crowded streets of lower New York, fruit trees, roses and shrubs abound already in wonderful profusion. At the auction sale on Friday last at Elliott's a large number of gardeners were to be seen already laying in stock for spring planting. The prices obtained were most encouraging and the sale itself was a success. The demand for fancy evergreens is universal.

The wholesale cut flower market is still depressed, and there seems to be little hope of any real improvement until the week before Easter. The quality of the stock, however, being sent to market is superb. Lawson carnations are especially fine at this time and are the most striking decoration of the retailers' windows.

Small & Sons devoted on Friday one entire window to this variety, and the effect was most brilliantly backed by immense cybotium ferns, illuminated by innumerable electric lights.

A visit to the principal growers of blooming plants in this section finds every one without exception prepared for what they unite in prophesying the greatest plant Easter of this generation. There will be Crimson Ramblers in enormous quantities, and already every retail establishment has them on sale. Azaleas are wonderfully developed, and, in fact, before Easter arrives there will be no complaint to make concerning the non-readiness of anything.

One of the most interesting decorations of the past week was that given at the New York Yacht Club by Commodore Iselin. Louis Zocchetto of the "Rosery" was the artist, and orchids, gardenias, American Beauty and Liberty roses, with an abundance of wild smilax, were used in the decoration. The guests were all millionaires, each menu was unique and hand-painted and a work of art, and what made the occasion of special interest was the presence of the American Cup, which Lipton will try once more to "lift" this fall.

Many more changes are likely to be made this spring in the location of leading retailers, not only on Broadway and Fifth avenue, but on Madison avenue as well. Owing to the wonderful building boom many old-established houses are obliged to secure new quarters.

Mr. Will Siebrecht has been sympathizing with an old gentleman of Bible History by the name of Job during the past ten days, and has been confined to his home, so serious has been the affliction.

Mr. William Kervan has severed his connection with the Kervan Co., and is now associated with Miss McNeice in the little flower shop at 359 Fifth avenue.

The demand for Mr. Saltford's book on "How to Grow Violets" has been so great that the first edition has been exhausted, and hereafter the price will be 50 cents. Those who have purchased it consider it a most valuable treatise on the subject.

Mlle. Jonot, of Detroit, has opened a retail store in the Equitable Building, 120 Broadway, and has the distinction of being the only lady florist in the great wealthy down-town district. She is a charming young lady of considerable experience and is associated with her mother in the enterprise which has opened most auspiciously and which promises to be a great success.

It is rumored that three prominent retailers of the city have rented a large building on 28th street, now in process of rebuilding, for the purpose of both a wholesale and retail business. The opinion also is general that one of the wholesale Brooklyn florists has leased the store at 58 West 28th street, with the intention of opening a branch wholesale department there, but investigation finds this enterprise unfounded.

One of the most prominent wholesalers of New York has near completion a book which will be called "Thirty Years in the Wholesale Florist Business" and which promises to be a most interesting production. No one is better fitted than the author, both by education and experience, for the writing of such a volume, and its issue will be awaited anxiously.

Some estimate of the enormous quantity of cut lilies to be offered at Easter may be had from the fact that in addition to a great number in pots, John Young alone will handle over twenty thousand cut blooms. Mr. Young estimates the average price of these to not go above fifteen dollars per hundred, and he is pretty good authority on the subject.

Moses Purdy, of the old firm of Purdy Bros., is continuing the wholesale business at 1590 Broadway.

Mr. B. J. Slinn visited the Carlisle Nursery Co. last week at Carlisle, Pa., and was the guest of Mr. Lindner, a wealthy shoe manufacturer of that city, who has undertaken the nursery and florist business in addition to his regular occupation, and who has already six houses, 300 by 25, devoted to cut flowers, and is building one this season 650 feet in length for roses.

Jack Gunther, who has been associated with his brother during the last fourteen years in the wholesale business, will celebrate his twenty-ninth birthday with a theater party given his many friends, on that occasion, which happens to be the very day on which the "Easter number" of the Review is printed. Gunther is handling a great many daffodils—"Princeps" and "Golden Spur"—an average of twenty thousand weekly shipped from the south; and expects a very large shipment of these flowers for Easter.

Fred Lentz, for many years with D. Clark's Sons, of upper Broadway, will be married on March 30, and his many friends extend congratulations.

David Clarke's Sons, whose store is one of the roomiest and most convenient in the world, have a magnificent display already of Easter plants and have arranged for an enormous trade this Easter, drawing largely upon their own greenhouses for blooming stock as well as on every great grower of this vicinity. This house was established in 1849, and its progress since that time has been continuous. The Messrs. Clarke are young gentlemen of sterling integrity and tireless energy, and their constant devotion to the interests of their customers is proverbial. They report a large out-of-town business amongst the prominent florists of the country.

J. B. Phillips, Jr., after six months' experience with one of the leading florist houses of Colorado Springs, has returned to Brooklyn and is again associated with his father in the Fulton street store of that city. He has some very pleasant things to say of his experience in the great west, and of the wonderful future for floriculture which is being developed there.

Mr. Langjahr, the Brooklyn florist, had the misfortune to lose one of his horses suddenly last week, so when he opens that new establishment in New York, he may decide to "make it an automobile" after all. Mr. Langjahr will attend the rose show this week at Philadelphia.

Messrs. Hicks & Crawbuck are a very busy firm these days with their two establishments in New York and Brooklyn, and have added largely during the past few weeks to their list of growers. They are doing quite an extensive business in shipping out-of-town orders and are much encouraged with the prospects for the Easter trade.

Sigmund Geller, the manufacturer and importer of florist supplies, has a fine assortment of Easter stock of all kinds, which is being disposed of rapidly. This gentleman's business has grown steadily, and the present season promises to be the largest of his experience. Mr. Geller is a genial gentleman of engaging manners and address, and his circle of business friends seems to be constantly growing.

The spring business of H. H. Berger & Co. has been most encouraging, and complete shipments of everything in stock in many lines is reported. As the season progresses the demand has increased, and the many years this firm has been in business since its inception in San Francisco until the present has established its reputation for business promptness and square dealing among the very best establishments of its class in this country.

The retail business of Peter Henderson & Co., on Cortlandt street, is phenomenal this year to date. An immense number of additional salesmen are employed, and the huge store is crowded constantly. No such opening of the planting season has ever been known here, the early spring and the large addition to the ranks of the commuters doubtless accounting for it.

J. M. Thorburn & Co. reported a similar condition of things in both their wholesale and retail departments, and are apparently overwhelmed with business. It is no small honor to be able to place at the head of their announcement the fact of its establishment one hundred and one years ago.

Reed & Keller's advertisement in the Easter number tells very plainly of the splendid novelties and inventions for which this firm is noted and by means of which, united with their enterprise, they are known amongst the leading florist supply houses of the world. Orders not only for the general line of necessities for Easter, but particularly for the new goods referred to in their advertisement, have been far beyond their expectations and their immense force is busy day and night.

The John J. Crooke Co. find their new quarters on Avenue D a wonderful improvement in every respect, as compared with the old stand. This establishment is fully up to date, with facilities unequalled, to maintain its reputation as the leading foil house of America.

Dunne & Co., whose horticultural supply house has become "a household word," reported a tremendous demand this season for their rustic construction work, of which they claim now to be the principal producers in this country. Their factory is working overtime, and their store on West 30th street has been transformed into an office, and center for sample exhibitions.

W. Elliott & Sons are sharing in the universal prosperity that seems to be the heritage of the seedsmen this spring, and with their busy Tuesday and Friday auctions added, the genial head of the house will have earned a day's recreation at the club's July outing.

Mr. Ward has returned from his southern trip in good health and ready for the strenuous carnation rooted-cutting season, which is now in full blast. There is a wonderful demand for his novelties of this year's introduction, and we shall have the pleasure shortly of commenting at further length upon the wonderful things accomplished by the Cottage Gardens from personal observation.

It was "Blue Monday" this week in the wholesale market. Violets are still in the "drug" business. Every woman in New York could wear a bunch and "still there is room." No use talking prices. If any man wants 10,000 a $20 bill would walk away with the lot. Smilax is increasing in value, and lilies begin to hold up their value in anticipation of Easter. Orchids maintain their prestige and price and are not over-abundant.

A visit to Herrmann's, on East 34th street, found the passageways of the big warehouse so crowded with packed boxes for Easter sales that locomotion was difficult. This house grows yearly, and maintains its good repute and adds daily to its customers.

L. J. Kreshover calls this his banner year. The quantity of wild smilax he handles would decorate every June wedding of all the years since the flood. His business connections in the south give him superior facilities, and he numbers amongst his customers the "cream of the trade." Mr. Kreshover contemplates a trip to Europe this summer.

Alex. McConnell, of Fifth avenue, will have a grand exhibit this Easter, utilizing his "annex" as usual and "bulging its sides," as is his custom, with the best that can be grown. His new catalogue this year is a gem, and his landscape work no small part of his enormous business.

Siebrecht & Son can now rejoice in the possession of the best facilities for their business they have ever enjoyed. Nothing quite so handy nor complete anywhere, with their big conservatory and greenhouse in the very center of the greatest society avenue of the continent. Their windows are a flower show in themselves.

Wadley & Smythe are making early preparations for their Newport branch, which enjoys the exceptional advantage of most favorable location there. Their plantings in that section aggregate an immense amount yearly. The store on Fifth avenue is resplendent already in Easter garb.

The ribbon houses of Lion & Wertheimer and Schloss Bros. report advance sales to florists of their "special brands" far in advance of any former years. Both establishments have some exceptional bargains and novelties.

N. Lecakes has been out of the city during the past week on a business trip amongst his supply houses and has a big force at work in Easter preparations.

Mr. Traendly, of Traendly & Schenck, reports an unusual interest already manifest concerning the club's annual outing July 1, and the program is already pretty well complete with advantageous contracts.

Riedel & Co. are fast increasing their clientele and seem much satisfied with their venture to date. Their growers' list is increasing weekly, and they have several attractive schemes "up their sleeves."

The veteran J. J. Perkins is quite delighted with his "branch," and under R. W.'s management, with repairs, painting and artistic window dressing, it looks as if it had "come to stay."

Wm. Sampson finds "paddling his own canoe" at the Coogan building quite as pleasant sailing as he anticipated, and a growing demand for his specialties.

Alex. Guttman will soon occupy the entire building at 52 West 29th street and so keep in touch constantly with his constituency. Numerous improvements are contemplated and additional room for his advancing wholesale business.

James A. Hammond finds his plant department quite beyond his space and could easily use double the size of his present quarters. He has a great stock of plants this season for the Easter demand and will have thousands of them "open for inspection."

"Extra quality" continues to be the brand emblazoned on the stock handled by Walter Sheridan. There will be "enough and to spare," as always, for Easter and for every day in the year. Roses and carnations are the specialties here and have been since 1882.

The "Pioneer House" still opens at 6 a. m., and has and will till the wholesale cut flower business vanishes from the earth. The years deal lightly with J. K. —his bowling is phenomenal—and, like all "early birds," he continues to catch the wide-awake "worms," as he deserves to.

Bradshaw & Hartman have had a strenuous year, full of new enterprises and profitable ventures. They have leased their present quarters for a long term and are awake to all opportunities that present themselves and not slow to grasp them.

Julius Lang's store is roomy, neat and attractive, like its proprietor, and holds "the even tenor of its way," and has so long that it has become one of the West 30th street "landmarks."

Ford Bros. find their enlarged store even now not sufficiently ample for the immense shipments that come to them. They anticipate an old time Easter, with some varieties aggregating beyond the 100,000 on Saturday, a not unusual event with them.

The "Lily King" was never so happy in Easter facilities as now. The conservatory is "just the thing he needed," and the shipments arranged for of the Easter flower cut and in pots, will enable him easily to maintain his title.

It is a pleasure to introduce to floriculture one of its most enterprising constituents, so that the trade may greet him "face to face." Mr. Ghormley is a gentleman whose greeting in our advertising pages brings him in touch with growers everywhere, so that you can no longer say you are "unacquainted." A peep into his big store on 28th street during his "busy hour" is "a sight for sore eyes."

John Raynor, Traendly & Schenck, Ed. Horan, Young & Nugent, Thos. Young and W. S. Allen, complete the "charmed circle" that make 28th street the busy mart of wholesale floriculture in this city, a street where multitudes of flower buyers do congregate.

Talking about enterprise, one of the "coming men" in the wholesale list is James McManus, whose demonstration in the center of your spring issue speaks for itself, and is a lasting credit to this ambitions and energetic man. He has the "lines well laid" for his greatest Easter, and says no matter how great the demand for orchids and lilies, the stock will be on hand to supply it.

To all who have enterprisingly combined to manifest their confidence in your progressive journal and to our friends everywhere, we wish a happy and profitable Easter, and many more of them.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

A BRAZILIAN EPISODE.

"It's a pity to spoil a chap's complexion on them roofs," remarked Jaggs, wiping his scarlet countenance on a red bandanna, and thereby removing a few strips of skin from his sunburnt nose. "Worst of it is anyone lookin' at me might think me some blitherin' idiot just broke loose off the golf links."

"You always did look like you belonged to the leisure classes, Jaggs, specially when you was at work," remarked Tommy, with appreciation.

The Lonesomehurst aggregation was grouped in the shade at the end of the potting shed. They were mending roofs, an occupation always saved up for the dog days and the boss had given them three hours off at noon as a precaution against possible sunstroke. Their complexions varied from that of a well-broiled lobster to a copper Indian, and all were looking with some interest at a stone jar in which Davie had compounded a weird combination of ice water, molasses, vinegar and oatmeal.

"It's like all the rest o' these here Frances Willard cocktails," remarked Jaggs, as he sampled the brew, "about all a discriminatin' man can say for 'em is as they're wet. Haven't none o' you chaps got nothink to smoke?"

"Better try Davie; he's the only bloomin' capitalist we've got," advised Tommy. "I've been buyin' my baccy on the nod for a week, and it don't go any more."

Davie laid down the four-inch pot that formed his drinking cup, and handed over his tobacco bag, with a suggestion that Jaggs might be a bit more provident.

"But then," observed Jaggs, as he filled his corncob pipe, "if I ain't what you call provident, there's always some other chaps as is, and we just merges our interests. J. Pierpont Morgan don't have to be near as provident as the poor chaps that put up their bloomin' dough for him!"

The fireman, who had tramped down to the river under the impression that a swim would cool him off, dropped heavily on to the grass, with defamatory remarks about the tropical weather. "Wish I was back in Duluth," he grumbled.

"That's so," observed Tommy, "a chap I knew in Chicago tells me as the coldest winter he ever went through was a summer in Duluth."

"Better not talk about tropical weather, either," said Jaggs, "till you've been a bit nearer the tropics than Hoboken. When I think o' the way I've hiked through them tropic forests, where it was hot enough to make a chap wish he could take off his complexion, dodgin' snakes and cannibals, and gettin' nothink for it except a lot o' useful information—well, I don't know as I regret it, on the whole. Anyway, it makes a chap know when he's jolly well off."

"That's so," said Tommy, "only I never know a chap in the flower business yet as felt satisfied—not if he was bein' fed on toasted angels."

"Plant collectin' ain't all beer and skittles, anyway," continued Jaggs. "I don't know as I ever tell you about that time I was up the Amazon. Nice, cheerful country; looks all right on a map, but when you get there that bloomin' river is chasin' itself all over the country, instead o' stayin' in its own little bed, and the river boats goes skirmishin' through the trees like as though the East River had broke into Central Park. Nothink unusual there to see a chap sittin' up a tree fishin', till a crockydile sauntered along and chased him into the top branches."

Jaggs broke off while Davie passed around another serving of his innocuous beverage, and then continued:

"It's sing'lar, what kind o' bric-a-brac them bloomin' savages collects. Them Dyaks I was tellin' you about in Borneo—leastways, I'll tell you about 'em someday—they collects a chap's head. I came precious near leavin' a little souvenir there myself; they was very keen about it, too. Up the Amazon, them bloomin' niggers ain't really in the swim till they've collected a few casual shinbones from passin' travelers. They makes 'em into flutes. I never was what you call a musical chap, and I made up my mind as there be a Jake Smith seance first if any of 'em even tries to make me join the orchestra, but I never thought as a fishy old one-eyed pelican 'ud save my life. There ain't nothink romantic about a pelican, but then the truth generally ain't romantic anyway."

Jaggs paused to fill up his pipe, and then strolled out into the sun to look at the thermometer, which was making a century run without any visible effort.

"I don't know as I ever told you about that there tricolor variety o' Victoria lily; I reckon as them aquatic chaps 'ud walk twenty mile to see it. I got wind of it up one o' the Amazon tributaries, the Rio de Pajama, and it was me to get that lily, or bust. You know the way Regia opens up red the second day—well, that variety o' mine was red the first day, blue the second, and then opened up pearly white.

"Well, you never see nothink like the country we went through. The cannibals eat two of our poor chaps, as strayed off into the woods, and I tell you I felt pretty lonesome nights, shut up in my tent, listenin' to the vampires yelpin' outside."

"Vampires," said Davie, sententiously, "is imaginary beasts—I'm surprised at ye, Jaggs."

"Vampire bats is not imaginary," retorted Jaggs. "All the time I was up the Rio de Pajama it wasn't safe for a chap to sit outside after dark unless he was covered with wire netting. The air was full of 'em, like Jersey mosquitoes, the size of a Plymouth Rock hen. I see a horse pretty near eat by 'em onee.

"Well, as I was sayin', we got up the river, and started tryin' to get some lily roots, but it was a mighty hard job. I was the only white man in the crowd, and the natives as was handlin' the boats had some silly notion as they'd never go to Heaven if they was eat by cannibals, or somethink o' that sort, so they was always balkin' or shyin'. I didn't feel like arguin' with 'em, because I thought like as not they'd knife me when I wasn't lookin'. One day I strolled up the river a bit, after havin' a few words with the boatmen because they wanted to hitch up and start right off. I was all alone, except for a bloomin' old pelican, about two sizes larger than an ostrich, as had took to follerin' me about, because I used to throw him a stray fish now and then. The old beggar had pretty near give up fishin' o nhis own account, which shows the demoralizin' effect o' the higher civilization. Well, I sits down on a swingin' vine as hangs from a tree, after makin' sure as it was a vine and not a boar constrictor, and puffs at my pipe, and thinks of my old mother down at Penzance, and how there wasn't a bottle o' Bass within 700 miles till I begins to feel quite low in my spirits. Just then the old pelican says 'quawk' in a bass voice, and gives a wink with his one eye. I looks through the trees behind me, and there I see a war party o' cannibals strollin' up on three sides o' where I sat. The fourth side was the river full o' crockydiles about the size o' tugboats. I hadn't a gun, nor nothink else except my baccy box. Says I to myself: 'Jaggs, old man, you're it.' Just then old Jonah, the pelican, opens his mouth to say 'quawk' again, and an inspiration—I can't call it nothink else—come into my mind. I pressed his big bill open, strokin' him kind o' gently, and just afore the first o' the cannibals come up I was tucked away safe in the pelican's pouch! All them disreputable niggers see was a one-eyed pelican lookin' like he was takin' a doze after an uncommon full meal.''

There was a momentary silence, while the narrator refreshed himself with another cup of catmeal water.

''I did wish once or twice as old Jonah 'nd be a bit more partie'lar in brushin' his teeth; uncommon fishy it was in there. However, he got me out of a tight scrape—I've had a likin' for pelicans ever since. Hullo, here's the boss; I reckon school's out,'' and the Lonesomehurst outfit proceeded to load up their pipes, ready for another happy gathering on the broiling roofs.

BOSTON.

There may be "sermons in stones, and books in the running brooks." Surely there are stones in the running brooks, and formerly there were sermons in the good bishop of that name, but there is not much of an oration in the floral situation here, unless demonstrated by a more eloquent pen. We are simply stitching along in the same old seam, and doing pretty good work for the date. There is no surplus of first-class material of any kind, nor of anything that can be used in funeral work, except lilies, which are coming too freely, as also are red roses of a poor quality. Violet growers escape a surplus in their line by picking only as many as they expect to dispose of. And you must not say "jonquils" to a man in that business unless you are going to favor him with an order. He doesn't like to be reminded of them otherwise.

There is a small chapter in Mr. E. N. Peirce's visit to the Bermuda Islands. Wholesale dealers in lily bulbs told him so many fairy tales about that region that he went to have a look at their wares in their native haunts, and he now knows a thing or two for himself, and you can bet he knows how to use his knowledge when selling agents approach him. It seems that most of the bulbs are produced in the valleys of one rather small island about eighteen miles long by from two to three miles broad, and the best ones are sure to go to England. Three diseases are common and not much guarded against, except in the case of one of them, which results in non-production of a bulb. All these diseases Mr. Peirce attributes to depreciation in quality of seed, caused by marketing all the better grades of bulbs and propagating from poorer ones.

Mr. Peirce cannot make any kind of a trip, short or long, without combining both business and pleasure. I will warrant some of the Bermuda Islanders will remember him in both roles. Incidentally, he chose his grower and contracted for his whole crop of bulbs for fall delivery, and another season will demonstrate concerning the business value of his trip.

The co-operative market people expect to occupy their new quarters on Columbus avenue April 6 for the first time.

PHILADELPHIA.

American Rose Society.

The annual exhibition of the American Rose Society opened in this city Tuesday evening. The quality of the roses shown was very fine, and the number of varieties unusually large.

John Burton won the Lord & Burnham cup and the $100 prize with fifty superbly grown Beauties. B. F. Dorrance won the $100 prize for best exhibit of cut roses, showing twelve varieties, twenty-five blooms each, all splendidly grown. The Liberties were a feature; A. Fahrenwald was first and Dorrance second, with fifty blooms that were simply magnificent.

Testout was shown in fine form. John N. May showed General McArthur, a new rose. Peter Crowe was first on well grown Gates, Maids and Brides. The absence of New York Beauties was noticed with regret. They felt it was no use coming. One grower said Philadelphia did well. Her roses stand higher than ever.

On Wednesday Breitmeyer's seedling, a cross between Bride-maid and Testout, was awarded a silver medal.

The Market.

The cut flower market is very quiet, hardly justifying any special comment. The mild weather (on many nights, it has been over 60 degrees) has brought in great quantities of rather soft flowers, entirely too many to be disposed of advantageously. Southern single daffodils have been arriving in immense quantities, one dealer alone, S. S. Pennock, received over 125,000 in one week. All were sold, but, as can be readily imagined, they brought extremely low prices.

Indications point to an improvement next week with cooler weather. It is not improbable that really fine roses and carnations will be in but moderate supply, while it is feared that violets will be quite scarce. There will certainly be great quantities of Easter lilies and other bulbous flowers. Indications point to a heavy demand.

Florists' Supplies.

The supply men, for which this city is noted, are extremely busy now. Just as activity in the stock market usually indicates an improvement in general business, so the rush of business that comes to florists is always foreshadowed by the rush in the supply houses. The two leading firms in this city, and it may be fairly said in this country, H. Bayersdorfer & Co. and M. Rice & Co., are now experiencing a tremendous demand, which requires all their efforts to meet.

M. Rice & Co. have an assortment of beautiful baskets in so called Easter shades of yellow, pink and white, most delicate and pleasing to the eye. A broad basket of deep green with tin pan to fit suitable for bulbous flowers is attractive and inexpensive. They have many other pretty things besides all the standard Easter necessaries.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. received two immense shipments by steamer last week, which are being rapidly distributed all over the country. They have a grand lot of cycas leaves and wreaths, a silken cord to give the finishing touch to baskets and plant hampers, and a great warehouse full of everything the heart of the retailer can desire.

Easter Plants.

There is every reason to believe that the demand for blooming plants will be greater than ever this season. Robert Craig & Son have an immense stock, larger even than usual, of superbly grown plants. They have five large houses filled with lilies. The finest are planted three in an 8-inch azalea pot; these azalea pots are 6 inches deep, half way between a pot and pan. Then there are a couple of houses of plants in 6-inch pots with from 4 to 8 buds apiece. Another size, intended chiefly for cutting, have less than 4 buds on each stem. All are well hardened, clothed right down to the pot with rich green foliage. One of our brightest retailers gave merely a glance at this stock and placed his advance order for a couple of hundred pots.

Two large houses were filled with as fine a lot of azaleas as one could wish to see. Quite a number of carefully trained plants were placed on pedestals to shape nicely, but the bulk of the stock is grown in the flat compact form so popular with our Belgian friends. A novelty was large oval-shaped pans, originally used for Lorraine begonias filled with nearly a dozen of the smaller sized azaleas planted in a compact mass. The varieties grown are chiefly the old standard white, rose red and pink and white.

There are two houses of well grown Ramblers, one filled with large the other with medium-sized plants, not perhaps so tall as in previous years, but exceptionally well flowered, every plant covered with clusters of buds. Another house contained a long bench of Magna Charta roses in 6-inch pots, looking the picture of health, nearly every shoot topped with a bud.

The new spirea Gladstone, in several sizes of pots and pans, presented a fine appearance, with numerous and heavy flower spikes. Rhododendrons, genistas, hydrangeas and a variety of bulbous stock completed this large and varied assortment of flowering plants.

Notes.

Leo Niessen is handling thousands of bunches of pansies right along.

D. D. L. Farson is now with the Edison Electric Light Co.

Robert Craig & Son flowered a lot of dwarf Japanese cherries for the rose show. They were very pretty.

Whetstone & Co. make a specialty of wrought iron pipe.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have a fine collection of Easter plants.

Gardenias will be very plentiful here during April.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving some fine calla lilies.

The flowers at the funeral of Hugh Graham were of exceptionally fine quality, most tastefully arranged.

The Florists' Club banquet was held in Horticultural Hall on Wednesday evening.

The appointment of G. C. Watson as a member of the executive committee of the S. A. F. has given pleasure to his many friends here. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

At the present time there is plenty of first-class stock in the market, although there is no actual glut. Still there is more of some kinds of stock than can be disposed of and prices have fallen somewhat. The few beautiful days we had brought about the sudden oversupply, but this (Monday) morning it looks like the approach of winter. It is cold and quite a bit of snow is falling. This will no doubt hurt trees and shrubs, which are somewhat advanced in leaf.

Some of the bulb stock has become a drug on the market and plenty of Von Sions are being dumped, along with colored tulips. Other bulb stock is quite plentiful, but sells better. Harrisii and longiflorum are scarce at present, but callas are very plentiful.

The pleasant feature the past week at the wholesale market was that first-class roses were more plentiful and prices not so high. Some extra fine Beauties the past week brought only $3 per dozen, and good Beauties could be bought as low as $1.50 per dozen. Brides and Maids held up the price on the best stock, same with Gates and Meteors. There were quite a few nice Perles in at $5. All seconds and thirds in roses sold very cheap.

The warm days did not have a good effect on shipped carnations and a great many slept soundly soon after getting into the wholesalers' hands. The best stock is down to $4 and good stock is down to $2.

Violets were dumped right and left for a few days the past week, but Saturday, took a sudden jump and were in big demand. The Saturday Evening Post had it that fifteen millions of violets were sold that day and estimated that it took thirty acres of ground to raise the violets sold here today, each plant bearing about forty flowers in a season. It also stated that in New Orleans they were selling at $1 per bunch, in Chicago at 25 cents, in St. Louis at 5 to 15 cents, in San Francisco at 25 cents, and in New York at $2. Just think of it, how nice that would be for us if it were only true!

Notes.

J. F. Windt, the Bayard avenue florist, celebrated the 25th anniversary of his marriage last week. Mr. and Mrs. Windt held a reception at their residence and many old friends of the happy couple sent elegant presents. The singing society to which Mr. Windt belongs gave them a serenade in a body.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a caller. Martin lost his moustache in Detroit and he hardly looked himself.

The Ellison Floral Co. opened up its new store at 3568 Olive street last week. The incorporators are Claude P. Berry, a lawyer; Harry Y. Ellison, and Alice Y. Ellison. The latter two are the children of Mrs. William Ellison, of Ellison & Tesson.

Mrs. William Ellison has left the firm of Ellison & Tesson, on Grand avenue, and will become manager of the Ellison Floral Co., which opened up last week.

J. H. Billington will on April 1 open a new retail store at 5415 Easton avenue. The front greenhouse is 25x25 with an extension of 10x65. Mr. Billington was formerly a grower on Belt avenue.

R. F. Tesson, who spent a few days in Chicago and Milwaukee, is back and reports having a good time. He is very proud of being high man in his bunch in the bowling match in Milwaukee. J. J. B.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Conditions have changed but little from last week, though roses may possibly be a trifle scarcer. The pleasant weather was of short duration and there is still a shortage of good roses and carnations. Though quotations are unchanged there is a smaller proportion of roses in the $3 class and more in the $5 to $8 classes. It is much the same with carnations. The prices are unchanged but the quality gradations are not so sharply defined. Long Beauties are held stiffly up to quotations, and mediums are in especially brisk demand. Violets move slowly. There are heavy receipts of southern single narcissus and daffodils from the south and they are sold at $5 to $10 per 1000, going slowly at that.

Predictions as to the supply for Easter are necessarily little but guesswork. Many growers who are usually important factors in the lily supply will have but few this year, but again there are others not usually strong in this department who will have a heavy cut ready. It looks as though we may average up with previous years. Of other bulbous flowers there will be the usual supply. The rose and carnation crop for Easter is still dependent upon the weather.

Various Items.

Easter plants was the subject for discussion at the meeting of the Florists' Club Wednesday evening.

Mr. L. Coatsworth of Benthey & Co. is on a trip south. He will visit Memphis, New Orleans and other southern cities.

Mr. Geo. M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo., is in the city.

The quotation on lilies in the advertisement of McKellar & Winterson in this issue should be $15 instead of $18 to $20. The error was not noted until the form containing the adv. had been printed.

The office of the S. Wilks Mfg. Co., makers of the Wilks boiler, is now at its new factory, Thirty-fifth street and Shields avenue, to which address all letters should be sent.

A. L. Randall has returned from his visit east.

The Lilly Chemical Co. has been carrying on exhaustive experiments for a year past with a view to producing an insecticide that would exterminate thrips without injuring the plants. Bassett & Washburn, who have been in a position to watch these experiments, say the desired result has been attained and that the greenhouse career of Mr. Thrips is about at an end. The insecticide is a fumigating powder, and disposes of greenfly as well as thrips. It is being placed on the market by E. H. Hunt.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade did not have much snap to it, the weather being entirely too warm; but there was no surplus of stock, as the supply was very limited, and prices did not suffer to any great extent.

Roses are coming in very nicely and selling well. Brides, Bridesmaids and Gates are just about equal to the demand. There are not enough Meteors and Liberties to go around. There has been a large increase in the supply of American Beauties, and they find a ready market. The price on long-stemmed ones has dropped somewhat, but they still bring a very good figure. A few Franz Deegen are seen now and then, and they sell well.

Carnations are short in supply, and the outlook for the near future is pretty bad. There are scarcely enough to fill all orders, and the price is holding up very well.

Bulbous stock is selling very well, especially Harrisii lilies, which sell on sight. Callas are not doing so well. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths are finding a ready market. Narcissi are also selling well. The market is flooded at present with outdoor-grown daffodils, and they sell for whatever the purchaser will give.

The supply of violets is fast giving out, and the quality is very poor in most cases. A few Princess of Wales can be had, which are of pretty fair quality, and they are quickly bought up. The price has advanced also. Sweet peas are coming very slowly, and it is just as well that it is so, as there is not much demand for them at present. Smilax is still scarce, there being scarcely any on the market. Asparagus is growing more plentiful and sells readily.

Various Items.

T. W. Hardesty & Co. had the decoration for the banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, which was held at the St. Nicholas. Great quantities of flowers were used and the effect was very pretty.

The firm of Corbett & Wilson, which has been doing business for a number of years, with greenhouses at College Hill, has dissolved, George Corbett buying out the interest of Mr. Wilson. Mr. Corbett will continue the business.

Julius Baer had one of the most attractive window displays seen on Fourth street for some time. Hundreds of light pink tulips in flats and vases were used, banked closely together, intermingled with green. It was a very beautiful sight, and attracted a great deal of attention.

The special meeting of the florists society was held last Saturday night. The attendance was not very large, but the members quickly got to work, and a schedule for the two flower shows, to be given during the Cincinnati fall festival in September, was adopted. It remains only to be accepted by the Festival Association, which meets March 26, when the fate of the schedule will be decided.

Visitors were: Mr. C. P. Dietrich, of Maysville, Ky.; Walter Mott, the well-known seedsman, and Martin Reukauf, of Philadelphia. C. J. OHMER.

BALTIMORE.

Rain, rain, rain has filled the programme and the water courses for nearly an entire week; trees are bursting into leaf and blossom; shrubs are coming into flower, and every indication points to a phenomenally early spring, with the tolerably sure sequel of frosts and destruction of fruits and blooms.

Trade begins the week today (March 23) with apathy, due, perhaps, to the dull and weeping skies. The supply of all cut flowers is more than adequate to the demand. This is especially true of carnations. Good roses are not in over supply. Dutch stock is abundant, and it would seem that the great quantity offering now will diminish the Easter supplies.

Gardeners' Club Carnation Show.

The carnation show of the Gardeners' Club is being held this afternoon and evening. The rain affects this display also. What it lacks in quantity is made up in quality. Halliday Bros. have decorated the hall with some fine statured palms, etc., and show handsome vases of Estelle, Queen Louise, Joost and two seedlings (white) of their own raising. One of these is of especially fine shape and substance, with good stem. Weber & Sons send down good samples of Gov. Lowndes, Genevieve Lord and Bradt. John G. Rider has extra good Lawsons, Joosts and Bradts; Lehr Bros., White Cloud and Lawson; F. C. Bauer, Prosperity and his unnamed orange and scarlet. W. Hannigan, gardener to Gen. Garey, has vases of carnations and roses; John Cook, a number of choice seedling roses and carnations; Chas. M. Wagner, cinerarias and carnations; Philip B. Welsh, tulips and narcissus.

A number of the boys go over tomorrow to the rose show at Philadelphia, and incidentally for a bowling match with the Quakers.

The shamrock cut quite a figure in the trade here on St. Patrick's day, and was more in evidence than ever before in our recollection. A number of store windows were decorated with baskets and pots of the plant, mostly guaranteed "imported from the old sod."

R.

MILWAUKEE.

The robins arrived and have been with us now for nearly two weeks, indicating an unusually early spring. Crocuses are in bloom in southern exposures, and tulips and hyacinths are up several inches. The warm weather the past week, coupled with copious rains, started the grass into growth.

Roses and carnations are coming in more plentifully, but the demand keeps pace with the supply. There is also enough bulb stock to go around, except daffodils, which have shortened up considerably. Violets have dropped off somewhat in quantity, owing to the warm weather. Retarded Easter lilies are now making rapid headway, although indications are for a short supply. Sweet peas are quite plentiful.

The Executive Committee of the S. A. F. and O. H. spent two days with our local club last week. Considerable business of importance was transacted, and a valuable programme to interest the craft for the coming convention in August was laid out. Tuesday evening the club tendered the visitors a banquet at the Pfister hotel. Aside from the business sessions the committee was shown our bowling alleys, which are well adapted for a large gathering of the bowling fraternity of the S. A. F. Also many other places of interest were visited before the committee, all the members of which we expect to see again in August, departed for home. Among the delegates were John Burton and Geo. C. Watson, of Philadelphia; Robt. Tesson, of St. Louis; Secretary Wm. J. Stewart, of Boston; J. C. Vaughan and Phil Hauswirth, of Chicago; E. Buettner, of Park Ridge, Ill., and Alex. Wallace, of New York.

The army of Dutchmen have come and gone. The last ones to force sales were 100 per cent cheaper than the early callers.

C. C. Pollworth has been confined to his bed the past week, and is not yet able to be around.

J. J. McHutchison spent Sunday in the city.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Summer has had an inning the past ten days—70 to 80 degrees. It brought flowers out fast, easing the shipping market considerably, but there are no more than enough carnations to meet the demand. Roses are plentiful today, scarce tomorrow. Easter lilies are beginning to pop out, and pot plants for Easter are beginning to flower. There will be lots of pot plants for Easter. Prices remain about the same as at my last report, with supply about equal to demand.

A tragedy occurred Monday morning that has cast a gloom over the florists. Henry Smith's greenhouses burned out. The fire was supposed to have been caused by an explosion of the lantern of the night fireman, Daniel McQueen. As the fireman was burned to death, the exact particulars will never be known. Oliver Baily was badly burned and rescued with great difficulty. The boarding house for the men was over the shed, with fourteen men in it, and although one man, who was already up and milking the cow in the near-by barn, gave a prompt alarm, the fire burned so quickly that the escape of the men through the doorway was cut off, but one man managing to get out that way. The rest jumped from the windows, and several jumped through the greenhouse roof and were more or less cut by the glass. A portion only of the plant is a total loss. Those houses farthest removed from the shed and barns (all of which burned) including water tanks, were saved, and every effort was made to get the heating apparatus in running order before any damage could be done by the cold. When the fire reached the pump house the gasoline tank exploded, completely wrecking the large building in which it was located. Here no one was hurt. The damage amounts to about $40,000. The work of rebuilding will proceed at once. All the insurance carried was $500. Every florist in town visited the scene of the conflagration.

The first regular meeting of the Florists' Club was to have been held at the Board of Trade rooms, but no one thought of the meeting when the fire was announced.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

It has been a long time since I paid a visit to the Lake View Rose Gardens, during which interval rapid strides have been made in that mammoth establishment. Superintendent Roney has the advantage of having grown up, as it were, with the plant, and consequently finds it much easier to keep in touch with such an immense business. Just one-half day was consumed in going through the houses and noting the various stocks being grown. Now that Easter is not far off, flowering plants are receiving close attention. Alec Scott has charge of this department, and pointed out a grand lot of rhododendrons, lilacs, Ramblers, lilies and the like. And, by the way, speaking of lilies, what is the matter with the Japan longiflorum this year? A report from all the growers would make interesting reading. Those who banked on Harrisii are "in it" this season.

In green goods the Boston fern is grown in large numbers—splendid plants—for which there is a good, steady demand. Palms are well grown, also ferns for dishes. This branch has enlarged of late. Asparagus and smilax are grown in large quantities, but it has been impossible to supply the demand, which has been phenomenal this season.

Passing to the carnation houses by way of a propagating house filled with a thrifty looking lot of cuttings, I noted Norway doing finely. Mr. Roney speaks highly of this variety, which is doing much better this year than last. In fact, he considers it the best in the large list of whites grown here. Genesee comes next, being an excellent medium variety. Both are clean and very prolific. Crocker is seen to advantage. A year ago nothing was too bad for it, or, I should say, there was very little to be said in its favor. But here it is and one of the paying pinks. Lawson, of course, is pre-eminent, then Joost, Marquis, Cressbrook in the order named. Apollo is the best scarlet; Crane and America come next. Prosperity is a prosperous variety. The change from benches to solid beds seems to be in favor of the latter, some benches having been retained for comparison.

The question of tiled versus solid beds is in favor of the solid beds, particularly with roses. I noted beds directly opposite each other—the one tiled, the other an ordinary well drained bottom. There was a slightly stronger growth on plants growing in the old style bed. I noted another change, which was a series of shelves running overhead at an angle not to exclude light. Each shelf is filled with sufficient rose stock to plant that particular house. The shelf has a patent fastening which enables it to be placed at pleasure. Beauty is grown on a larger scale than formerly. Liberty and Meteor are both well grown. Brides and Maids would be hard to beat anywhere just now.

The promise of heavy crops for Easter is seen in every house, not excepting the seedling carnations, amongst which are some promising youngsters. Mr. Roney is a skeptic on seedlings, and one of the last to take hold of a new variety, but when he saw a box of blooms from L. E. Marquisee, of Syracuse, just received by Mr. Broadhead (who is constantly on the lookout for a new thing that is of startling merit) he admitted that Flamingo, Albatross and Sunbird were three birds that had come to stay.

I noticed a new variety of perpetual sweet peas—dwarf habit, very free.

Before leaving I was shown the site upon which it is proposed to build another block of forty-five houses, each 225 x14 feet, to embrace all up-to-date ideas.

Before leaving town I looked in on Walter Mott, who had just returned from a successful Eastern trip. Seed business has opened up well.

Mr. Francis Smith, father of F. Sydney Smith, died of paralysis March 18. He was 78 years of age, and had been in poor health for about three years.

Mr. Smith has never been actively engaged in the florist business, but about two and a half years ago he purchased the old Bernie Fohl place, and which has been operated by Baur & Smith during the past four years. Besides the member of this firm, he leaves a wife, one son and four daughters.

A Business Opportunity.

20,000 feet of glass, well stocked and in good condition; also a city retail store with a well established, profitable trade, for sale at a bargain.

Owner would prefer to sell the houses and keep the store, taking, if desired, the output of the houses; or would sell an interest in the business to a competent, pushing grower.

This is an opportunity for a grower to establish himself near to one of the best markets in the country, or for a storeman and a grower to mutually acquire, on favorable terms, a desirable plant and a store with an established, profitable trade.

This is a proposition that will bear careful investigation. Address,

Seed Trade News.

BOSTON, MASS.—Joseph Breck & Sons say: "The season in New England, as elsewhere, is unusually early, and the demand for a great many items that are usually called for and planted in April, has already begun. Peas, both sweet and culinary, have been planted in many districts in a small way. Grass in favored positions is bright green and some of the gardeners have already started to run the mower. All the seed houses in Boston are unusually busy and already in some of them work goes on until 10 p. m. The expectation is that the season will be an exceptionally good one unless broken in upon by unpropitious weather. There is, of course, the usual complaint about scarcity of some articles, especially Wardwell's kidney beans, dwarf wrinkled peas, cucumbers and corn. The condition of the Connecticut and New York corn crops is well known and no further deliveries are expected from these quarters. It seems difficult, however, to get information from the growers further west as to what the shipments will be, consequently some of the seedsmen here have stopped taking orders for corn until some correct information is forthcoming. The prevailing opinion, however, seems to be that supplies will be fairly good as soon as the growers are able to secure cars in which to make shipments. Altogether, New England and Boston especially, is experiencing and expecting a long and prosperous spring."

NEW YORK—At all the seed stores large forces, including much extra help, are busy sending out early orders, which in volume are far beyond the average to date. The stock of some varieties has been already depleted, and extra buying is already necessary.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Bailey & Sons report that alfalfa seed in this part of the country is well cleaned up and that they are unable to fill orders at 12 to 13 cents per lb. Spring seed trade is only just beginning, as we have had a hard winter and there is still much snow on the ground.

BISMARCK, N. D.—O. H. Will & Co. report trade about the same as last year to date, which they consider good, as last year's trade was double that of any previous year.

THE postoffice bill, which provides for mailing catalogues in bulk, the same as newspapers, will be hailed with delight by all seedsmen doing a catalogue trade.

RICHLAND, WIS.—Harry Leonard has purchased a half interest in the Helt seed store and the firm will be known as Helt & Leonard.

SEED sweet corn is practically unobtainable and prices are soaring. We hear of as much as $10 a bushel being paid for it.

THE warm weather of last week almost swamped the seedsmen with orders and the change to cooler weather was welcome.

THE PRICE on yellow onion sets is phenomenally low.

GREENFIELD, O.—Theodore Miller has sold his place here and has removed to Ironton, Ohio, where he has purchased the establishment of Mr. W. F. Therkildson, which is four times as large as his former place here.

LINCOLN, ILL.—The nursery business of W. E. Jones & Son was sold at public sale by order of court March 12. The property was purchased by J. W. Jones, of Detroit, Mich., for $2,000.

A NEW LAW in Idaho requires all dealers in nursery stock imported from other states to give a bond for the faithful observance of all the provisions of the inspection act.

There has been no change worthy of record the past two weeks and probably will not be until the beginning of Easter week. If any difference can be noted it is a slight tendency toward improvement. The shipments continue profuse, the quality excellent. There will be enough and to spare of everything for Easter, and if "salted stock" is tabooed and reasonable consideration is shown for each other by growers, wholesalers and retailers, this ought to be the happiest Easter of the century, or any century.

Salt Lake City, Utah—The establishments of the Salt Lake Floral Co. and the Huddart Floral Co. have been purchased by J. S. Bransford and consolidated into one concern to be known as the Salt Lake-Huddart Floral Co. The company will have three uptown stores, one at the office of the old Salt Lake Floral Co., another at the greenhouses of the Huddart Floral Co. and a third in the new Deseret News building. J. S. Bransford is president of the company, and P. T. Huddart, the former owner of the Huddart establishment, will be director and general manager of the greenhouses.

UTICA, N. Y.

Well, the battle has been fought and we acknowledge our defeat. A delegation of Syracuse florists visited this city on Wednesday, March 18, as the guests of the Utica Florists' Club. They visited the greenhouses of Rowlands, Pfeiffer, Mathews and Crowe, and spent some time in visiting other places of interest. At 6:30 o'clock in company with the Utica florists they went to the Arcanum Club, where a fine dinner had been prepared by Caterer Stockhauser. They remained there until about 8:30, at which time they left for Mannerchor Hall, where a bowling contest was held. The scores were:

It can be seen from the above scores that the visitors were victorious by the small margin of fifteen pins. The best work for the Uticas was done by Baker, Spencer, Pfeiffer and Day, and for Syracuse by Heller, Jr., and Brant. The visitors left for home at 12:30 this morning, after having had a most enjoyable time. Among the out-of-town florists present were Benjamin Evans, of Schnectady, N. Y.; H. S. Brant, of Madison, N. J.; M. Powers, of Canajoharie, N. Y., and Stewart Hakes, of Ilion, N. Y.

Mr. H. S. Brant, of Madison, N. J., was here last week for a couple of days, the guest of Peter Crowe, and we were very much pleased to make his acquaintance. A few days before we also had the pleasure of meeting another New Jersey florist, Mr. Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J.

Mr. Van Teylenger, representative of Van Zanten & Co., Holland, was a caller a few days ago.

We have had some very warm weather here for a few days past. Seventy-seven degrees in the shade was a little too warm for most Easter stock. Lilies will be short.

S.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The executive committee of the New England Association of Park Superintendents met here March 18 and arranged for the annual field meeting of the association, to be held in Albany June 23, 24 and 25. The party included Messrs. Fitts of Providence, Egerton of Albany, Anthony of Taunton, Wirth and Parker of Hartford, Richardson of Concord, Hemingway of Worcester and Pettigrew and Duncan of Boston.

They spent the following day in visiting the different parts of the city under the able guidance of Commissioners Hadwen and Hart and Superintendent Hemingway.

TORONTO.

Trade during the past week has been very good, and both wholesale and retail men give a very good report of business.

There has been a noticeable decrease in bulb stock during the last week. This is accounted for by the rush of stock that came in with the warm weather, and now there is nothing to follow it.

It is very hard at present to forecast the supply for Easter. We notice that many of the growers who had azaleas and other plants which they expected to have right for Easter, are bringing them into the market now, and if the present temperature continues we fear much of the bulb stock, as well as plants, will be over.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, March 7, and wound up the business in connection with the Carnation show.

F. Simcoe Chambers, who has been ill for some time, died at the home of his father, Mr. John Chambers, parks and gardens commissioner, March 21, aged 24 years. The sympathy of all is extended to Mr. Chambers and family.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Business and the weather have been had the past week. Four days of our old-fashioned keen northeast storms is enough to discourage almost anybody.

George Borden is on the sick list.

W. H. Davenport is suffering with a very sore hand, having run a rusty wire nail into it.

The New Bedford Horticultural Club had a meeting Tuesday evening, March 10. "How to Grow Asters" was the principal topic for the evening. It was voted to have regular meetings every second Tuesday in each month. Thomas White, A. J. Fish, E. M. Munson, C. L. Paine and E. I. Lawrence were appointed an entertainment committee. Chas. A. Tuell, Mortimer Searles and S. S. Peckham were appointed a finance committee, with Chas. A. Tuell as chairman. The executive committee has organized with Dennis Shea as chairman and Jas. Gattley as secretary. C. B. Knickman, of Rutherford, N. J., was present at the meeting.

The New Bedford Florists' Club had a meeting Thursday evening, March 12, and accepted the constitution and set of by-laws that the committee had written up. The following officers were elected: R. E. Nofftz, president; Jas. H. Cleary, vice president; Wm. P. Peiree, secretary; H. V. Sowle, treasurer; E. H. Chamberlin, A. B. Hathaway and E. Y. Peirce, executive committee. Mr. F. T. Munson, of New Haven, Conn., and Mr. Zickman, of New York, were elected honorary members of the club. Mr. Munson was the first man in the organization to pay his dues and felt quite proud of it, too. We had a good attendance and everything started in good shape. All of the florists have joined but four, and probably they will come in a little later, after they see what an advantage it will be to them. There is nothing like getting together once in a while and having a good, social time, forgetting our business troubles. It makes a better feeling among the florists, bringing them into closer relationship, both in a social and a business way. Mr. Nofftz thanked the members for the confidence they had shown in him by electing him president. Mr. Munson and Mr. Zickman also made very encouraging remarks.

All the drummers from anywhere and everywhere have called on us this week. We had a new man from M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia. Did not get his name, but found him to be a gentleman and gave him an order. Also have had Mr. Kniekman, of Bobbink & Atkins; Mr. Greenlaw, of N. F. McCarthy & Co.; Mr. Munson, of the Munson Box Co., and Mr. Zickman, of Sigmund Geller.

Her Majesty for Easter

You saw how these varieties looked for Xmas. These pictures were taken last week to show what they have been doing since and what they are doing for Easter. We cannot afford to grow other varieties of their respective colors, neither can you when you get these. We have never seen a bursted calyx of Her Majesty in the five years we have grown it, nor has any of our employes.

Marshall Field for Easter

There is nothing in sight that can touch Marshall Field as an exhibition and commercial variegated. We never fail to exhibit our varieties and reports we receive each week from various cities are most flattering. Our batch of cuttings now ready are the finest we have sent out.

Harlowarden,

Bright crimson, free and never splits.

HONORS WON: Last year at Chicago, S. A. F. Silver Medal and 1st Prize for best crimson, and Certificate. Kansas City, Gold Medal, 1st Prize on best in show, any color, 1st Prize best crimson. Chicago Florists' Club, Certificate.

Honors won this year: Kansas City, 1st Prize, 100 crimson. Chicago, 1st Prize, 100 crimson. New York, scored 94 points. St. Louis, Sweepstakes, best vase in show. Brooklyn, 1st Prize, best 100 crimson. Cincinnati, 1st Prize, best crimson, and highly commended.

Mrs. Potter Palmer

Is taking the lead in a scarlet. It is the largest and best shipper in the Chicago market and the freest of any.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Everything points to good weather for a long time to come. The rains seem to be over and we are having ideal California weather. Roses and carnations are beginning to come in larger quantities and the prices are liable to drop somewhat, although they will not be cheap until after Easter. Business is quiet except in funeral orders, which have kept most of the stores rather busy. Daffodils are on the wane and in about a couple of weeks more they will have disappeared entirely. Valley is plentiful, but tulips are scarcer. Easter lilies retail at $5 to $6 per dozen stems. Violets are a glut. Narcissus poeticus are in season, while paper whites have entirely disappeared.

Notes.

Mr. C. Ferrari was buried last Saturday from his residence on University avenue. Mr. Ferrari had been in the cut flower business in San Francisco for about twenty years. He had associated with him his two sons, who will continue to handle the large establishment. Mr. Ferrari made a specialty of roses, carnations and lilies, and was a very successful grower. He was a native of Italy and aged 65 years.

Mr. A. Ringier, the well known representative of W. W. Barnard & Co., of Chicago, has been in town all the week and visited all the growers. Mr. Ringier has just returned from the northern country and reports everything good with the florists. He expects to leave for Los Angeles in a day or two.

Mr. I. K. Love, the well known Oakland florist, has associated with himself in business Mr. M. R. Morse and Mr. Letts. The firm will be known in future as the Piedmont Floral Co.

CARNATIONS.

ROOTED CUTTINGS.

NOVELTIES: THIS YEAR'S INTRODUCTIONS.

MRS. THEODORE ROOSEVELT—A brilliant shade of deep cerise pink, flamed with carmine. Finely formed. Average 3-inch flower on strong, stiff stems. Habit vigorous, early, free. Fragrance, strong clove. Selected, strong, well rooted cuttings now ready. $12 00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

ALPINE GLOW—A deep salmon pink on opening, which finishes a bright Dayhreak tint. Good sized bloom, averaging 2¾-inch at this season of the year. Flowers of great substance and a splendid keeper and shipper. An extra vigorous grower; early, profuse and continuous bloomer. Cuttings taken last April produce plants carrying 25 to 30 blooms by the 1st of March. We believe this will prove one of the most profitable of the Daybreak colored carnations. We shall have the following rooted cuttings ready for delivery at the dates specified: March 15th, 25 000; March 21st, 5000; April 5th, 5000. Price $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000 Quantity limited to the above.

LILLIAN POND—2000 selected plants from 2-inch pots, ready for immediate delivery. $10.00 per 100.

Lilly's Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses and Conservatories and a special boon to Rose and Beauty Growers and is prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will never be as troublesome when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with this powder. It is put up as follows:

1 lb. Tin Can	$ .25
5 lb. Tin Can	1.00
25 lb. Sealed Box	4.50

CROMWELL, CONN.

With Easter but a couple of weeks off we are preparing for the heavy shipments which must be made in the near future. The lilies of course make up the greatest bulk, and taking them as a whole they are the finest we have ever grown. We have about 80,000 bulbs in all and these of course make a great deal of work as they are continually being shifted into different temperatures as required. The demand is as brisk as in former years and we trust that April 13 will see few left on the place.

About one thousand spiraea are coming into shape and they are we think above the average. The demand for spiraea is good but as a rule these orders are for small lots.

There will be about one hundred thousand lily of the valley forced for Easter week and bulb stuff will be as in former years in goodly numbers.

The limit on grafted roses is practically reached and some stock has been shipped. The grafting is practically over and as a whole it has been very successful.

W. R. Pierson.

"Consider the Lilies."

The young ladies who posed for the picture on the title page of this issue are the daughters of a member of the S. A. F. and have many friends amongst the florists from Maine to California.

The picture that starts the reading matter shows a lily of which Mr. Fritz Bahr, Highland Park, Ill., is very proud.

We Have Bought the Following:

FUCHSIA "AUTUMN LEAVES"

This is a remarkably fancy variety which we consider one of the most distinct and beautiful of its class. It is impossible for one not familiar with our eastern forests in autumn, to imagine the beauty of its foliage. In habit it droops, and is most charming when staked and the branches allowed to fall naturally and gracefully down, forming streamers of green, red, bronze and gold, terminating with its beautiful clusters of flowers. Color, tube and sepal, rosy scarlet; corolla, violet-crimson. Flowers and foliage blending in perfect harmony.

The coloring of its foliage like fancy geraniums is highest during late winter and spring, and less so during the hot season. Price, postpaid, 25 cts. each, $1.00 per doz. By express, $5.00 per 100. Address

HEUCHERAS.

These graceful hardy plants have won considerable appreciation during late years, yet it is to be doubted if they are employed to the best advantage in most gardens. Clumps or groups of them will always be of some value in the borders, but they are excellent for filling large ground-spaces in the shrubbery, where their beautiful foliage is serviceable, and their blooms are not rivaled by gay flowers in their immediate vicinity. Heuchera blossom has genuine merit of its own; it is not fair to inspect it after feasting the eyes upon noble spikes of brilliant delphiniums, phloxes, and pentstemons. The leaves are useful as accompaniments to other flowers in vases, and some of them become noticeable in the garden in winter by reason of their crimson-marone tintings.

Heuchera hispida (Richardsoni) possesses delightful shiny brown foliage, hence it is called the Satin Plant, or Satin Leaf, and not only does it own pretty leaves, but the whole form of the plant is elegant in the extreme. When it is remembered that this is the case in the depth of winter, as well as in summer, we may well refrain from criticising its greenish-brown panicles, which appear on stems half a yard or more high in June and July. I prefer to see it planted in the spaces around and in front of silver-foliaged trees and shrubs, but where these are not provided it looks well with a foreground of white-and-green-leaved geraniums, or near Pampas and other light-hued grasses.

The leaves of H. americana are a brilliant deep green, and its stems support tiny dull purple flowers. This is one of the few perennials that are always charming in shade, suitable for clothing those ground-spaces under trees that are either given up to periwinkles or ivy, or are left bare in nine gardens out of ten. Purple, too, are the flowers of H. micrantha, but a kind with which I am not acquainted is offered for sale as Heuchera macrantha, whose blossom is described as "light rosy-salmon." H. Menziesi has stems clothed in leaves, instead of flat clustered foliage, and grows nearly a yard high, but the blossom is quite insignificant.

H. sanguinea offers really effective red flowers, and has a white companion now. The red form is the only heuchera which is frequently to be found in our herbaceous borders; it grows two feet high, and blooms in the middle of summer. Florists have introduced an improvement upon it in Heuchera sanguinea grandiflora, which is finer, more floriferous, a deeper red, and half a foot taller. Some gardeners are fond of H. pubescens, with pale red flowers, the foliage of which is covered with a soft-looking down. H. glabra has attractive white flowers, which are spotted with pink, while H. longipetala and H. bracteata have white blooms, which are valuable for cutting to use with others.

It should be noted that heucheras refuse to thrive in very stiff or clayish soil, though upon gravel, or in any ordinary garden-compost, they are absolutely hardy. On rockeries they clothe the stones with their pretty foliage, and invariably flourish. They are named in honor of their introducer, a German botanist named Huecher.

M. H. in Gardeners' Magazine.

THE TREE TOMATO.

Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd, Ventura, Cal., says that when the value of the tree tomato as a fruit is once fully appreciated acres of it will be planted. It bears from seed the second season, and a young plant set out in the spring grows 6 feet and comes into bearing by Christmas in California. The foliage is large and handsome, the branches spreading. The fruit is pendant in clusters below the foliage, is the size of a large egg, and of a beautiful orange salmon color when ripe. It has a delicious sub-acid taste, slightly resembling the tomato. It is delicious raw, served with sugar and cream, or cooked as sauce, and for jelly or jam is very fine. It will keep for weeks, as it does not bruise on account of its very tough skin and the solid nature of the fruit covering the seeds, which are like those of the tomato. In Ceylon and India it is extensively grown and is known as the "poor man's fruit." It is a showy plant for house and conservatory, and a most beautiful plant in the garden. It is a native of South America.

THE Florists' Manual contains 200 articles by Mr. Wm. Scott on important trade subjects and they are illustrated by 224 handsome engravings from photographs.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The weather for some time past has been first wet for several days and then warm. It has been a remarkably warm March so far and has pushed flowers into bloom rather too fast for the Lenten season. Some of the growers have had to put stock into cool places to hold for Easter and it looks as though there would be some soft things sold this year. It looks now as though violets will be a thing of the past for Easter. Even the cold frame stock is about all in. It's too bad, as we can sell so many on that day. It will be quite a loss. However, this is going to be a great plant year and what will be lost on violets will be made on blooming plants. For the past two weeks some of the department stores and bargain counter florists have had cheap violet sales. I don't see as it has done much good or harm as the legitimate retailers have sold their usual quantity without cutting prices.

St. Patrick's day called for green pinks and shamrocks to quite an extent. T. J. Johnston had shamrock shaped pots filled with shamrocks, and red anthuriums. The former sold out. It made a decided novel window and attracted much attention.

J. A. Macrae entertained quite a number of the profession at his place last Wednesday. John's plant is the finest looking in this section.

J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., who built three 700-foot houses last year and have been very successful this season, intend to go in deeper next year. They find flowers more profitable than vegetables. This market hasn't had to take care of much of their stock, most of it going to Boston market.

The price of cut flowers dropped about 33 per cent during the Lenten season, but there has been no glut and prices are stiffening again, carnations selling at $1.50 to $3.50 per 100; violets, 50 cents; Brides and Maids, $5 to $10; bulbous stock, $2 to $3 for most everything.

T. O'Connor has had a fine cut of Acacia pubescens which he used to advantage in his large retail business.

Miss Farrington, a young society lady and graduate of the R. I. school of design, has done quite a business in decorating for debutantes, teas and weddings this past season. Her original ideas have been much admired by society folk.

R. I.

It is reported in the daily press that since the formation of the Gardeners' and Florists' Union in Chicago as a local of the American Federation of Labor, locals have been formed in Toronto, Philadelphia, Mobile and Buffalo, and that soon an international organization will be in the field.

The Review is more than satisfactory. The articles on arranging flowers are one of the many features that make the paper so valuable, not to mention Bro. Scott's timely reminders.—Wm. Walker, Louisville, Ky.

Wilmington, Del.—The city has disposed of $30,000 worth of bonds, the proceeds to be used in improving the parks.

Waco, Tex.—The Texas State Floral Society has decided to have a rose carnival the coming May.

Headquarters for EASTER PLANTS

We make a specialty of BLOOMING PLANTS for Easter week. I have the largest stock in Philadelphia; larger and in better condition than ever before. All the large greenhouses and frames are crowded with the choicest stock, at lowest cash prices

AZALEA INDICA—3 houses full. It is not necessary to mention that all my customers know that I am the agent of a large concern in Belgium, Ghent. I go there every year, if possible, and secure for my customers the best that can be had. I have all the leading American varieties, raised all winter in pots, and not stored away in cold frames, without being potted, like some do. White—Niobe, B. Andre, Alba, Deutsche Perle. Pink—Van der Cruyssen, Dr. Moore, Simon Mardner and many others. About 1 doz. variegated varieties, such as Vervaeneana, Empress of India, etc., and many new varieties, double and single, in 6 to 7-inch pots. Prices from 60c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1 50 each. As a special I must mention my Mme. Van der Cruyssen this year. They are unusually fine, as round as an apple, covered with buds. Price 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Specimen 10 to 11-inch pots, $5.00 each.

AZALEA MOLLIS, a novelty when in bloom, 6-in. pots, 60c to 75c each.

LILIUM HARRISII and BERMUDA-GROWN LONGIFLORUMS, fine plants in 6-inch pots, 15 to 36 inches high, from 5 to 16 buds at the rate of 10c per bud.

CINERARIAS HYDRIDA. I have an enormous quantity, about 2,000, 5¼ to 6-inch pots, all shades, $3.00 to $4.00 per doz.

SPIRÆA COMPACTA, 6-in. pots, $3 per doz.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA. Have a house full this year better advanced than ever, 6-inch pots, $4 00, $5.00, $6.00 to $9 00 per doz. Specimens, 7-inch pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each.

DAISIES, yellow or white, 6-inch pots, $3.00 per dozen.

BEGONIAS, Pres. Carnot, Metallica and others, 5½ to 6-inch pots, at $3.00 per doz. Begonia Vernon, red, 6-inch, $3.00 per doz. Begonia Vernon, red, 4-inch, $1.50 per doz. Mixed varieties, 4-inch, $1.50 per doz.

HYACINTHS, about 10,000, my own importation, named varieties, best size, all shades, $10.00 per 100.

TULIPS, Tournesol, dbl., red and yellow striped, best Tulip in the market, 3 in a 4-inch pot, $1.50 per doz. pots.

DAFFODILS, Von Sion, best dbl., double nosed, 3 in a 5-inch pot, $2 00 per doz. pots (worth $3.00). Cash with order please. All goods shipped at purchaser's risk. Can supply many thousands of references on application.

To save express charges, please state whether to ship in pots or not.

Buyers coming to Philadelphia, are respectfully invited to visit my place and inspect stock. Take 13th St. or Germantown car to Ontario St.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

We are headquarters for Hardy Perennials and can supply all the leading and popular varieties in immense quantities. We offer below a few specialties in this line.

ANEMONE JAPONICA.

35,000 plants in stock. Alba Japonica, Lady Ardilaun, Whirlwind and Queen Charlotte. Field-grown plants. $1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

CAMPANULA PERSICIFOLIA MOERHEIMI.

This beautiful new bell flower is a wonderful advance over previous varieties of this type, its flowers produced during June and July remind one of a double white Cammellia. 2 to 2½ inches in diam., strong plants. 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

CLEMATIS RECTA.

Forms bushy, erect clumps, 2 to 3 ft. high, producing masses of delicate white flowers, most useful for cutting during June and July. An old plant that is rarely seen but worthy of extended cultivation. Two-year-old plants. $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

HEMEROCALLIS "FLORHAM."

To those who are only familiar with the old Day Lily this new variety—a hybrid raised by Mr. Herrington—will be a revelation. Its sweet-scented, golden-yellow flowers are fully five inches across and produced very freely. A plant that should have a place in every garden. 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

STOKESIA CYANEA.

JAPANESE IRIS.

(50,000 home-grown roots in stock.) 25 finest named varieties, $1 50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000. Choicest Mixed sorts, 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

PERENNIAL PHLOXES.

(75,000 plants in stock.) One of our leading specialties. The plants we offer are field-grown, were divided in fall. They have from 3 to 6 eyes and will make a grand show this summer. 50 leading varieties. 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

STOKESIA CYANEA.

(Cornflower Aster.)

One of the most desirable hardy plants in our collection. A gem in every way. A most useful flower for cutting. Its flowers are not unlike a giant cornflower of a pleasing lavender blue color and produced without intermission from July to October. Strong plants. $1.25 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

For the most complete list of Hardy Perennials offered in America see our Current Wholesale Price List. SENT FREE TO ALL FLORISTS.

RAMBLINGS.

Detroit, Mich.—J. Breitmeyer's Sons have a splendid stock of flowering plants for Easter. From present outlook this will be a banner one with them. Gus H. Taepke has his usual specialty in hybrid roses in pots. He has grown one house of this popular Easter plant for several years and hits the mark every time. He is very successful with carnations—Marquis, Crane and Norway. The new place, situated some ten miles distant, is well under way. Three houses, each 30 by 175, for carnations are completed, others to follow during the summer. Robert Flowerday, of the Detroit Floral Co., has been confined to the house for some days with the grippe, which he hopes will loosen so that he can get around for Easter. His better half looks well after his business in the meanwhile. H. G. Flammer, George Leadley, and the great Sullivan are making attractive displays in their windows on Woodward avenue. Asman & Dunn will remodel their show house. They do a nice business up town. The commission man, and there is but one, William Dilger, had just time to say "Howdy," for although Lent is here, funeral work keeps him hustling, shipping out stock. Beard Bros. will have lilies. I notice much irregularity amongst the Japan longiflorum and multiflorum all along my route. It is a problem how the crop will show up for Easter.

Cleveland, Ohio.—H. A. Hart has everything looking in its usual prim order—not a line but what will be in just when it is needed. Why don't you tell us how 'tis done, Herman? A. Graham & Son, Jas. Eadie, and Smith & Son have fine stocks. The pink seedling carnation being grown by the last mentioned is a beauty and will no doubt be heard more of later. Aug. Schmitt, at Glenville, has a full line of flowering stock for Easter. Ramblers, hydrangeas, and lilies are his leaders. The market will be well supplied, judging by present appearances. J. M. Gasser Co. are cutting fine roses just now, with a big crop in sight.

Erie, Pa.—S. Alfred Baur will commence building soon after the Easter rush. Stock is in excellent shape. H. Tong, Schluraff Bros., Clark & Robb, and J. V. Laver are all well fixed and looking forward to a big Easter business.

The Florists' Manual by William Scott

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

C. C. POLLWORTH CO., Milwaukee, Wis.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Business has been very quiet here during the past month, especially in the retail departments, and with the exception of funeral work which has been plentiful there was nothing doing.

The prospects for Easter are good. Lilies are of a fine quality; and while there is less of the old disease, there is too large a per cent of short stems.

Carnations are of excellent quality but promise to be short. Roses are superior to last year and the quality cannot be surpassed. Beauties are promising to be in in quantity and the quality fine.

At the Dunkley establishment M. F. Kyle is busy getting everything ready and so far as I can learn he is likely to make it his banner year.

G. Van Bochove & Bro. are busy preparing material for their new block which they intend to erect as soon as they can get the ground in condition. With their Easter prospects they are entirely satisfied; their lilies being fine, the best they have seen in years.

The Central Michigan Nursery Co. also proposes erecting quite an addition to its plant.

There are also rumors of more firms looking for sites for greenhouses, but as yet there is nothing definite.

We have been having some weather which for a few days very much resembled summer; if this continues many of the Easter crops will suffer, if they are not entirely spoiled. There is a prospect of the weather being colder tonight. R.

HYDRAULIC RAMS.

I note in your issue of March 12 a communication from Mr. Milford in which he refers to my communication of Dec. 25, 1902. The difficulty which your correspondent, "Sufferer," experienced was undoubtedly due to the lack of power to produce certain results, or if we care to look at it in another way, trying to get too many results out of the power at hand; in this case, Mr. Milford and myself have looked at the matter from opposite standpoints. My suggestion was to reduce the load by reducing friction in the delivery pipe. Mr. Milford's suggestion is to increase the power by reducing friction in the feed pipe and carrying a bigger volume of water through the ram, which would also give relief.

I would like very much to hear from "Sufferer" as to what changes he made in his piping, if any, and what results he experienced therefrom.

DES MOINES, IA.

We are having the darkest March in our memory. The sun has not shone more than three days this month and yet we have had very little rain, but an abundance of fog. This will necessarily shorten the cut of flowers for Easter.

The park commissioners are to plant some two thousand shrubs and trees in Union Park this spring. They have just finished another greenhouse at the same park, 20x51, thus doubling the amount of their glass. This will give them the much needed room to grow their park plants, as they do not sell any. Their plants are looking remarkably well, but have been somewhat crowded.

Our club has not had a meeting this year and some are of the opinion that we pull apart better than together. We will not send a crack team of bowlers to Milwaukee this year, but as to the next convention we may be in it.

Our rivers are up again, but this time only bank full, so no damage to the craft is done. J. T. D. F.

ACETYLENE GAS.

Prof. F. Wm. Rane, of the Agricultural College, Durham, N. H., has been carrying on some experiments to demonstrate what effect if any the light from acetylene gas had on plant growth. As a result he makes the following deductions:

1. That acetylene has a marked effect upon greenhouse plants.

2. That no injurious effects resulted from the use of the acetylene.

3. The light has a stimulating influence on most plants, and appears to be beneficial to some plants that are grown for foliage, such as lettuce. The lettuce stood more erect and weighed more.

4. Most plants tend toward a taller growth under the light.

5. It is doubtful whether this light can be used in the greenhouse from an economic standpoint for growing plants alone. While its effect is marked in the dark days of winter, little difference seems to be shown at other seasons of the year, when there is more sunshine.

6. There are many points about acetylene that make it desirable for lighting greenhouses. It is not expensive, is easily piped, and comparatively simple to run.

ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

Announcement is made by the executive committee of the World's Fair, to be held in St. Louis in 1904, that Mr. Frederic W. Taylor, who has been Acting Chief for the past year, is to be Chief of the Department of Horticulture dating from January 1. This, in additon to the appointment made more than a year ago by which Mr. Taylor has been and is to continue Chief of the Department of Agriculture.

It seemed desirable to have these two great departments handled as a harmonious whole, since the buildings to house them are located upon and occupy exclusively a large and high hill in the most commanding position on the exposition grounds.

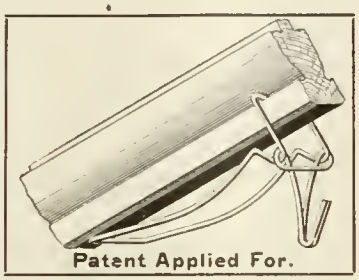
The building devoted to horticulture will cover six acres and the one devoted to agriculture twenty acres. Surrounding these two buildings are forty-one acres of ground, the entire area of which has been placed in the hands of the chief for planting and treatment.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Scientific American expresses the belief that the reason rain stimulates vegetation more than artificial watering is that the rain is charged with electricity and suggests that experiments be made with water electrically charged. He thinks this could be easily done if the water was in an insulated barrel or a pail bottomed with rubber or glass. After being charged it could be applied with an ordinary rubber hose with a non-conducting nozzle.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—John A. Wilkins, of this city, has patented a new device for transplanting large trees by which the tree is handled entirely from its base. After the soil about the tree is made thoroughly wet a circle of steel shovels is inserted around it which are then combined into what may be called a steel basket. The tree is then lifted by screw power and later lowered in the same way at its new location.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—It is reported that a new cemetery, to be known as "Woodlawn," and for which a charter has been recently applied, will build greenhouses to cost $25,000. The cemetery will contain 158 acres and the company proposes to expend $150,000 in improving the property. The incorporators are Thos. J. Felder, D. C. Buntin, Thos. W. Wrenne, Robt. Goodlett and Thos. Taylor.

KOROPP'S Greenhouse Hanger



Can be attached to any rafter or frame work. No nails, no screws, no injury to wood work, no weakening of rafters. Easily attached and quickly removed. Will carry any size of flower pot; also basket or shelves.

Change of Management.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL FLORISTS' BOARD OF TRADE.

GENTLEMEN:

Owing to the pressure of other important matters I have not been able for some time past to give as much attention to the business of the board as I desired, and I have had under consideration changes which would bring into the work some efficient helpers.

I am very glad to be able to inform the trade that I have made arrangements by which the requisite time and attention will be given to the details and management of the business by Mr. John E. Walker, 56 Pine street, New York City, who has been elected secretary and treasurer of the company. I shall do everything I can to further the interests of my friends in the National Florists' Board of Trade, but Mr. Walker will look after the details of the management. He is a well-known attorney, and a man of high standing in the New York Bar, and under his management the work will be accurately and thoroughly done. Records heretofore kept at 271 Broadway have been transferred to the new office at 56 Pine street, and the same experienced employees will be in charge of the books and papers.

The new arrangement brings a further accession of legal strength into the board by the election of Messrs. William A. Moore and Charles J. Dunlap, both members of the New York Bar. Mr. Moore is the assistant district attorney of Westchester county.

Mr. Harris H. Hayden, who has accepted the presidency of the corporation, is a business man of wide experience, having been the treasurer and manager of several well-known companies doing business in this city. His advice and assistance will be of great value to the board, and we are fortunate in securing his services in the important office of president.

It is the intention of the board, as reconstituted, to push the business vigorously, and they hope to make the service more valuable in the future than it has been in the past. Any suggestions in this direction that you can make will be gladly received and most carefully considered by the new directors and officers, who will be very glad to have the pleasure of meeting members of the Trade whenever they are in New York City.

I bespeak for the new directors and officers the same cordial co-operation which the members of the board have always accorded to me, and with thanks for past favors, I am,

Yours faithfully,

CORNELIUS S. LODER.

THE MILD AND GENTLE ONES.

"Is this the plant that you have reference to?" asked the florist, in a soft and gentle voice, and he took down an orchid growing in a pot of moss. "Why is it," said one of the two women he had been waiting on, as they departed, "why is it that all florists have the soft and gentle manner of this man?" The other woman, musing, answered: "I think it must be the influence of the flowers. The florists' life is given over to a maternal rearing of plants. It is a life quiet and kindly, passed among beautiful colors and enchanting odors. The effect of these things is to soften and refine." The other said: "That is one answer, and a good one, to my question. But I think that florists have nice manners mainly because the manners of their patrons rub off on them. Take the people who love flowers, and you will find them a gentle and poetical class, mild of air and soft of speech. Consorting only with these people I think the florist gets to have their ways." "Well," said the other woman, "whatever the reason is, it's the truth that all florists are alike in their gentleness and softness and mildness."—Daily Paper.

Doylestown, Pa.—Roses are and have been scarce, and consequently high priced, all winter. Mr. John E. Andre, the largest and most expert grower in this section, is now receiving from his wholesaler in Philadelphia $18.00 per 100 for his best Brides and Maids. He is also a grower of very fine Beauties. A recent visit to this place shows the stock to be in excellent condition with a tremendous crop coming on.

THE FLORISTS' BOY.

The florist's boy looked wise beyond his years. He stood in the car with a large set piece beside him, a floral harp with broken string.

Every eye in the car was on that piece. Old gentlemen looked sentimental. Middle aged gentlemen looked at it with a mingled air of chastened sympathy and melancholy. Young men looked lugubrious.

As for the women in the car, it was all they could do to restrain their tears.

The florist's boy wore an air of resigned dejection suitable for the occasion. At times this was overshadowed by a blase look of one who is used to these things. Occasionally he took a large bulb from his pocket and professionally squirted water over the harp. The adjacent gentlemen, who were simultaneously sprinkled, pretended not to notice it. They felt that they were being dampened down in a good cause.

As the car approached the Christopher street ferry the florist's boy produced a large sign and hung it over the harp.

WHY PAY FIFTH AVENUE PRICES

While the passengers were drinking in this sign, the florist's boy distributed cards giving special prices on broken harps and other set pieces.

The car stopped. The boy carefully carried out the set piece and took up a commanding position in an eastbound car. The conductor grinned. He wore a large carnation.

"Say," he inquired, "how much longer are you going to carry that up and down? Boomin' business, are you?"

The florist's boy winked with a wise look far beyond his years. But he didn't smile. He had high hopes of being a sexton some day and a wink was his limit.—New York Sun, Jan. 13.

"NITROGLYCERIN."

Ed. Florists' Review:—While I am not a subscriber to your paper, yet I am a regular borrower and faithful reader of the copy my employer receives. I am always interested in the various articles which appear in the Review relating to plant culture, but more especially in questions asked by readers.

Now, I was raised as a farmer and was credited as a good hand at growing mangel-wurzels and feeding cattle. I afterwards learned the butcher business and was handy at skinning animals and things. I am, at present a "first-class florist," and I want to go into raising roses, carnations, violets, etc., also orchids and a few other fancy articles, when I learn a little more about their diet.

I want to know if nitroglycerin is a good thing to raise roses with, and if so, how much of it would be required to a bushel of "ground" to be effective.

Would "Malta Vita," "Force," or some such diet, be a good thing to feed carnations with?

How much water ought to be added to a quart of condensed milk to feed cuttings with?

When is the best time to sow Cineraria hybrida seed, so as to get the plants in flower by the 4th of July?

If you don't answer these questions in your paper, not being a subscriber, I cannot stop my copy, so will have to appeal to your generosity for the information asked by "I."

Walter Bermingham.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.

[Mr. Bermingham can overcome all his difficulties by placing a can of nitroglycerin upon the soil near the plants and driving it in with a sledge hammer. The driving must be done personally by Mr. Bermingham to accomplish the desired result, which will be instantaneous. A record of his experience with this method of "forcing" will be gratefully received and we trust he will favor us by writing it on asbestos paper, as we fear any other would not last long in the place where he would undoubtedly be obliged to write it. We would also ask that he be kind enough to carry on the experiment at a good safe distance from any really "first-class florist."—Ed.]

A copy of the printed proceedings of the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Georgia State Horticulural Society has reached us from the secretary, Mr. L. A. Berckmans, Augusta, Ga. It contains a great deal of matter of live interest to Georgia horticulturists, the discussions upon the various papers being especially full and complete. A very valuable feature is a catalogue of fruits in which the desirability of each variety for certain sections of the state is noted. This being brought up to date each year as the result of the experience of all the members, must be of very great value.

Rochester, N. Y.—The building of a greenhouse, to cost $2,600, in Highland Park has been approved by the park board. Its erection will, however, depend upon the tax budget.

W. D. SNELL, Newville, Herkimer Co., N. Y., Jan. 2, 1901, says:
"I wish to express my thorough satisfaction with the No. 70 Standard Sectional steam boiler which I placed in my greenhouses early in December last year. I have three houses, 20x65, located side by side, with glass in roofs and gables. The houses are built of glass and wood and contain in all about 5,000 square feet of glass surface. I have in use about 2,000 feet one-inch pipe, or about 700 square feet of radiation. I carry a temperature of about 50 degrees at night, but have had no difficulty in getting any higher temperature desired. I find that the boiler will run ten hours without attention. I attend to it about nine o'clock at night and it will run with no further attention until seven o'clock in the morning. The draft I have is not a good one, yet notwithstanding this objection, I have no difficulty in getting the fire up and getting as much steam as I desire.
"I can thoroughly recommend the boiler and will be glad to have you refer to me anyone that wants further information."

Garden Appliances and Methods.

Tools for gardeners and nurserymen: Spades, picks, hoes, lawn mowers, garden rollers; tools for pruning, grafting, gathering, packing and transporting produce; pruning and grafting knives, ladders, watering apparatus.
Apparatus and objects for ornamenting gardens: Vases, pots, chairs, seats, fountains, labels, etc.
Glass houses and their accessories: Heating apparatus, mattings, etc.
Aquariums, ferneries, etc., for use in dwellings.
Landscape architecture: Plans, drawings, models, books, pictures, etc.

Space and Power Free of Charge.

There will be no charge for space occupied by exhibits, and a limited amount of power for the operation of mechanical devices to illustrate processes of special interest will be furnished to exhibitors without charge.

Pomology and Viticulture are covered in separate schedules.

Seattle, Wash.—Shipments of nursery stock from several Rochester, N. Y., nurserymen consigned to Vashon Island fruit growers have been ordered burned by the county fruit inspector. The trees, it is claimed, were infested with woolly aphis, root gall, oyster shell bark louse, tent caterpillar and twig blight.

New Salem, N. Y.—Pinchbeck Bros., of this place, have bought eight acres of land in Ridgefield, Conn., and intend moving their greenhouses there and will also erect a residence.

TOUGHKENAMON, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1902.
MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

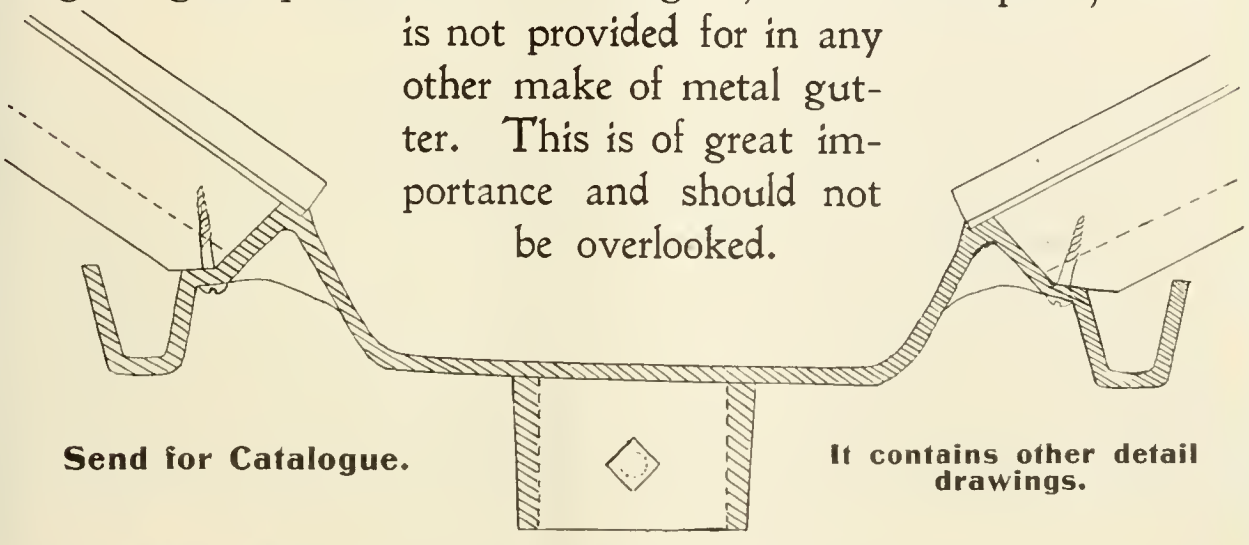
THE GARLAND IRON GUTTER.

This cut shows a cross section of our No. 2 Gutter, length 5 feet 6 3-4 inches. Is provided with enlarged drip conductor, a rest for bar and cross grain screw fastening. The arrangement for receiving the glass provides for water tight joints at that point, which is not provided for in any other make of metal gutter. This is of great importance and should not be overlooked.



Send for Catalogue.

It contains other detail drawings.

What Mr. William Scott thinks of the Garland Iron Gutter:

BUFFALO, February 2, 1903.

MR. GEO. M. GARLAND, Des Plaines, Ill.

Dear Sir: — The 750 feet of your cast iron gutter has now been in use since last August, so it has had the heat of summer and 14 below zero and incidentally a foot of snow falling in 24 hours.

I am glad to say that the gutters are most satisfactory in every way. After I had ordered them of you last spring, I was told some alarming things about them, but also heard from most reliable firms of the good points that your gutter possesses. I was told they would drip from condensation of warm air on the cold metal. I have a steam pipe within 18 inches of bottom of gutter and there is absolutely not a drop to be seen. I was told that in the expansion and contraction of length of gutter (mine is 150 feet) there would be a slight parting at the joint. It would take a powerful microscope to discover an opening the fraction of a hair — there is none.

By observation I have proved that a heavy fall of snow will disappear from roofs and gutters at least 48 hours sooner than a wooden gutter, in fact, with the steam pipe as I have it, it vanishes as it falls. There may be other excellent metal gutters, I have not tried them, but I am more than satisfied with yours.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM SCOTT.

WREATH OF GALAX.

The accompanying engraving shows a 32-inch wreath of galax leaves with a bunch of Bride roses and some cycas leaves, arranged by Mr. Alexander McConnell, New York. The wreath was tied with a large bow of white and purple ribbon.

This wreath was ordered by Miss Helen Gould and was sent to Washington on the occasion of the funeral of the late President McKinley.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

The time is now swiftly approaching when with the lengthened duration and increased intensity of sunshine there will be less demand for firing. When firing has to be dropped occasionally over night great care will have to be taken not to expose the plants to any sudden chill, as this is frequently the cause for an attack of mildew. To determine the real cause of these attacks and how to create conditions, which, while being favorable to the health of the rose, would be inimical to the germination and growth of this pestiferous parasite, should be one of the first and most important studies of the young grower, as until he has mastered this particular phase of rose culture, many, if not all, of his other efforts may be brought to naught.

That it is possible to keep roses entirely free from this trouble from propagating time until they have done their full season's work, is a fact, as a visit to many of the modern rose growing establishments at any or all seasons of the year will clearly convince the most skeptical.

In order to have our stock clear of this disease at all seasons we must begin to safeguard the young stock even while yet in the cutting bench and continuing to keep a strict watch so that we may avoid those conditions favorable to its growth through all the stages in which we may have the stock. A thorough knowledge of the laws of ventilation is the first essential, as by a sensible enforcement of these, plants can be grown so hardy and given such a constitution that they are almost immune.

Ventilators, besides being of use in allowing superfluous sun heat to escape, have other purposes to serve, the most important of which is the regulation of moisture in the house and the distribution and proper circulation of fresh air at all seasons, and particularly during the long period of sunless weather when artificial is the only kind of heat we can command. During this period the inexperienced grower is usually eager to save as much coal as possible, and concludes that by closing the ventilators tightly he is accomplishing his object. He can, of course, easily keep the temperature just where he wants it by this method, but the air so vitiated will soon undermine the constitution of even the most vigorous varieties, making the foliage soft and spongy and rendering them peculiarly susceptible to the attacks of mildew whenever it becomes unavoidable to expose them to the first spring breeze that blows, and from which sulphur in any form and all the other nostrums cannot protect them.

Carefully studying the proper regulation of the admission of fresh air without creating a draught and strictly adhering to and practicing it on every favorable occasion, particularly during the period of heavy firing, is the surest and most practical way of prevention.

Precautionary measures are, however, particularly in season just now, so that we may begin the warm season with a clean sheet. Painting the pipes with the sulphur mixture once a week and keeping the blower going occasionally should be ample protection. When using the blower it is well to select a bright, sunny day when the foliage is perfectly dry, and close the ventilators tight during the operation, even though the temperature goes over 90 degrees, thus allowing the sulphur to settle evenly and giving to each leaf its quota, which cannot be done so successfully if the air is agitated. The higher temperature will also help to release the fumes which are the real destroying elements. If this is practiced once a week and the walls and roofs, particularly along the gutters, are kept in good condition the ravages of this scourge are in a great measure minimized. Ribes.

Wreath of Galax, Roses and Cycas Leaves. Arranged by Alexander McConnell, New York.

BIGNONIAS.

I have a large bignonia in my greenhouse which grows more rapidly than the famous beanstalk, but it never blooms, and the only answer I receive when I ask advice on the subject is "cut it back." I do so, with the result that the more I cut the more it grows. Will Mr. Scott kindly tell me how and when to cut. Southern Florist.

Southern Florist does not say whether the bignonia is planted out in the border of the greenhouse or in a box or tub. If it is kept the year around in the greenhouse it gets no rest, and that, we think, is the trouble, and the more you cut it back the stronger it grows, but it does not properly ripen its wood. You know, I suppose, that the bignonia is a hardy plant, even on the shores of the great lakes, much more in balmy Alabama. If your greenhouse was kept down to 40 degrees in the winter time (which I know many times would be impossible) and you withheld water for two months during your darkest weather you would, I think, get flowers in spring and summer.

If in a box, then stand it out of doors in September and let it remain there until the following February or March. And if it is planted out in a border, then cut it back and lift it and get it established in a tub or box, so that you can give it a rest for a few months in fall and winter. I feel sure it is the continuous high temperature and no rest that is the trouble. William Scott.

SINGLE VIOLETS.

We present herewith a view of the establishment of Mr. William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., and another picture showing the interior of one of his houses of Princess of Wales violet, of which he makes a specialty.

Mr. Sim commenced the cultivation of this violet six years ago with 1,000 plants, and he found the results so satisfactory that he increased the number of plants each year, and this season he is picking from 18,000 plants, the pick up to date amounting to a million and a quarter of blooms. He expects the pick for the full season to reach a million and a half. In spite of the large increase in quantity prices have kept at the old level and the quality has been such that all have been ordered ahead.

Greenhouses of Mr. William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.

The largest one day's pick was on Feb. 14, which was 37,000. The Christmas pick, lasting four days, was 44,000. During the past month—March—the average daily pick was 20,000. Fourteen persons have been kept busy on this crop all the season. A few years ago all the flowers were bunched in three bunches to the hundred but this season bunches of fifty are the smallest, while a great many are hundreds, with a few containing a hundred and fifty flowers.

The violets are all taken to Boston the same day they are picked, and at no time during the season have they been picked over four hours before they were in the flower stores. Three shipments have been made each day, the first being in the stores by 10 a. m., the second by noon and the third by 3 p. m., thus giving buyers a steady supply of fresh goods. There seems to be no limit to the quantity the market will take, one retailer giving an order for 100,000 for Easter last year. Mr. Sim is now building a new violet house 30x360, which will undoubtedly be the largest violet house ever erected.

In response to a request for a description of his method of growing the Princess of Wales violet on such a scale Mr. Sim writes:

"The plants are now about through blooming and they should be removed from the greenhouse as soon as possible, when a crop of something else can take their place. If the plants remain in the house long after they have stopped blooming they make a very rank, soft growth, which makes them hard to handle, besides taking considerable of their vitality.

"All runners should be removed from the plants and destroyed, as they are worthless to increase stock from. The crowns which are attached to the old plant are what make the flowering plants for next season. A cold frame is the best place to put the plants, as they can be protected from a freeze, but otherwise exposed to the weather. The plants can stay in this condition until the end of April or the beginning of May, when they can be divided and planted directly into the field.

"Another method may also be used with success. As the plants are removed from the greenhouse they may be divided and the young plants put into a cold frame, 2½x3 inches apart. Care should be taken to keep those which have roots separate from those which have none. The former will be ready to plant in the field as soon as the weather permits, while the others will be a few weeks later. These should be kept on the close side for a week or two with a little shading, spraying them quite frequently to prevent wilting and red spider. As they recuperate gradually increase the ventilation and finally remove sash entirely.

"The place where they are to be planted through the summer should now be got ready if this was not done in the fall, which I think is the best time. This should have a good coating of cow manure—whether fresh or old I find makes practically no difference—and it should be plowed in to the depth of ten inches. I have tried horse and other manures, but without good results."

The Review speaks for itself. No florist should be without it.—C. C. Wonneman, Mexico, Mo.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Easter Blooms.

When these notes reach you there will not be much to be done to improve the quality of the Easter cut except it be in giving close attention to watering and shading. The cheese cloth referred to in notes of March 19 has kept one bench of Lawson in fine condition; every bloom is of the true Lawson color. We sometimes have orders for this carnation stating that they be full blown and less intense in color; this condition is easily and quickly brought about by removing the cloth from a block of plants for a day or two, for as a rule this class of orders are given well in advance.

So much for the grower who retails his product; the wholesaler is not bothered so much with little details but he has his vexations, the chief one perhaps when some seemingly small credit slip is returned to him, especially after the heavy Easter trade is over and prices have been quoted as much stiffer.

I do not propose to take up the troubles that have, may or will occur between the grower and the commission man, but I cannot refrain from warning the grower against sending in pickled or salted stock, particularly when we all heard and read so much complaint at Christmas about this practice. David Harum, I believe, says: "Put all thy eggs in one basket and watch that basket." I would say to you brother growers: Put all thy strength of body and mind into a good reputation and watch that reputation. It will bear fruit.

But now a few words on watering. Assuming that your plants have had and will continue to have the "proper rotation of the liquid chemical menu," with perhaps in some cases something solid on the side—a mulch—I wish to caution you against going to an extreme in watering. It is true that the plants now need plenty of water, but it is not necessary to soak the beds to the point of saturation so that quite a quantity runs through, for by this means much valuable matter is carried out in solution.

We plan to water in the morning, giving the beds enough to wet the whole thoroughly, allowing more for the soil next the sides and ends, which dry out more quickly than the center; about 3 p. m. the sides and ends are given another supply, using less water than before.

Our beds have had a top dressing of soil and bone meal this week, putting it on heavier in the space between the outside rows and sides of bench. This with careful shading allows us to delay mulching until after Easter.

Mulching.

I do not believe in early mulching, that is in January or February, as we are likely to have dark stormy periods during these months. With top dressing and liquid food intelligently applied we leave off the mulch until April 1 to 15, according to the weather. We like to have the mulch go on a week or two after Easter, thus allowing time for the plants to recover somewhat from the effect of heavy cutting, which as a rule happens during that week, then the result sought will soon put itself in evidence, namely, renewed strong growth, stiff stems, brilliancy of color, etc., which characterizes blooms grown with soil cool and supplied with proper plant food.

Disbudding, syringing, watering, drawing the shoots into place, ventilation and regular fumigation will of course have to be attended to closely to repay the expense of material and labor in applying a mulch. Another reason for delaying this operation until what some may call late, is to allow ample time for decision as to what varieties are likely from their appearance to be worth continuing, especially when new varieties are in the question.

Mulching well done is an expensive operation; poorly done it is more than expensive—a waste. Looking at the matter squarely, it is an investment of capital, therefore it should only be done on benches which give promise of good interest on the capital to be invested. A good mulch is prepared with clean horse manure, which has been frequently turned to prevent heating. Just before applying give it a last thorough turning and breaking up, add a 6-inch pot of sheep manure to each wheelbarrow load, also a generous handful of air slacked lime. This can be modified in various ways: Cow manure can be used instead of horse when, perhaps, less sheep would answer.

In any event I would not use so called "well rotted manure." Manure that "is rotting" has the right snap to it. As I said before, mulching well done is expensive, but when you are making wedding cake it must be rich or no dreams will be produced, while with a weak mulch all will be dreams.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Easter Flowers.

I just want to remind you this week about holding up your blooms for Easter, and the trouble and dissatisfaction that is caused every year at Easter and Christmas by the foolish pickling of flowers practiced right along by growers who ought to know better. It is a great temptation when you know you can sell all the blooms you will have at at least double the regular prices, and in fact it is demanded of you to have at least double your usual supply at these times.

If your plants are well loaded with buds you can do this by raising the temperature a few degrees and holding back the bloom a few days, but if your crop of buds is light you should not try to make up for it by raising the temperature excessively high and by holding up the blooms a couple of weeks. You can keep blooms in your cellar two weeks and they will look pretty fair when you bring them up, but they won't last a day nor they won't stand the handling they are bound to get at such a busy time and you should have a little consideration for the customer who finally buys them to take home or to send them to some friend. True, the retailer will have to stand the kick and his trade will suffer first, but it will come home to you in good time, and with interest. After a few such tricks you will have a reputation for that kind of dealing and it will take you a long time to live it down. You should be satisfied with these high prices when you can get them during the whole week preceding the great day.

Raising the temperature will not do so much harm at this time of the year as it will at Christmas, because the sun is stronger and the days are warmer and longer and long cloudy spells are less frequent. The plants also are established better. Be sure that your plants have plenty of water and fresh air while you are forcing them. A weak dose of liquid manure or a sprinkling of lime, bone or wood ashes will also help them some. And finally don't hold up a lot of stock until Sunday morning. There is so often an overstock of some kinds of stock on that morning when two days before there was nothing to be had. Prices break and you realize much less on your stock than you would have done the day before or even earlier in the week. A. F. J. Baur.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Meeting of the Executive Board.

The Executive Board held its regular meeting at Milwaukee, Wis., on March 17-18, 1903. They found a degree of enthusiasm prevalent in Milwaukee and in Chicago that promised well for a record-breaking convention next August.

The convention building which the local club had recommended for the meetings and exhibition was found to be admirably adapted for the purpose and with an area of available exhibition space such as the society has never before had at its command. The building is centrally located, occupying the block bounded by Fifth, Sixth, State and Cedar streets.

The facilities for the bowling tournament and similar pastimes, which are a prime attraction for many of the society members, were found to be unprecedentedly ample and well adapted, there being sixteen fine alleys in the building which will be secured for the exclusive use of the bowlers on the day of the contest.

The program, as far as completed, provides for the opening session of the convention to take place at 3 p. m. Tuesday, August 18th; the president's reception on the evening of the same day; an illustrated lecture on the evening of the second day; papers and discussions at the various sessions upon the following subjects: "Decorative Planting About Suburban Homes"; "A System of Accounts for Greenhouses and Forms for Determining Cost of Production"; "Latest Advances in Greenhouse Construction"; "The Humorous Side of the Florists' Business"; "Promising Substitutes for Coal and Their Record to Date"; "Cooling Processes and Their Value in Keeping Cut Flowers"; "Violet Culture in the West and Modern Methods in Floral Decoration"; bowling tournament on Wednesday afternoon, shooting contest on Thursday afternoon and a good time with the local brethren on Friday.

It was voted that another opportunity be given growers and dealers in American-grown forcing bulbs to exhibit their product without charge, as at Asheville, the bulbs to be retained by the society for testing purposes.

It was decided to continue the offering of silver and bronze medals for new and meritorious plants and flowers through the agency of other societies holding regular floral exhibitions, as in recent years, but hereafter no medal can be issued more than once for any one thing. Should a duplication in awards occur, as has happened several times in the past, the secretary shall issue but one medal, priority of notification from the awarding society securing this, and all duplications being covered by the issuance of certificates of award.

The problem of how to keep members interested in the work of the society while in session received special attention and it was finally decided that the president be authorized to appoint a sergeant-at-arms, with two assistants, whose duty it shall be to enforce the rules regarding the management of the trade exhibition to insure as far as possible prompt and full attendance at the sessions and maintain order in and about the convention.

Appointments were made by the president and confirmed by the Board as follows:

Superintendent of Trade Exhibition, F. H. Holton.

Legislative Committee: J. N. May, Robert Craig, J. K. M. L. Farquhar.

Botanist, Dr. N. L. Britton.

Entomologist, Prof. L. O. Howard.

Pathologist, Prof. A. F. Woods.

Committee on Sports, P. J. Hauswirth, C. C. Pollworth, F. Schmeling.

The following final resolutions were adopted by a unanimous vote:

We, the members of the Executive Committee of the S. A. F., in annual meeting assembled, in Milwaukee, March 18th., 1903, desire to express and hereby put on record our hearty appreciation of the courtesies extended to them by the Florists' Club of Milwaukee, by the management of the Plankington and Pfister Hotels, by the Daily Press of Milwaukee and also to acknowledge the hospitality shown us by our brethren while passing through Chicago and the courtesies extended by the American Florist Co.

Wm. J. Stewart, Secretary.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Handling Easter Orders.

The week preceding Easter is a busy one and many of us have little time for any thought but for the preparation and handling of our stock which we hope to dispose of at that time. No excuse this year on account of dark, cold weather, although we registered 12 degrees of frost a few nights ago. The month of March has been a record breaker and it's the earliest spring we can remember.

I have been talking Easter crops and arrangements for the past two weeks and can't add more, only to remind you to put as much system as possible into next week's business. It is a racking, annoying experience to be called up on the telephone and receive a note from a customer a few days after Easter which tells you that "You sent the azalea to Mrs. Jones, when I was very particular that the pan of hyacinths should go to her and the azalea to Mrs. Theodore Jackson." And this would perhaps be forgiven and forgotten; much worse frequently happens. We have a great assortment of dispositions in our customers. It's the good natured, easy ones that make us indolent and careless. It is the fault-finding, crotchety ones that keep us on the alert and on edge for business. One woman will fritter her time and yours away, and take twenty minutes in selecting two $1 plants, and repeat seventeen times the name and address where they are to go, and perhaps remark to the outwardly patient salesman: "Now, I would like to see you put the cards on and the address before I go."

Another type, and these we bless, will spend $20 in ten minutes and just throw down their cards for the half dozen plants, repeat once in a hurry where they wish them sent, and off they go with a good-by and into their carriage. And there are intermediate types. Now, all this demands a clear head and a system to avoid mistakes. There should be an order made out for every individual plant or box of flowers. If there is only one article going to one person—the gift of one person—you doubtless have a printed order form, which, when filled up, reads like this: "Date of order, April 9. Charge Mrs. White (and her address) 1 Rambler rose, $1. To Mrs. Brown, 33 Ashland avenue. Deliver April 11, A. M. Card, Mrs. Nation. Charge or paid."

Very cheap envelopes can be bought, and when the order is made out the card should be put in one and the envelope pinned to the order and put away for that particular day's business. I don't mean, mind, that this cheap envelope should go out with the plant. You must put the card that goes with the plant in a neat little white envelope, unless it's supplied by your customer, which nowadays is often the case. But the cheap little drab envelope keeps the card clean and keeps it with the order to which it belongs.

It is very essential that some space should be given up to the orders that are selected, not only those your customer selected, but those you have orders for which have been left to your selection. This house, or part of a house, should be the most adjacent to the place of loading up your wagons. I believe in having Thursday's, Friday's, Saturday's and Sunday's orders each by themselves; it saves much confusion.

If the order is given early in the week you can't very well tie on ribbons, or the mat, or put on the cards at once, as they might get soiled, but you can have the plant put in good shape. Perhaps it needs a tie, or the pot washed. And on the plant, as soon as it is put away among the orders, we merely attach a small tag with simply the name of the purchaser. Every day brings its customers of various kinds, and when you see them standing around waiting, you say, "Holy farmer! Where's Jack? Tell him to come up and wait on some of these people." And so little wrapping and carding and addressing can be done in the day time, but must be done after your doors are closed, and that means that Friday's deliveries must be looked after on Thursday evening, or perhaps night, Saturday's business on Friday night, and so on.

A year or two ago the Review gave us the manner in which Mr. Wienhoeber, of Chicago, filled his orders. The boss sat behind his desk with the orders before him. He took up one which read "6 American Beauties and 100 violets," gave one of his clerks the order, and off he went and filled it. I don't remember whether he gave the address and card to the clerk—perhaps not in the case of cut flowers—but that's no matter. In getting off these plants, which is altogether harder work than cut flowers, the boss, or whoever is acting boss, should do nothing but hand one of the orders to a helper. "Here, David, 1 lily, 6 buds. Here is the address and here is the card. It's tagged 'Smithers'". That's all the boss has to do, and immediately David is gone to execute that order. The boss files away with "paid" or not the original order and it's no longer on his mind.

Orders for cut flowers can be managed just the same, only it requires good taste, experience and judgment to know how to arrange a box of flowers, either mixed or of one kind. One man behind the desk can keep a good many Davids or Alphonsos looking out orders.

The delivery of cut flowers in boxes gives us no anxiety whatever the weather may be, but with plants it's very different, and how distressing it is to be told that the lily blooms were all smashed, or that two of the hyacinths in a fine pan were broken. A good, careful man that will look well after his load and be correct is a jewel.

Another phase of the delivery is when Bob, the driver, comes home and you have been expecting and waiting for his wagon for an hour. You break out with "What in —— has kept you?" and he replies, "Why, where do you think I had to go with one plant? Away out two miles on the east side." That's the result of careless loading or routing. When you have the plants all ready for delivery they should be set in groups for each section of the city—north, south, east or west—so that as little driving as possible should be done. Department stores and many other lines of business, and perhaps some of the florists in our largest cities, have such a system of delivery that there is no extra exertion needed at any time. But it is only two or three weeks in the year that we have this rush and it is quite different from our usual routine. "Let us pray that come it may" balmy weather for a few days before and on the day when our wives and daughters sport new hats, whether we are worn out or not.

A SUNKEN GARDEN.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph showing a sunken garden on the New Jersey estate of one of the Standard Oil magnates. The landscape work was done by Siebrecht & Son, New York, and is a good example of this type of gardening. Many of the features are very formal, but this style seems to be popular and is frequently called for. The picture gives the view from the roof of the residence.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Echoes of the Philadelphia Meeting.

Leonard Barron, secretary of the American Rose Society, speaking of the exhibition, said that considering the weather and other conditions the quality of the roses shown was fully equal to that of past shows. The general classes were better filled than in the past and competition keener. The exhibits of pot roses in bloom were the first ever made before this society. There were fewer special premiums and not so many cut blooms were shown, but the interest was more general than in the past. On the whole Mr. Barron seemed pleased with the meeting and very hopeful regarding the society's future.

Notes.

Peter Crowe, of Utica, showed a very fine bunch of an adiantum which he has grown very successfully. He cut some 10,000 sprays during the past season, receiving $15 a 1,000 for them.

A fine plant of Cineraria hybrida, which had won first at the Boston show the week before, was shown. It was grown by William Thatcher (brother of John Thatcher of this city) who is gardener to Mrs. T. Gardiner (you know the Gardiners of Boston) from seed obtained from H. A. Dreer.

The Bulbs in bloom were, as usual, very fine, comprising many varieties of daffodils, hyacinths and tulips.

The specimen geraniums in bloom were extraordinary—nearly as elaborately staked and tied as a show chrysanthemum.

The H. A. Dreer Co. showed a newly grown group of Pandanus Sanderii.

The attendance was very good on all three days of the show, many of those present showing knowledge and appreciation of the beauties of the gems displayed before them.

The vases of Beauties and Edgelys and the rhododendrons in full bloom showed to advantage on the handsome stairways.

The new seedling rose showed by John Breitmeyer Sons of Detroit, and which received the society's silver medal, is said to have come from Grand Rapids, Mich., five years ago. It has been grown by this firm ever since. This rose is a beautiful shade of bright pink, shading to pale pink on the outer petals. It is very large, borne erect on long stems and well clothed with handsome foliage. John N. May considered this variety as showing great promise.

The Banquet.

A representative gathering of the leading men of this city—florists, seedsmen, nurserymen and gardeners, with many distinguished visitors from Baltimore, Boston and New York City and state—dined in the Florists' Club room on Wednesday evening of last week. Over one hundred persons were seated at four long tables, bright with flowers. There was music at one side of the room, and there was music in every soul, judging by the vim thrown into "For he's a jolly good fellow" given standing a dozen or so times.

President Westcott introduced W. B. Smith, who acted as toast-master in his inimitable way. His clever sallies caused much merriment. In the absence of President Newbold, H. A. Siebrecht responded for the Rose Society. John Barton spoke on behalf of the S. A. F., urging his hearers to go to Milwaukee next summer. W. J. Stewart spoke for the press. The speech of the evening was made by Robert Craig on "The Rose." "There is nothing so beautiful as the rose," he said. He feelingly described the love we all should feel for the queen of flowers. The whole speech was in his happiest vein. "Progress in Floriculture" brought out an interesting debate between Fred R. Mathison, of Boston, and Henry A. Siebrecht, of New Rochelle, N. Y., touching what may be termed the ancient glories of Carthage. Some interesting facts were brought out regarding events in the last thirty years of our business. There were other good speeches and a few good songs.

NEW YORK.

The opening of the present week demonstrated the truth of the old adage, "If March comes in like a lamb, it will go out like a lion." A big fall in temperature on Monday followed by a cold northeaster and a pouring rain made the opening of the week as blue as the worst pessimist could imagine. If it has the effect of adding color and quality, however, to the stock of cut flowers which is coming on for Easter it will be welcome. The weather during the whole of the past week has been spring-like, and the effect of the heat and unreasonable temperature can be seen in the depreciation of color and quality in the stock that has come to market. Prices have held their usual average of the past three weeks and any appreciation in value before the middle of next week is hardly probable.

The present weather, however, was just what the nurserymen and seedsmen and bulbmen were praying for, and the planting season started off in great shape, if prematurely. There is no doubt the season has got too early a start to last and we shall doubtless have some most disagreeable weather between this and Easter.

The plantsmen have already commenced the delivery of blooming stock and the retail stores bespeak the early approach of the festive holiday. The dreary days of Lent are near the end, and if all signs do not fail, this will be one of the greatest Easters ever known. Never have I seen such variety and excellence of blooming plant stock as will be offered to the public this spring. Enormous quantities have already been spoken for and there is difficulty to find any grower who has not booked special orders to absorb every first-class blooming plant in his greenhouses.

It is a little early yet to describe the decorations of the bon-ton stores, but we shall be able to say more of this in our next, and perhaps we may secure some excellent photographs of the best known stores for your consideration.

Owing to the death of ex-Mayor Hewett and the illness of Andrew Carnegie, it has been announced that the Agricultural College, formerly at Briar Cliff, and later at Poughkeepsie, is to be discontinued. This is most unfortunate, as under Mr. Powell's superintendence the institution was rapidly becoming a most successful and creditable one. Four hundred acres of land had been bought, $50,000 had already been spent, and buildings had been proposed to cost over $200,000.

At 1 o'clock Saturday morning, long after Julius Lang of 53 West Thirtieth street, was "sleeping the sleep of the just," his awning caught fire and before the flames were extinguished they climbed to the fourth floor of the apartment house above his headquarters. Fortunately no great damage was done.

Van Horne, Griffen & Co. report a most satisfactory increase in their business this spring, the demand for bent glass being especially noticeable. They are amongst the leaders in this line in this country.

The seedsmen are all very busy, working night and day, to fill their orders, and all report the greatest demand, so early in the year, that they have ever experienced. Roman hyacinths are generally reported as too high in price in Europe, and the sales have been limited to date.

Most of the victims of grippe and other spring diseases are convalescing. Mr. Ghormley is having a turn at it now, and Arthur Merrit is nursing a sore hand, which resulted from an encounter with the thorn of a phœnix, and which placed him "hors de combat" for several days. He will be fortunate to entirely recover in time for his artistic Easter work.

The National Florists' Board of Trade under its new management is making rapid strides and its officers are all gentlemen of the highest reputation and ability. The new offices at 56 Pine street are very convenient and subscribers will be heartily welcomed when visiting the city. These gentlemen, Messrs. Hayden, Moore and Walker, are worthy of the entire confidence of the trade and will issue reliable and complete reports that will in time become as valuable as a correct directory.

The open-air market, on the site of the old Clinton market, opened this week under favorable auspices, and the market problem will continue to be of interest until the efforts to induce the city to erect a new market on the old site are accomplished. A building worth a quarter of a million is contemplated. Mr. John Bernie has been particularly active in interesting the authorities in the project and Messrs. Steinhoff, Dreyer and Schultheis are associated with him on the committee which has been appointed. William Plumb, whose last accomplishment was the successful management of the Brooklyn carnation convention, has resigned his position as landscape gardener and estate manager and has joined the ranks of the Madison rose growers.

A. Warendorf, the retail Broadway florist, has added the responsibility of a wholesale commission business to his repertoire, and has become manager of what is known as the "New Jersey Cut Flower Co." The store is at 37 West Twenty-eighth street, next door to Walter Sheridan's, and Mr. Warendorf anticipates a successful venture into the arena where "two horses can be ridden successfully in different rings at the same time." It has been done here already.

A great many visitors have honored New York with their presence lately, among them Robert Craig, of Philadelphia; Fred Mathison, of Waltham; W. W. Edgar, of Waverly; Fred Breitmeyer, of Detroit, and H. H. Battles, of Philadelphia.

William Scott called on his way to Jewett City, Conn., to accept a position with A. A. Young of that city. He has been in Staunton, Va., all winter, and was formerly with Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago.

The rose show at Philadelphia was "a thing of beauty" and the hours from 6 o'clock Wednesday evening until midnight, when the New York vistors were obliged to catch their train for home, are a very pleasant memory. The decoration of the Horticultural Hall, where the exhibit was made, was chaste and artistic as usual. The general effect was beautiful, and the display of roses quite up to expectations. Patronage was satisfactory and the best people of the Quaker City were in evidence. Dreer's new Pandanus was a center of interest and Breitmeyer's new rose attracted universal attention and most favorable comment. Its color showed up most beautifully under the artificial light and it was voted "just the thing for evening decoration." Banquet hall downstairs, where the bowlers congregate, was turned into a cozy refreshment room where a most excellent menu awaited the hundred members and visitors, who spent a most happy evening together. President Newbold was greatly missed, but ex-Mayor Smith, of Philadelphia, proved himself one of the jolliest and wittiest of toast masters. The best of feeling prevailed and a jollier company it would have been hard to find. Mr. Smith was especially novel and original in his introductions and kept everybody in good humor with his "colored" illustrations.

BUSINESS METHODS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

XII.

A Follow-Up System.

If you are satisfied with your business and your sales, if you dispose of all your product at good prices, and nothing goes to waste, you will not be interested in this article. If, however, your trade is local and fickle, if more or less of your stock goes to waste or if competition cuts prices, the few suggestions which I may offer herewith may be of assistance to you.

There is no better method of doing business at the present time than through the mails. The general prosperity for a few years past has benefitted no class of people more than the farmers and those living in the smaller towns and cities throughout the rural regions. What were deemed luxuries a few years ago by the wealthy are now considered necessities by the great middle classes. Flowers that only a Vanderbilt or Gould could purchase 20 years ago are now purchased by every country "Reuben" who has a best girl, or would be if "Reuben" only knew about them. The possibilities of the country trade, stimulated by the extension of rural free delivery, cannot be overestimated. But such trade will not come to us unless we go after it, and to assist those who wish to go after it I am writing this article.

If you are a grower of cut flowers and plants and wish to dispose of your products away from home, you must issue a price list or catalogue. The more attractive you make your catalogue the more goods you sell and the more you will have to ask for them. As to the size of your catalogue, you must be judge of that. Nothing in the line of illustrations will describe and sell flowers like good half tones, printed on good paper. If you have no good engraver in your own town send to the larger cities (the Review has many nice half tones they would gladly sell you), get the name of some good engraver and tell him what you want. If you can photograph plants or flowers on your own premises, and have them reproduced in your catalogue you will get nearer to what you want and ought to illustrate than if you obtain them elsewhere. But whatever you illustrate, be sure that it fully illustrates what you want it to. Make a specialty of the goods you illustrate and be sure to have them to fill orders.

As cut flower prices vary with the season you will have to make prices for each season. Be sure to have something especially attractive for the holidays, Christmas and Easter. Side lines can be put in if your facilities will permit, and will help to keep you in touch with your customers all the year round. So much for the preliminaries.

After your catalogue is printed you will want to distribute it. Don't make the mistake of sending it indiscriminately to every one whose name you see, regardless of whether he buys or cares for your goods. If your catalogue costs 2 or 3 cents or more you will be throwing that much away if you distribute it promiscuously. Advertise a catchy collection of flowers or a plant in some of the best country papers—oftentimes you can pay for such ads. with flowers. Keep at it from September until June, and you will be surprised at the number of inquiries you receive, some ordering flowers, others asking for prices, etc.

Right here is where many advertisers make a mistake. They receive many answers and orders from their advs., but they do not follow them up. The end and aim of advertising is to acquaint people with your goods. You make them acquainted with your goods in order to sell them, and by keeping them constantly before the people you will sell them. The turning of inquiries into orders is the end and aim of a follow-up system.

Provide yourself with stiff, white cards, about the size of a 6½ envelope, and have them ruled and printed in this manner.

No. 1 shows the follow-up side of the card; No. 2 the reverse or order side.

In response to an inquiry, you sent John Brown a catalogue Nov. 16, 1901. For some reason, he did not order at that time. Dec. 3, 1901, you follow with a form letter, saying you had mailed him your catalogue in response to his request, but not being favored with his order, you write to inquire if he received it. If not it must have gone astray and you would be glad to mail him another. If at any time he is in need of any goods in your line you would be glad to hear from him, etc. You also enclosed a special circular of holiday greens, etc. This, however, failed to elicit any response, so on Jan. 10, after you were through with holiday rush, you mailed him a second form order, calling attention in a polite way to your catalogue and goods and enclosing a circular on violets, of which you are making a specialty, etc. These letters follow in regular order during the season without receiving any response from John Brown.

At the opening of the fall season, Sept. 23, 1902, you mail him another one, calling attention to the many desirable things in your new catalogue, which you are about to issue, and ask him if he wishes a copy. You seal this letter and attach a 2c stamp, which will bring it back if the party is dead or has moved away. It isn't returned to you, so you are sure he is still receiving mail there and you send your new catalogue Oct. 8. Still no response, and on Oct. 16 you send him another letter, enclosing a circular on Boston ferns or some other attractive plant. Nov. 3 you receive an order from this party for $4.50 for a box of flowers for his lady love, or a funeral bouquet for a friend just deceased, or perhaps a Boston fern. Your labor and expense have not been in vain, for you have at last gained a customer and if you treat him right he is likely to order and reorder and tell all his friends at Brownville about your lovely flowers, and some of them will some time want some, and they, in turn, will tell others.

The cost of obtaining this first order has been about 25c. If you have a local store your rent, heat, light, clerk hire, etc., will be several times as much for every order you obtain, and a careless delivery boy may ruin Mrs. Smith's palm or let Mrs. Jones' flowers freeze and you will be working hard from early morn until dewy night to sell $50 worth over the counter, while many days your country sales, with one-third the worry and expense, will net you twice as much.

But you must keep everlastingly at it if you would win success in the mail order business. You must advertise continuously, you must "follow them up" and when you get them you must treat them right. I have heard on good authority, that a certain mail order house sent one party 22 letters before finally receiving an order for a steel cooking range. We follow an object to catch up to it, and when we catch up to it we generally grasp it. There is scarcely any object or aim in life that we cannot attain if we are systematic and persistent in pursuing it.

If your business is large enough to demand the services of a stenographer these follow-up letters and circulars can be addressed by her at odd intervals when not busy with other work. A cabinet with drawers of the proper size to contain the cards can be obtained at small expense. There is no need of an elaborate cabinet bought from card index people, for any good carpenter or cabinet maker can soon construct one that for efficiency is just as good as the expensive ones.

Your form letters can be obtained from specialists who print them to match any make of typewriter of any colored ribbon. Your circulars should be a little smaller than an envelope, and be printed on both sides, with an illustration on each side to catch the eye at a glance. All your printed matter, letter heads, envelopes, etc., should be neat and attractive. They will give tone and standing to your business, just as neat attractive boxes will give your flowers a good reputation. SYSTEM.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A weak week, and therefore a weak report. Retailers speak of the lightest trade since summer.

Pink and white roses, carnations, single violets and small white flowers not a bit plentiful if trade had any body to it; but red roses, double violets, lilies and some varieties of bulb goods could supply a heavy demand. The red rose situation is aggravated by the appearance of Jaeques and Brunners, as well as by an overproduction of Meteors, Liberties, Beauties and Helen Goulds. Probably the less said about the average quality, the better.

The lily situation really looks bad. Some growers report a loss of half their crop and Easter prices are estimated upon at least a 15-cent basis. Most growers attribute the losses to poor bulbs. Of course, I would not dare say so, but I place most of it to the credit of methods of growing them. There are a few things that must be known and done in growing a crop of anything under glass, but there are many more things that must be known and not done in order to make a success of the crop, whatever it may be.

Various Items.

Some change is to be noticed about our retailers, if not too plentiful in the pocket. T. E. Waters changes the geography of the city by moving the Milk St. Floral Co. to 37 Arch street, and a change is made at Newton Center because of the approaching marriage of Miss Margaret Philbrick, who consequently sells out her store to H. J. McGrady. Miss E. F. McGrady will be manager under the new arrangement.

Among the visitors in town last week I saw Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Hannaford and Mrs. Sanford, of Portsmouth, N. H., at Sutherlands.

The new co-operative market on Columbus avenue is rapidly getting into form for occupation and will be thoroughly so by the time this item reaches you. J. S. Manter.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

March, so wonderfully mild throughout, went out with a roar that gave the cut flower market a time. The demand steadily improved last week. Saturday was a really good day, so that when the cold wave and then the storm arrived, cutting down the supply, there was almost a scarcity in some varieties of flowers. Prices have not materially advanced, but they have advanced a little, and are held so much firmer that the returns to the growers are better now than for some time past. Next Monday, the opening day of the new Council, is expected to be a big day. An active market for a couple of weeks seems assured.

Prosperity.

Leo Niessen found the carnation growers in the neighborhood of Wilmington, Delaware, in a very prosperous condition. The stock was looking well, but the most convincing evidences of success were the new houses in course of erection. Simon Bros. had completed one house, 196x25, and were beginning another house of about the same dimensions. Across the way Chas. H. Simon was building a house, 190x26, on his new place started last season. There were rumors of more houses in other quarters, but it is too soon to talk of them yet.

A Little Dinner.

This is getting to be a great wining and dining season in our business—all sorts of festivities from the "Lamb among the Lions" to the rose banquet. A few days after this latter event it happened that Chas. G. Johnson, manager of the Hanes flower store at Atlantic City, came here on his birthday. This seemed such a happy coincidence that he gave a little impromptu dinner in the dining room at Broad street station. The guests were Edward Reid, Leo Niessen and Samuel S. Pennock.

Notes.

J. Austin Shaw, of New York, attended the rose banquet in this city last week.

Eugene Bernheimer has been receiving an exceptionally fine lot of single violets.

The fakirs were ordered off the streets last Saturday by the police. There are exceptions to this order which it is understood are merely for the time being.

J. Liddon Pennock returned from Florida last week.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had a large wedding order at the Flanders last week.

Jos. Heacock and his son James spent a day among the New York growers last week. They were especially pleased with their visit to Searborough. Mr. Heacock thinks that the Briar Cliff greenhouses are the finest of their kind in the world. He reports Mr. Pierson's Beauties as being in splendid condition.

The Floral Exchange won first prize for its Queen of Edgely, and second prize for its American Beauty roses at the Boston show last week. It is understood that no Edgely prize was offered on the schedule, but the judges being pleased with the exhibit, awarded it a special first prize.

Godfrey Asehmann has issued a circular describing his specialties in Easter plants.

Great preparations are being made to dispose of Easter plants throughout the city. The Flower Market is and has been handling plants in quantity, selling by sample. Selling by sample is also being taken up by some of the commission houses. Phil.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

We have had a fair share of sunny weather lately, and the supply of roses is a shade larger, but carnations are as short in supply as ever. Demand continues good, and the best Brides and Maids reach $10.00, though $8.00 is the top in most cases. Carnation prices are even better held than last week, and it is a poor flower that won't bring $3.00, though some stock reaches as low as $2.00. The best Beauties now reach up to $6.00 a dozen, though there are not a great many of this grade. Bulbous stock, especially in white, is selling better this season than last, on account of the short supply of other flowers. There are plenty of lilies, and they help out in many cases.

The feeling regarding the Easter supply is a shade less pessimistic than last week. If the sunny weather continues the supply of roses will come within reasonable distance of meeting the demand, but the carnation supply is bound to be short. There will probably be nearly enough lilies, taking all grades into consideration, but the quality question will be a factor. Of strictly first-class lilies, on long stems, there will likely be none too many. We hear predictions of a stiffening of the price on the best lilies when the average of quality is known in the market. Those who would be sure of first-class lilies would be wise to place their orders early. The other grades will help out in case of a serious shortage in roses and carnations.

The supply is now so short of demand in roses and carnations that Easter prices are practically already in effect. And in view of this, it is unlikely that much is being held back in the pickle vat.

Various Items.

Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., has been confined to his home for a few days with an attack of the grippe.

Mr. L. Coatsworth, of Benthey & Co., has returned from his southern trip.

Mr. N. Wietor, of Wietor Bros., reports the receipt of heavy orders for chrysanthemum rooted cuttings.

Work has been begun on the new range of houses at Peter Reinberg's.

Paul Kopanka has returned from Pleasant Hill, Mo., and is now with Geo. Reinberg.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The past week has been rather quiet in all lines except funeral work, which seems plentiful. Cut flowers are not overplentiful, still plenty of them are in for the demand, with the exception of white carnations. These have been scarce all this season. Most of our growers are cutting as much as usual, and the quality of stock in general is very good. With good, bright weather they say plenty of all kinds of stock will be in the market.

The general opinion is that there will be plenty of lilies in the market, as only a very few have been coming in, and Easter is yet two weeks off. Last year lilies intended for Easter came in ahead of time, thus reducing the stock greatly; but this not being the case this year, plenty of them should be in the market, both cut and pot plants.

In roses, the past week a very fine lot of Brides, Maids, Meteors, and Gates were seen at our wholesale houses. Of these Brides had the best call; still all others sold well.

Carnations are coming better, but not enough to supply the big demand for them, and everybody is looking for white. In a shipment of a thousand carnations, not more than fifty white will be among them.

Harrisiis, callas and Romans are in big demand. Dutch hyacinths are selling well. Violets have shortened up some, but enough of them are in the market, although the demand for them is good. All greens are in big demand at the usual prices.

Notes.

Visitors the past week were Mrs. M. Van Tol, representing Schaum & Van Tol, of Boskoop, Holland; Mr. F. W. Creighton, representing Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia. Mr. Creighton is on his way home from the coast and reports a fine trade.

Mr. Homer L. Wiegand, of H. Wiegand & Sons, of Indianapolis, Ind., spent a few days with us the past week.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers, on Grand avenue, is making a great show of fine Easter plants. Mrs. Ayers reports that business is good. My call was to congratulate Mr. Will Adels on his big boy, but Will left early, as he was needed at home.

George Waldbart's place on Grand avenue is also one of attraction, with his fine display of blooming plants and cut flowers. At this place they are always busy.

The Grand avenue store of the late firm of Ellison & Tesson, under the Odean, is offered for sale.

Carl Beyer and Fred Weber, Jr., visited Belleville Sunday, the former a guest of E. W. Guy, and the latter a guest of Mayor Halstedt.

C. A. Kuehn has added ribbons to his supply department, he being the sole agent for this city for the Conqueror brand, manufactured by Lion & Wertheimer, New York.

Club Meeting.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club should not be overlooked by the members. This will be our annual rose meeting and will take place at Belleville in the Commercial Club rooms. Mr. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, will read an essay on "Experience with Short-Span Greenhouses," and Emil Schray, our secretary, will read one on "Forcing Hydrangeas for Easter." The roses which have been promised for exhibition, and the pleasant trip will, no doubt, bring out a large attendance. The date is Thursday afternoon, April 16, at 2 o'clock.

J. J. B.

BUFFALO.

I took that promised automobile ride and visited several of our plant growing establishments. J. H. Rebstock has a fine lot of lilies, azaleas, Rambler roses and a good assortment of other Easter stock. W. Belsey has a very neat lot of lilies and azaleas, and has not been troubled with his lilies keeping so dwarf as many of those to be seen.

Mr. C. F. Christensen has been cutting Bermuda lilies since the first of last December and made no special effort to keep any quantity for Easter, although he has a few hundred looking just right. He has a number of fine pots of Boston fern that I am sure there will be a scramble for. A well grown lot of cinerarias is another of his specialties. While walking through his place, besides his well managed carnations, his house of mignonette strikes you as one of the most profitable things on the place—thousands of spikes for Easter—and he has been cutting this since last October.

L. H. Neubeck is growing most of his Easter stock at Corfu, except a nice lot of azaleas and spiraeas. I don't remember ever seeing freesia growing and sending up such a mass of bloom as Louis has at Corfu. It was planted on the benches in 5 inches of soil. His place has been headquarters for sweet peas. He has picked about 200 dozen a week since November last, grown on benches. The first crop was sown end of July. And then it was dark and Dennis was afraid of an accident, so I could see no more, but there are lots more of Easter stuff, and in addition to what is grown here, our commission man, Kasting, will be filling up some vacant warehouse. Mr. O'Connell's specialty is hybrid perpetual roses in 5 and 6-inch pots and Bougainvillea Sanderiana.

That hot week of two weeks ago played havoc with the violet crop, particularly the singles, and unless there are a lot of people who know better how to prevent them running all to leaf than we do, violets will be scarce.

The annual election of officers of the Buffalo Florists' Club occurred last Thursday. The three excellent working officers, Wm. Legg, secretary; Emile Booker, financial secretary, and Chas. H. Keitsch, were all re-elected without opposition. Chas. Hewson was elected vice-president, and for president they could find no better timber than the old man (W. S.). Plenty of younger and better material exists, and the younger element must come forward. It is the age of young men in all enterprises and organizations, and florists' clubs need be no exception. Let the young men rise up in their strength and brightness and show us old fellows how to run things.

Now, Mr. Editor, my notes are already lengthy and little space is left for the banquet which followed. The committee of arrangements did nobly by taking us to the Ellicott Club. Nothing is too good for us once a year. We did not have the mayor or comptroller or any eloquent political lawyer, or anybody whose powers of speech overshadowed the plain florist. Thirty-eight sat down and every one was an active florist. As a good time and a jolly time it far surpassed any gathering our club has ever attempted. Mr. Harry Bunyard was present just to give it a metropolitan flavor, and Herman C. Baartman, of Holland, put a European coloring on part of the programme. As every soul made a more or less lengthy talk, it is impossible to speak of them all. Capt. Braik led off finely, as he always does. Dan Long I never listened to with so much pleasure before. His theme was "Guarding the Refinement of Our Business"—not to handle and talk of flowers as if they were bars of soap, but speak of them and treat them with the sentiment that they are one of nature's greatest blessings, the accompaniment of joy and hope, and wherever used appeal to the best that is in us.

Mr. Legg provoked much merriment by telling us what essays would be read before the club for the coming year. Capt. Braik is to tell us "How it feels to have your buggy smashed by a trolley car." Mr. Kasting "How to combine politics with the commission business." W. Scott on "Butted glass when it butts," and so on. Mr. Keitsch, Mr. Brooker and many others were in good form, and last but not least, there was one young man present whom we all were glad to see, and we do hope that now he is started he will take a lively interest in the affairs of the club. This was our most excellent business man and prominent florist, Wm. J. Palmer. A dozen more should have been present, and they missed a most pleasant evening.

Last November the H. A. Meldrum Co. department store of our city held a chrysanthemum show, giving away some $400 in cash premiums. It was such a success, drawing thousands of people to their store, that the company has announced to our club that it would increase the premiums next November to $1,000, and left it to the B. F. C. to appoint a manager and get up a premium list. C. H. Keitsch was quickly selected as manager, and the premium list will now soon be completed. My object in speaking of this now is to let the local growers and those in the vicinity know what this enterprising firm is doing, so that they can prepare to participate. The classes will be few, but the prizes will be worth winning.

Seed Trade News.

Rochester, N. Y.—The Cleveland Seed Co. says: "The jobbing trade has been quite brisk up to the present time, notwithstanding the prevailing high prices, and stocks will be pretty well closed out. The indications are that cabbage and onion will be planted very sparingly throughout New York state this spring, owing to the sad experiences of the past season. Canners have absorbed the sweet corn very generally, leaving the retailer very light stocks to deal out to the consumer. Dwarf wrinkled peas and wax beans are in light supply, while late peas and green pod beans are plentiful, although we believe no very large stocks are being carried. The early opening of spring has started seeding quite generally, but we believe blankets will be needed to protect such before we get settled weather."

Crook City, S. D.—W. H. Williams says: "The seed trade of the Black Hills has wonderfully changed. In early days 100 lbs. of onion seed would hardly hold out for the retail trade, but now 100 lbs. would supply the whole of the Hills. The cause of the falling off is the advent of railroads, which bring in the products of Iowa and Nebraska at very low rates. Then in early days every rancher had his truck patch, which supplied him with ready money early in the season and long before his main crops were producing, but these people turned the cash into a cow or two and now are well to do cattlemen. But the seed trade is more diversified than in early days. The wants now take in about the whole list, but in limited quantities, with far better selections. The outlook for the coming season is good."

The seed firm of George Carter & Co., of Charlottetown, P. E. I., is in difficulty. Since 1886, this company has carried on a very successful business, but owing to speculation in stocks on the part of George Carter, trouble has come; he has left the province, and there is an execution against him for $15,000.

Genesee, Idaho.—Mayor Hermann has leased 100 acres of fine land upon which he will grow seeds, to meet the demand for seeds grown under the climatic conditions that prevail here.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The A. J. Brown Co. reports that trade is improving and that it looks like an early spring.

Is your time of any value? If so you can save a good deal of it by looking up any stock you may want in our classified advs. It is the quickest, shortest and most economical way.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—The Grace Hill Nursery, now being established on Boyle Heights, is to be devoted exclusively to the growing of carnations. The nursery contains 37 acres and three greenhouses, each 15x200, have already been erected. Six similar houses are soon to be built, and all will be heated by steam. Joseph W. Wolfskill is the proprietor and the head gardener is Geo. W. Watson. Both were for years engaged in carnation growing at Redondo.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Mr. Geo. T. Powell, director of the School of Practical Agriculture established here some time ago, has issued an announcement that on account of lack of funds for buildings and general equipment the school will be obliged to close its work for the present.

On Monday conditions were but little changed from last week, the general depression continuing. But later there was a heavy slump in the market, the price on the best Beauties dropping to $15 and on the best Brides and Maids to $6. The flood of violets continues and the best do not reach above 30 cents, while many are jobbed off at 10. On Wednesday the dealers were blue indeed, and the Easter demand cannot come too quick to the assistance of the market.

ROME, GA.—John T. Taylor reports business as very satisfactory. He has two houses, a rose house 20x70 and a carnation house 11x50, heated by hot water under pressure, which he built himself, doing all the work personally. There has been all winter a good demand for medium priced flowers, and he has had an average of four receptions a week. Lilacs and violets are now in bloom and the birds are singing in the branches of the oaks, which are nearly in full leaf. In the vegetable garden potatoes are one to three inches high and he cut his first asparagus March 25.

KINDLY discontinue my several classified advs., as stock offered is now all engaged. Thanks to the REVIEW.—WM. A. FINGER, Hicksville, L. I., N. Y.

The unusual number of dark days have retarded the advance of Easter lilies, but we have many good ones in sight. Lilies will be rather scarce. There will be plenty of bulbous stuff. Carnations will not be any too plentiful, especially in white. Roses are looking well, with fine stem and color. Smilax is very scarce. Violets will be plentiful. Ferns, leucothoe, galax, and wild smilax are very fine. There will be plenty of blooming plants of all kinds to help fill out.

Headquarters for EASTER PLANTS

We make a specialty of BLOOMING PLANTS for Easter week. I have the largest stock in Philadelphia; larger and in better condition than ever before. All the large greenhouses and frames are crowded with the choicest stock, at lowest cash prices

AZALEA INDICA—3 houses full. It is not necessary to mention that all my customers know that I am the agent of a large concern in Belgium, Ghent. I go there every year, if possible, and secure for my customers the best that can be had. I have all the leading American varieties, raised all winter in pots, and not stored away in cold frames, without being potted, like some do. White—Niobe, B. Andre, Alba, Deutsche Perle. Pink—Van der Cruyssen, Dr. Moore, Simon Mardner and many others. About 1 doz. variegated varieties, such as Vervaeneana, Empress of India, etc., and many new varieties, double and single, in 6 to 7-inch pots. Prices from 60c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. As a special I must mention my Mme. Van der Cruyssen this year. They are unusually fine, as round as an apple, covered with buds. Price 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Specimen 10 to 11-inch pots, $5.00 each.

AZALEA MOLLIS, a novelty when in bloom, 6-in. pots, 60c to 75c each.

LILIUM HARRISII and BERMUDA-GROWN LONGIFLORUMS, fine plants in 6-inch pots, 15 to 36 inches high, from 5 to 16 buds at the rate of 10c per bud.

CINERARIAS HYDRIDA. I have an enormous quantity, about 2,000, 5¼ to 6-inch pots, all shades, $3.00 to $4.00 per doz.

SPIRÆA COMPACTA, 6-in. pots, $3 per doz.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA. Have a house full this year better advanced than ever, 6-inch pots, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00 to $9.00 per doz. Specimens, 7-inch pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each.

DAISIES, yellow or white, 6-inch pots, $3.00 per dozen.

BEGONIAS, Pres. Carnot, Metallica and others, 5½ to 6-inch pots, at $3.00 per doz. Begonia Vernon, red, 6-inch, $3.00 per doz. Begonia Vernon, red, 4-inch, $1.50 per doz. Mixed varieties, 4-inch, $1.50 per doz.

HYACINTHS, about 10,000, my own importation, named varieties, best size, all shades, $10.00 per 100.

TULIPS, Tournesol, dbl., red and yellow striped, best Tulip in the market, 3 in a 4-inch pot, $1.50 per doz. pots.

DAFFODILS, Von Sion, best dbl., double nosed, 3 in a 5-inch pot, $2.00 per doz. pots (worth $3.00). Cash with order please. All goods shipped at purchaser's risk. Can supply many thousands of references on application.

To save express charges, please state whether to ship in pots or not.

Buyers coming to Philadelphia, are respectfully invited to visit my place and inspect stock. Take 13th St. or Germantown car to Ontario St.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Flowers are beginning to come in very freely. Thousands of late blooming daffodils, especially Sir Watkin, and carnations in great abundance are making the florists' windows resplendent with color. Roses are not very plentiful as yet, but the chances are good for Easter week. Lilium Harrisii and longiflorum are in fair supply and at reasonable prices. The prospects for Easter are good as regards trade, and many of the florists have big decorations to attend to. Business during Lent has been nothing to brag of, and outside of funeral orders there has been little doing. Carnations and roses still maintain the same prices, but the chances are for a drop in the near future. Valley is a glut at present, but tulips are in short supply, the season being about over. Narcissus poeticus is in full bloom here and comes in handy both for funeral work and as a decorative flower.

Notes.

The Cox Seed Co. reports a record-breaking spring business, both in the seed and plant line. This firm has a large nursery and packing department near Mountain View and its facilities have been taxed to the utmost to handle this season's trade.

Podesta & Baldocchi, of Sutter street, are displaying some elegant Brides and Maids. They are from Burlingame.

Mr. A. H. Galloway, of Fruitvale, is to erect another large carnation house for the coming season. He has been very successful in handling Estelle and Lawson.

A. Mann, Jr., the well known Polk street florist, has been under the weather for several weeks, but is around again in good shape. G.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The meeting of the Florists' Club last Tuesday evening was well attended owing to a notice being sent out to the effect that some irregularities concerning the retiring secretary, J. F. Coombs, would be taken up. It turned out that Mr. Coombs was presented with a Masonic charm suitably engraved. The irregularity was thoroughly explained by Geo. S. Osborn in presenting the token of appreciation to Mr. Coombs who responded in his usual vein.

Mr. Osborn also gave a talk on red spider as viewed by a Boston microscopist.

Mr. Frey, the newly elected secretary, declined to serve, so the club immediately re-elected Mr. Coombs. This may seem to have been a Coombs and Osborn affair but Mr. McRonald, our ex-president, brought in a resolution regarding the election of an assistant secretary and later will introduce a new system of keeping records.

The meeting closed with refreshments, cigars and a social time, enlivened by Pres. Wirth's trained musical performers. O.

Hornellsville, N. Y.—Daniel Wettlin, the father of W. A. Wettlin, the florist of this city, died at Newark, N. J., March 18, aged 66 years. He was formerly proprietor of the greenhouses now conducted by his son here. He is survived by a widow, five sons and two daughters.

Racine, Wis.—A. P. Johnson has purchased the Clemenson property and the greenhouses will be conducted by his son, J. N. Johnson.

Lilies for Easter

FOR several years lilies have averaged of poor quality and undoubtedly a good many flower buyers through the country have been disappointed in their Easter supply. Good lilies have been scarce because of so much disease. Months ago we took steps to insure satisfaction to lily buyers for this Easter by arranging with a first-class grower to force a lot of special stock for us. For Easter we shall have 15,000.

These are all true longiflorum and in perfect condition. We are ready to book your orders at the following prices:

$2.00 per doz. $15.00 per 100. $125.00 per 1000. 500 AT 1000 RATE.

We shall have other stock in quantity. Send for our Easter Price List.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The past week has been a week of sunshine, with business as bright as the weather. Stock of all kinds was plentiful and fine. But bulbous stock—oh, my! too much of it with no prices. From all indications there will be none for Easter. All around the city jonquils and hyacinths can be seen in full bloom. Good roses bring from 8 to 10 cents; Beauties, $3 to $4 per dozen. Carnations sell well at from 2 to 4 cents. Azaleas at $1 go well. Lilacs seem to go slow (too many). Violets are too plentiful and go at any old price.

The present outlook for Easter stock is rather slim, but lilies will be plentiful, although the percentage of diseased ones this year will be far greater than in the past. Growers are now booking orders at 12½ cents, all buds counted. Roses will all be taken up at from 12½ to 15 cents and not enough to go around.

Dutch drummers came around this week in droves. Mr. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, and Schmidt, of New York, were also in town.

The weekly attendance of the bowlers seems to be on the increase. At the last meeting we had eighteen men in line. Below will be found the scores.

PITTSBURG.

Both the wholesale and retail florists report business very satisfactory. Prices have not changed materially since last week. Stock is plentiful enough and moving out without any great loss.

The prospects for Easter are very encouraging. Stock of all kinds is in good condition and the predictions are that the supply will be ample to meet any demand.

The latest schedule of Easter prices offered by the wholesalers on lilies are $2 per dozen, $12 to $15 per hundred. In bulb stock the supply will be heavy for Easter.

Mr. Burki, president of the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., has let the contract for an iron structure rose house 40x450 feet to the Lord & Burnham Co.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club, scheduled for next Tuesday evening, has been postponed on account of the date being so near Easter; the meeting will be held Tuesday evening, April 21.

David Geddis has built a conservatory, 18x40 feet, in the rear of his storeroom for the display of palms and ferns.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is receiving consignments of Ulrich Brunner roses which are very fine.

Martin Renkauf, representing H. Baversdorfer & Co., was with us last week.

Hoo-Hoo.

I think your valuable paper should be in the hands of every employe as well as employer.—Wm. Scott, Staunton, Va.

CARNATIONS.

NOVELTIES: THIS YEAR'S INTRODUCTIONS.

MRS. THEODORE ROOSEVELT—A brilliant shade of deep cerise pink, flamed with carmine. Finely formed. Average 3-inch flower on strong, stiff stems. Habit vigorous, early, free. Fragrance, strong clove. Selected, strong, well rooted cuttings now ready. $12 00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

ALPINE GLOW—A deep salmon pink on opening, which finishes a bright Daybreak tint. Good sized bloom, averaging 2¾-inch at this season of the year. Flowers of great substance and a splendid keeper and shipper. An extra vigorous grower; early, profuse and continuous bloomer. Cuttings taken last April produce plants carrying 25 to 30 blooms by the 1st of March. We believe this will prove one of the most profitable of the Daybreak colored carnations. We shall have the following rooted cuttings ready for delivery at the dates specified: March 15th, 25,000; March 21st, 5000; April 5th, 5000. Price $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000. Quantity limited to the above.

LILLIAN POND—2000 selected plants from 2-inch pots, ready for immediate delivery. $10.00 per 100.

HER MAJESTY—From 2-inch pots, March 10th to 15th delivery. $10.00 per 100.

MARSHALL FIELD—From 2-inch pots, March 10th to 15th delivery. $12.00 per 100.

GOV. LOWNDES—Strong plants from 2-inch pots for immediate delivery. $12.00 per 100.

ADONIS—Strong plants from pots, March 10th to 15th delivery. $15.00 per 100.

ENCHANTRESS—From 2-inch pots, March 10th to 15th delivery. $12.00 per 100.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business showed more activity during the past week, and for the most part the demand was greater than the supply, although at times trade was very quiet.

Roses were very scarce in all colors. Beauties and Meteors were the most plentiful, but the quality was not very good. Long-stemmed Beauties were good property and sold well. The demand for Golden Gates was first-class and they sold better than any other variety. Liberties are still very scarce, and what few are to be had are quickly picked up and at high prices.

Carnations are more plentiful, but still there are scarcely enough to go around. Red ones are most in demand. Long high-grade Lawson find a ready market. A few extra quality Prosperity are quickly bought up. There are more pink than all other colors put together, but there are not enough of them at that. There is a good demand for violets, now that they are about gone, and a much better price is being obtained for them. Sweet peas move slowly.

The supply of asparagus and smilax is increasing, and they sell readily.

Bulbous stock is selling well, valley and Harrisii being very good property. Von Sion and daffodils also sell well. There are very few Romans grown, there being very little money in them for the growers, the price of the bulb is so high.

The outlook is very good for a large cut of stock for Easter, with the exception of carnations. With them it will be the same old story and there will not be enough to fill all orders. Some nice, clear weather will help things greatly, though. Harrisii lilies will not be any too plentiful.

The Fall Festival Association has accepted the schedule submitted by the Cincinnati Florists' Society for the shows to be held in September, and it will be out in a short time.

Mr. Ed. Bissel has left the employ of Huntsman & Co., and is now with the Marion Floral Co., of Marion, Ind.

The euchre party given by the Florists' Club was a decided success socially and all expressed themselves as having had a pleasant time. Mr. W. Gougy representing H. A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, was present and carried off the gentlemen's booby prize, which was an automobile filled with violet and valley.

Visitors the past week were: John Walker, of Youngstown, O.; Mr. Smith, of Smith & Fetters, Cleveland, O.; W. Gougy, of Philadelphia.

WATER LILIES.

Hardy and Tender Nelumbiums, Victorias, Etc.

We are Headquarters for Water Lilies and Aquatic Plants of all kinds.

Intending planters will gain a long start and early blooms by procuring dormant tubers of the tender Nymphæas now, and starting same indoors, thus securing strong plants for planting at proper season, and also save the expense of heavy express charges. We shall be pleased to furnish estimates and offer practical suggestions to those intending planting either large or small ponds.

The Florists' Manual by William Scott

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

We are headquarters for Hardy Perennials and can supply all the leading and popular varieties in immense quantities. We offer below a few specialties in this line.

ANEMONE JAPONICA.

35,000 plants in stock. Alba Japonica, Lady Ardilaun, Whirlwind and Queen Charlotte. Field-grown plants. $1.00 per doz.; $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

CAMPANULA PERSICIFOLIA MOERHEIMI.

This beautiful new bell flower is a wonderful advance over previous varieties of this type, its flowers produced during June and July remind one of a double white Cammellia. 2 to 2½ inches in diam., strong plants. 15c each; $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

CLEMATIS RECTA.

Forms bushy, erect clumps, 2 to 3 ft. high, producing masses of delicate white flowers, most useful for cutting during June and July. An old plant that is rarely seen but worthy of extended cultivation. Two-year-old plants. $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

HEMEROCALLIS "FLORHAM."

To those who are only familiar with the old Day Lily this new variety—a hybrid raised by Mr. Herrington—will be a revelation. Its sweet-scented, golden-yellow flowers are fully five inches across and produced very freely. A plant that should have a place in every garden. 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

STOKESIA CYANEA.

JAPANESE IRIS.

(50,000 home-grown roots in stock.) 25 finest named varieties, $1 50 per doz.; $10 00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000. Choicest Mixed sorts, 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

PERENNIAL PHLOXES.

(75,000 plants in stock.) One of our leading specialties. The plants we offer are field-grown, were divided in fall. They have from 3 to 6 eyes and will make a grand show this summer. 50 leading varieties. 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

STOKESIA CYANEA.

(Cornflower Aster.)

One of the most desirable hardy plants in our collection. A gem in every way. A most useful flower for cutting. Its flowers are not unlike a giant cornflower of a pleasing lavender blue color and produced without intermission from July to October. Strong plants. $1.25 per doz.; $10 00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

MONTREAL.

Trade in general is steady and Lent has very little influence just now. There will be a large stock available for Easter, excepting, perhaps, lilies, which are behind almost everywhere. If the weather keeps dark and rainy, as we have had it a little too much of late, the situation will not improve. In roses, Brides, Bridesmaids and Ivory are satisfactory in quality and quantity. Good Beauties and Perles are few. Carnations are plentiful enough, but the demand is too active for the supply. Violets are plentiful and fine, with valley and bulbous stock in quantity.

There will be a large and well grown stock of blooming plants for Easter, but the difficulty in keeping back azaleas and the scarcity of lilies should make the supply inadequate. Fine benches of Ramblers, hydrangeas, viburnum, callas and lilacs are seen.

Mr. Fred Bennett has been surprised by the boys, who offered him a handsome token of their friendship before his departure for Montreal. Fred has gone to London, Ont., to visit his brother Frank.

P. McKenna & Son have a large stock for Easter in viburnum, lilacs and hydrangeas. Their lilies and Ramblers want bright weather to be in time.

Jos. Bennett can show the finest lot of lilies and Ramblers in the city, with a good prospect of a large cut of roses, carnations and violets.

Hall & Robinson, of Outremont, have a fine general stock for Easter. They have the best bench of the Glacier carnation in the vicinity.

Mr. G. Trussel, who was on the sick list, suffering from an attack of the grippe, is well again. A "Bee."

The National Florists' Board of Trade, New York, has passed into new hands and we are advised that the new officers are men of unexceptional standing and reliability. There is certainly opportunity for such an organization to be of great value to the trade in supplying reliable information regarding the standing of those who seek to open credit accounts, and we wish the new management the fullest success.

Albert Lea, Minn.—P. Clausen & Son have purchased material for a carnation house 26x125 and a violet house 10x45. Trade has been good, with prospects for a large Easter demand. Easter lilies are scarce, as 40 per cent of the L. longiflorum were no good.

HEATING.

I have two return tubular boilers. One contains 73, the other 37 3-inch tubes, 13 feet long. I want to know, first, how many feet of 1¼-inch pipe can these boilers readily fill with steam; second, the rule for ascertaining this fact. CONSTANT READER.

In reply to Constant Reader, approximately, the two boilers he describes have a combined capacity of about 90 h. p.; they will, therefore, easily provide steam for greenhouse heating sufficient to supply about 17,000 lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe. He can figure one h. p. capable of furnishing steam for from 80 to 90 sq. ft. of radiating surface, varying in accordance with the arrangement and distribution of such surface. Two and three-tenths lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe contain about one foot of radiating surface. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

New York.

DEPTH OF BOILER.

How much should my steam boiler be below the returns to insure a free return of the condensed steam? SUBSCRIBER.

In reply to Subscriber, in order to have a free return of the condensed steam back to the boiler in a greenhouse heating plant the normal water line of the boiler must be below the line of the return main within the houses. There is an advantage in additional depth, thus, assuming the height of the normal water line in the boiler to be 4 feet 6 inches high, should make the boiler not less than 5 feet deep below the return mains. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

New York.

HYDRAULIC RAMS.

In reply to Mr. Gibbons, will say, the drive pipe froze up last fall. I disconnected it and let it stand until this spring, then I left the drive pipe the same length as before, but increased the size to 1¼-inch. So far it has worked fine, a great deal stronger than before, and does not stop. Thanks to all for the valuable information given me. SUFFERER.

CORRECTION.—In the advertisement of H. H. Berger & Co., in our issue of March 12, the quotations on fancy-leaved caladiums should have been $1.25 per doz., and $10 per 100, instead of per 100 and per 1,000.

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.
Yours very truly, ROBERT C. BANCROFT.

DINNER DECORATION.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a decoration arranged by Siebrecht & Son, New York, for a dinner at the Athletic Club of that city.

The table was decorated with Bridesmaid roses and lily of the valley and stood in the center of a room 40 by 50 feet. The four large columns were festooned with cape smilax, and this was also used on the chandeliers and the festoons of electric lights, while asparagus was clustered in the center.

On the top of each of the artificial or decorative columns was an electric globe, and in the corners of the room as well as the stage were immense groups of palms.

Seasonable Hints.

The preparation of young stock to be ready for the planting season requires great thoughtfulness and care. In preparing our planting plans due thought should be given to have our stock in just such a condition that it may be able to get the full benefit of a shift, either into a larger pot, or—as the hot season is already upon us—into the more general, cooler and freer possibilities of the bench.

To reap the full advantage of benching the proper stage of growth should be calculated correctly so that plants which require a shift should either receive such at once or if everything is in order and readiness be immediately benched. If they are in such a stage and planting is impossible it is best to repot at once as there is nothing so detrimental to young stock as leaving them in a pot bound condition after the advent of hot weather.

If repotting has to be resorted to it will be necessary to give the plants three weeks in the larger sized pots to get them into condition again before attempting to turn them out to plant them in the bench. The reasons for this are obvious. If the plant requires a shift it ought to have it at once, if it does not require it let it alone until it does. This is the true theory of rose culture, give the plant what it requires at the right time but do not attempt to force it to take what it really does not require at any time. The student who by careful observation and investigation succeeds in learning and understanding the requirements of the different classes of stock under his care is surely brushing aside the obstacles to success in his future career, and that should form one of the aims to master the art, the principal part of our studies.

Plants which are benched according to the natural season require more than two or four days to demonstrate very perceptibly that they appreciate this kind of treatment, as in that time the vigorous root system is quite apparent while in cases where the shifts closely follow each other the stock will come to a real standstill, and the difference between a standstill and a backward step is so imperceptible that no grower would care to take chances on it. To obtain really the best results care should be taken that no checks should occur at any time during the life time of the rose, as these are easily brought on during their period of life in pots, and especially as hot weather approaches this is more the time when the greatest care should be exercised in order to obviate any tendency that may lead to deterioration.

Keeping young stock free from mildew and insect troubles should also form part of our daily duties and as this is most necessary to the health of the plants it should not be subordinated to any other duty. Young stock which should now be making vigorous growth should be given ample bench room. This will be more easily done after we get rid of our Easter stock, and no time should be lost in taking advantage of the surplus space as spotted.

Beauties especially require ample breathing space at this season; by crowding them they are very liable to get a dose of black spot. The foliage being usually so dense that they are slow to dry out and if there is the least check to root action the trouble is sure to occur. By giving plenty of room to the bench free circulation of air among the leaves is assured and perfect syringing is made possible. The eyes also break stronger, the wood is more robust and the leaves acquire a texture which in a great measure protects them from the attacks of mildew and insect pests.

Ample ventilation, judicious watering and careful syringing are the stereotyped directions usually given for rose culture under glass; these are indeed facts, old and well established, and as "facts are chiels that win'na ding nor daur'na be disputed," it is well to give some attention to them, at the same time giving due attention to the thousand and one other things which constitute the minutiæ of rose culture which leads to success.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Planting in the Field.

Perhaps you will be too busy when this reaches you to give much thought to your young carnation plants or the field in which you expect to grow them this summer, but just as soon as Easter is gone you will begin to think of them again and in some localities it will be high time to begin preparations for planting out. This is a large country and the seasons vary a good deal between the different sections. What would seem very early in one part would seem rather late in others. Our good friend, Scott, often speaks of how he has to work in order to get through bedding out by Decoration Day, while here in our city we are always through a week or so before that date.. The same difference is found in planting out carnations, we are just about two weeks ahead of Buffalo and a little farther north they are still later and down around Louisville, Ky., they can safely bed out coleus by April 15th.

I started out to tell you how you should prepare for planting out, etc., and will get back to my subject. In the first place if you have enough good ground you should practice crop rotation; that is, never plant the same crop on the same piece of ground two seasons in succession. I do not mean to say that you can not grow good plants by using the same soil over and over for several seasons, but you will find that you will have better results from crop rotation. You will be troubled less with stem-rot and that alone is worth the trouble. If you had any stem-rot in your carnation patch last year you would be almost certain to have it in a worse form this year and year after year it would increase until by and by you would be unable to grow carnations on that field at all. You should spread on a coat of manure and plow it under just as early as you can, or still better the fall before so the frost can penetrate more thoroughly, and plow again just before you plant. Not only is it much easier to plant in freshly plowed soil but the plants take hold better too as the soil is moist all over the surface and the atmosphere too will be more moist than when the plowing had been done several days before and a dry crust has formed.

A good thing to have on your place is a swivel or hill-side plow so you can plow a five-foot strip just as well as a 200-foot square without leaving any ridges or trenches. Then you can plow each day as much as you will be able to plant and you will find it a great help. We do not use the system described by Mr. Osborn last week although he may find some advantages in it. I would not say a word against it. We plant our rows about 15 to 18 inches apart and the plants about 10 inches apart in the row, with no paths unless the patch should be extremely large. If the ground is fairly level we have no trouble from water washing the plants out, but if the ground is on a hillside you will have to make trenches to drain the water away. You will find a sandy soil much better to grow carnations in than a heavy clay soil. The plants will make a better root growth and in the fall you will be able to dig them without tearing the roots. You will also find a high piece of ground more desirable as it will drain better and there will be less danger from stem-rot in case of a rainy spell.

If you are obliged to plant on the same piece of ground several years in succession you should use every precaution to prevent stem-rot and any other disease you may have had in previous years. Be sure that you clear off all the old plants that were left out last fall, in fact you should have done that last fall when you finished digging. Mr. Osborn gave you some good advice and if you follow the plan he suggested you should have little or no trouble. But try in the future to have enough ground so you can rotate. A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Varieties to Mulch.

Every grower will be obliged to use his judgment as to which varieties it will be best to mulch and continue, bearing in mind two important points, namely, colors likely to be in demand and condition of plants at mulching time.

From past experience I have found pink and white to be the most in demand. Red is too warm a color as a rule to be much in demand during summer; however you should grow a few, also crimson. Yellow sorts are generally very prolific in warm weather and pay well if in demand. I would advise growing the above colors in about the following proportions: 30 per cent each pink and white, 10 per cent each red and crimson, 15 per cent yellow; the remaining 5 per cent can be devoted to either increasing other colors as desired or giving space to pets, freaks and oddities or experimenting with new varieties. It is quite an advantage to have been growing more than one variety in each color to choose from at this time.

I will give you my experience with varieties that we have grown here, relating their behavior during the summer. Mrs. Lawson has proved itself a most profitable one; being a strong grower it holds up well, responds quickly to liberal treatment and gives large quantity as well as good quality of bloom. Queen Louise behaves nicely all summer; its habit of growth is excellent while the long stiff stems surmounted by blooms of good substance commends this variety to all.

White Cloud, while producing good blooms, is of too sprawly growth, gets too tall and becomes unmanageable, resulting in many crooked stems. Murphy's White, of which I had 50 plants on trial this season, has done well and every indication leads me to believe it will hold well and produce a continuous crop; it is of fine habit and of unusually strong growth. Nelson we have tried only in a limited way, having had but few plants on trial last season and not having the position it should have, no positive opinion can be given. At the present time it gives promise of good results; the plants are a mass of strong healthy shoots which should give a large crop through May and June and probably longer, but owing to repairs we shall be obliged to throw them out by July 1.

Marquis and Floriana are in solid beds and with abundant ventilation have always paid well; the color of each is practically identical—pure rose pink while the fragrance of both is of the true clove. Estelle has always so far outclassed all reds; its color appeals to every lover of this color (brunettes) and it is an excellent keeper. Crane, about which there has been so much complaint in regard to stem rotting, has never given us any trouble but on raised benches it is not at all desirable to hold for summer; in solid beds I have no doubt but that it would be a bread winner. Potter Palmer being in its first year, no experience can be given; we have it on raised benches and at present it looks very promising. I am of the opinion that solid beds would suit it better during hot weather.

Eldorado and California Gold are both profuse summer bloomers and are always the last to be troubled with red spider. Speaking of red spider, it will be an excellent time directly after Easter to give your plants a heavy syringing. Every bloom will probably be cut so no damage can be done by wetting blooms; rake them fore and aft from every direction, choosing a bright day when plenty of ventilation is needed.

Geo. S. Osborn.

CARNATION NORWAY.

Will some one who has grown the carnation Norway give his opinion as to its merits? I have some nice young stock but hesitate to plant it as the few plants I have in now seem to be very shy bloomers. Possibly some one has discovered how to handle it better.

W. P. R.

We have had the variety Norway on our place ever since it was disseminated and it has done very well with us. We do not consider it as good as Lorna or Queen Louise as an all-round white but it has some very good points about it. It is a strong, rapid grower, has a strong stem and a large fragrant bloom. It wants rather late propagating and early housing so that the plants do not grow overly large in the field. Being a rapid grower its growth is rather soft and great care must be exercised in housing it in the fall and as large plants suffer more quickly than the smaller ones it is advisable to have the smaller plants of this variety. It soon makes up after it becomes established in the house. Give it a heavy soil and not too rich and I think it will give you good returns. Last year Mr. Weber had some magnificent blooms here in February at the A. C. S. convention and he told me that they were from cuttings struck in March and planted out in the field from the cutting bench. A. F. J. Baur.

BACTERIA.

We send a sample of our carnations. Last fall the disease affected only two varieties, and as we had just bought these two kinds we placed the blame on the firm we got them from. Today there isn't a plant on the place that is entirely free from it. What is the trouble?

The plants have had practically no syringing and when we were unable to ventilate in the day we always had air on at night except during a very cold spell. The plants have not been fed so far. The soil is rather sandy, from rotten sods with one-fifth of manure.

DORN.

The samples you sent are badly affected with bacteria and this may have been brought about by one of many causes. We usually attribute it to a weakened constitution, either from over propagating or improper culture. Sometimes overwatering, and at other times overfeeding. Your plants were not overfed according to your letter unless you mixed some bad manure or too much bone into the soil. This disease is not contagious and it only spreads as each plant takes it on its own accord through improper culture and as your own plants are affected as well as those you bought I would say that you should not blame the party who sold you those plants. Some varieties are more prone to this disease than others and you may have bought just such varieties which caused it to appear on them first. Flora Hill invariably shows traces of it during midwinter, but by growing slowly and withholding all food, and watering sparingly we keep it in good shape until brighter weather comes when it braces up and goes ahead producing heavy crops of fine blooms.

Was your soil in good condition? Had it been prepared long enough before you used it? Carnations do not like a rough soil, so all the sods should be well rotted before using. Did you plant early enough so the plants could become well established in their winter quarters before the dark winter weather came on? The water you are using may also be the cause and you should have a chemist analyze some of it as I notice in your letter that your other plants are also acting in much the same way.

A. F. J. BAUR.

GERANIUMS.

What may be the trouble with our geraniums? When they are potted a couple of months the roots die off. We had the same experience last year, and as we thought the water might be at the bottom of the trouble, we used exclusively surface water instead of artesian well water, but the trouble remains the same. We always use new soil with one-fifth of rotted manure, or a sprinkle of bone meal when we haven't got the manure. MAC.

By surface water I suppose Mac refers to rain water or perhaps water from a lake or stream. As to that I don't think there is much difference, and it would not account for the trouble. The soil also, as mixed, is all right. Geraniums like bone meal, but I don't believe in using it too strong with our bedding geraniums, as it causes a rank growth, and when bedded out they miss it and don't keep on growing.

But that's not to the point; geraniums that were shifted, say from a 2½ or 3-inch into a 4-inch on April 1st would by June 1st be pretty well potbound, and if subjected to a pretty severe drying out in May, which is often the case in busy times, would gradually lose their roots, and this could be overcome by plunging the pots on the bench, even if it be only half their depth, in some dry, well rotted manure, or, best of all, refuse hops.

A batch of geraniums in the month of May under unshaded glass, plunged into refuse hops, will in two weeks so outstrip those not plunged, in size, color and robustness, that the difference is remarkable. Earlier in the season I can not think of any cause to rot the roots, unless they were kept ridiculously wet. I believe geraniums rather like to get on the decidedly dry side, and then enjoy a good soaking.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THOUSAND LEGGED WORMS.

J. F. A. writes: "Please tell me through the REVIEW how to get rid of the thousand legged worms (millipedes) on my ferns? They also dig out and eat some of my asparagus seed."

I am not up on worms. Snakes are my specialty, and never heard this little creeping thing called "millipede," but have heard of plenty of centipedes, which of course signifies one-hundred feet. A species of the latter is often found in a bunch of bananas when just arrived from Jamaica, and that kind is dangerous to make a pet of, but whether the North American variety has one-hundred, or one-thousand, or three hundred and sixty-five understandings is of no consequence except to a naturalist. We all know what they are and I have never noticed that they do any harm. We have seen thousands of them on the surface of rose beds, and after putting bunches of tobacco stems on the surface to keep down greenfly we noticed that the "thousand legs" lay around dead. And we could attribute this awful slaughter of these miniature crustaceans to nothing but the tobacco. They reminded me of Byron's immortal lines:

"For the Angel of Death spread his wings in the blast,
And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed;
And the eyes of the sleepers waxed deadly and chill,
And their hearts but once heaved and forever grew still."

It was something stronger than tobacco that destroyed Sennacherib's warriors, but tobacco will rid you of the "thousand legs." Put plenty of fresh stems among the pots.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

ASTERS.

Subscriber sends me a few dozen aster seedlings, some with the character leaves showing and some with the seed leaf only developed. He says "Some, as you see, the leaves became lifeless, and some the roots clean rotted off." He has had the same trouble in sterilized soil as in unsterilized.

The little seedlings were pretty well dried up after their journey from the Hoosier state. Still I think the trouble is only what we call a case of "damping off." All thickly sown seedlings are subject to this, and particularly asters. It is such a common fault to sow too thickly. If the seeds are good they come up as thick as the proverbial "hair on a dog's back." And if the weather is dull and the atmosphere close they will be carried off by the thousand in a single night. If not the same fungus it is one very similar to that which plays such havoc in a warm cutting bed.

As soon as the seedlings are well above the surface they should be given a light, airy place, and just as soon as the characteer leaf begins to show they should be transplanted into flats. There is often great ignorance displayed about this little operation. If the seed leaves are ½ to ¾ inches above the soil an amateur will put them in the flats with the same amount of stem above the soil. This is radically wrong. Make a deep hole in the new soil and let the roots and delicate stem down until the seed leaf rests about on the surface. Then again, even men who call themselves gardeners I have seen squeeze the soil tightly at the surface and leave the roots hanging loose in the hole. The watering will take care of the surface, but get your dibble deep down and be sure the soil is compact around the roots. William Scott.

CYCLAMEN.

J. L. writes: "What is the best strain of cyclamen, and what is the name of same—red, white, and blue?"

I have never seen a cyclamen that could be called blue. There is a pure white, through shades of pink to deepest red, and a very common coloring is a combination of white and deep pink in the same flower. If you want to grow them under separate colors ask your seedsman to send you six varieties. Few growers keep track of the names of the varieties. Forty years ago we only knew this beautiful plant as Cyclamen persicum, then a very small flower. Then appeared C. p. giganteum with a stout, heavy flower and long stem. Then some of our seedsmen sent out what they called C. persicum grandiflorum, and my experience is that this is the strain to grow. The flower is long, beautifully shaped, and very free in flowering. But so much depends on the growing, as in all other flowers.

It is not my privilege to advertise any firm, but don't send to any firm because it is cheap. The best strain of any flower seed is well worth paying for. This is no season for sowing cyclamen: from September to New Year's is the time. William Scott.

BUILDING AND PIPING.

I am going to build a greenhouse 45 feet wide and 114 feet long, short roof construction, running east and west, with walls and gutters 6½ feet high. I will heat with hot water, using 4-inch flows and 3-inch returns, and would like your opinion of how much pipe to use and the best plan of piping for growing principally roses and carnations.

I have an idea that if the pipe were partially filled with wood in the center that it would be a great saving of fuel and also cause a more rapid flow on account of not having so large a volume of water to heat and thus maintaining a greater heat at a point nearer the return to the boiler. I am of the opinion that the wood once heated will retain it longer than the same area of water. I would like to hear your opinion on this point.

Would you advise butting glass? If so what pitch should I give the sash bars? I shall have glass on the south side and both ends.

Would you kindly give me a detail of how to construct the gutters as I intend to use wood in their construction. I take it that the house should stand level and the fall should be given to the gutters only. How much fall should the gutters have? W. B.

In reply to the inquiry of W. B., as we understand his inquiry, he proposes to put a wooden core in his heating pipes so supporting this core as to leave a water space between it and the inner circumference of the pipe. This would certainly reduce the volume of water to be heated materially and make the system more immediately responsive to the fire, but look out for "snags." The wooden core not being indestructible, and being subject to misplacement, twisting and other contingencies which would ultimately prevent perfect circulation, therefore, such an arrangement would be impracticable.

Regarding the method of glazing, it is much better to lap the roof glass, the upper light overlapping the lower about 5-16 of an inch. The glass on the vertical ends or sides is better butted, as in this way it is prevented from dropping on account of its weight.

Regarding the wooden gutters, they are most easily made as shown in drawing, and should have a fall in their length (114 feet) of not less than from 3 to 6 inches. Do not attempt to grade the gutters independent of the houses, have the entire roofs fall in the direction of the water travel within the gutters.

For the heating of a house 45 feet wide, 19 feet of radiation in the cross section of the house would be necessary. As to the arrangement of the heating pipes, I can say nothing, your correspondent giving no details as to the benching and other arrangements within the house. Henry W. Gibbons.

New York.

BUFFALO.

How fortunate that our little April winter is on us now. By the end of the week there is every probability that the right change will have come. If so, we will have no kick coming, for weather permitting, business is bound to be good.

Our Main street stores are already decked for an Easter display. Miss Rachel Rebstock keeps always a handsome window, and now it's full of enticing plants. Rachel does a great business, for she and three young lady assistants make it a very attractive store for the bachelor class.

J. H. Rebstock, a little lower down, is gay with fine azaleas, cytisus, acacias, and other plants.

Then comes W. J. Palmer's branch store, with its great expanse of plate glass. Mr. Snell, the manager, always has an attractive window—never crowded—a background of handsome ferns, with here and there a specimen plant, or vase of American Beauty. Something distinctive and choice is the motto of this elegant shop.

Then comes S. A. Anderson, whose window is always gay with the best that can be procured locally and the choice productions of Cromwell, Conn. Anything new or fancy "Savie" is bound to have.

W. J. Palmer & Son's main store at Eagle and Main has been so long before the public that it has become a landmark of the city. It is always a shining mark. No one can remember ever seeing this fine show window two days alike. The clever decorator, Arthur Beyer, has a change for every day in the year. He has ample material to work with, 'tis true, but yet there are enterprise and fine taste shown. One day it is Meteor roses used in many ways, another day daffodils, the next all carnations, and so on.

Retracing my steps (on a trolley), I called in at what we may call our most up-town stores. The first was Byrnes & Slattery, who have a decidedly metropolitan style about their spacious store—no crowding, nothing but the best and in the best of taste.

C. Keitsch & Son have a gay window of plants and flowers supplied from their own houses on the East Side.

These are a good many stores for a few blocks and this is only Main street. I think it would surprise some of us if we knew the quantity of cut flowers that are handled on what is known as the East Side. There is that good, industrious young woman, Miss Rose Reinhart, who has a fine business on William street and has an army of friends. And almost directly across the street is the celebrated Mrs. Schoenhut, who besides her store has two newly built greenhouses. I am inclined to think that this little lady, with the assistance of husband, handles rather more flowers than any one store in our city. And there are a score of others, all to take a nibble at the business and I hope make a competence.

The last few straggling Dutchmen have come and gone. Mr. Beerhorst was one of the last. He has dissolved partnership with the tall Mr. Van Leeuwen, and I think it's a good move, especially for Mr. Beerhorst. His former partner is the man who some years ago I went twenty-five miles out into the country to escape, but was followed. Then for a further escape I went, with a few worms, to Murder Creek fishing for shiners and bullheads, but by mistake in signaling I almost ran into him as he came up the village street. Under a bed I felt safe when I heard my son tell him what under other circumstances we would call a lie. You would think I did this because I owed him a bill—nothing, not a penny—but his crocodile tears would have brought out an order, and that's what I did not want him to have.

Mr. W. S. Murray called on us this week. He is from London, and who would think that a man by that name was selling Dutch bulbs? But so it was, and Murray & Son are the owners of a large bulb farm in Holland, at Akersfoot, near Haarlem. Now, it's so many years since I have affiliated or heard genteel English, with the accent attached that I was puzzled. We hear plenty of the "bloast my bloomin eyes" variety, and many other provincial dialects that we readily recognize as Essex, Devon, Somerset, Yorkshire, Staffordshire, White Chapel, or Northumberland as she is spoke at the end of a plow or in the factory or coal mines; but when a young man in soft, liquid accent says "Really! is that so? Well! Well! really is that so? Ah, to be sure!" it seems so strange to our unaccustomed ears that we listen as if anditor to some soft musical instrument. The sound originates in the roof of the mouth and on the tongue and is emitted through the lips and not the nose, as too many of our boys and girls do their chinning. If the bulbs are not first-class and he does business on an English basis he should soon work up a trade on this side of the Atlantic.

Mr. "Arry" Bunyard called again on his road home to make sure we had not forgotten anything. And Mr. McHutchison has just whiled away a few hours on this lovely Sunday afternoon, and under no circumstances would he introduce business. W. S.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The sudden cold wave which swept over this city the beginning of this week materially shortened the supply of cut flowers. It also improved the quality of the Easter plants, adding a much needed firmness.

The week opened with the inauguration of the new city administration, which was graced with a more lavish display of flowers than ever before. The councilmen received a wonderful array of horseshoes, baskets, bouquets, loose bunches and potted plants. Great numbers of the retailers sent wagons more or less well filled with these gifts of admiring friends, and many furniture wagons were chartered to take away the floral gifts after adjournment. Long-stemmed American Beauties were freely used. Liberties, Brides, Bridesmaids, carnations of all colors, mignonette, valley, and Easter lilies were very popular.

The market was a little less active until Wednesday, when the regular Easter demand began to be felt through the commission houses with their early shipping orders. This Easter seems likely to differ from its immediate predecessors in the shortage of bulbous flowers. The warm weather during March brought this class of stock on so rapidly that much of it is now blooming out of doors and we shall hardly have more than a fraction of the usual quantity. Violets, too, are nearly over. S. S. Pennock, who handled 260,000 last Easter, estimates that 100,000 will be about his share of the supply. Single violets are much scarcer than the doubles. E. Bernheimer is still receiving a very few fine singles, but many other dealers have ceased to receive them. The scarcity in bulbous flowers and violets is almost sure to have a quickening effect in the demand for other cut flowers.

Beauties are very fine and fairly plentiful. Robert Scott & Son are sending in choice stock in quantity. Liberties are also excellent. It is wonderful how this rose has increased in popularity. Nearly all the dealers have a fair supply of the medium and short stemmed grades, but the fancy stock is often hard to obtain. The tea roses are greatly improved by the cooler weather, the better grades selling well. Carnations have advanced in price and do not seem likely to be overplentiful. Fine valley is coming in in large quantities. Sweet peas are nicely colored but a little short in stem. The first southern lilac is coming in. Greens are in good demand, smilax rather scarce. Gardenias are still quite plentiful.

It has been very difficult to handle Easter plants successfully this season. The unusually warm weather brought many of the plants on too fast, giving a great deal of extra work and resulting in some poor stock. The stores are making a magnificent display of all the standard varieties of blooming plants and with good weather a great Easter is assured. Lilies are plentiful, the disease causing but small loss this season. Some of the commission men are selling plants from samples, and their efforts combined with those of the large growers have resulted in many big shipments out of town.

Notes.

Herbert Greensmith, of Henry A. Dreer, gave the Florists Club some ideas about new and little known herbaceous plants at the April meeting on Tuesday evening.

John Burton has a house of Ulrich Brunner in for Easter.

H. M. Pasehall, of Hollyoak, Del., is sending in some fine carnations to Leo Niessen.

Chas. D. Ball, of Holmesburg, has had an exceptionally good season with his palms.

Joseph Heacock has decided to increase the number of his varieties of roses from one to four. He now grows Beauties only, but will add Brides, Maids, and Liberties for next season. He is also very successful with palms and carnations.

Mr. W. J. Baker is receiving quantities of good carnations, which find a ready market at good prices.

All the florists who grow their own Easter stock are having a tremendous rush this week.

The latest novelty in the cut flower market is the reappearance of the good old-time rose General Jaequeminot. E. Bernheimer is receiving some fine blooms with nice stems.

Samuel J. Bunting is having a tremendous week distributing his Easter stock. PHIL.

BOSTON.

We have been experiencing the calm that precedes the Easter storm and hope we have seen it all. And if the storm is to be measured by the size of its calm, we will have something of a disturbance here along toward the end of the week.

Carnations and violets have been rather scarce, but the place of the latter has been fully taken by Mayflowers, which have never been better or more plentiful. Stores and street are overrun with them. Roses, cut lilies, and bulb material have been too plentiful and a heavy surplus went upon the street. There have also been more fine potted lilies floating around so far than I really expected to see.

It transpires that Park Street Church is not to be sold after all. The syndicate put up $25,000 to guarantee a further payment of $300,000 upon April 1st and failed to come to time at that date. Since they lose their big ante I do not quite see just who is April fooled by the transaction, unless it may be the bookseller in the basement, who is said to have hired quarters elsewhere.

The coming floral event of the week is the closing of the door of the Co-operative Market under said church. Much speculation is indulged in as to the working capacity of the new market at 161 Columbus avenue, which to many seems much out of center. It is best reached from the Back Bay railway station, or by surface electric to corner of Boylston and Berkeley streets, or by elevated cars to Pleasant street. Columbus avenue surface cars and other lines also pass the door, but can accommodate only a few who are connected with the business. The phone numbers are "Tremont 47" and "Tremont 48."

In last week's Review an injustice was done Geo. E. Buxton's new carnation, Marion Buxton. It scored 85 points instead of 82 as there given, and received a certificate to that effect.

J. S. Manter.

NEW YORK.

The great week of all the year came in with storm and wintry blasts and snow. The official temperature was 28 degrees and the average for the day was almost at the freezing point. Last week's predictions were for "most disagreeable weather between this and Easter" and here it is. I shall add weather prophecies to the weekly news hereafter. Now we may safely assure every one interested, of charming temperature, sunny skies and an ideal Easter. The cold will be welcome to the plantsmen for it will retard the too rapidly opening bloom while the cut flower growers will add strength and color and abundance to their supply so that there is now the assurance of "enough and to spare." Even violets, which have been retrograding for weeks in size and beauty, will make one last and successful effort to command attention, so that it may now be safely said, never were prospects so encouraging for a profitable Easter and for all concerned.

An abundance of gayety in weddings and dinners amongst the society people is already assured and bookings for banquets and festivities lasting for weeks are already made. One of the notable weddings to be is the Nielson-Vanderbilt affair at Newport, April 14, which has been secured by Wadley & Smythe of Fifth avenue. The immense cottage of the Nielsons will be decorated "regardless of cost" which is the kind of an order that comes none too often, and makes the sun shine when it lights on the fortunate possessor. Orchids, lilies, white roses and American Beauties will be largely used, with oceans of palms, bays and wild smilax. No expense will be spared and "no limit" is put upon the decorators, the orders being to "make it the finest floral effect ever seen."

To describe the window decorations for Easter week separately would be an interminable duty and savor of repetition, for every retail store in the metropolis worthy of the name, displays all the taste and ingenuity of which it is possessed and utilizes the same class of stock in producing beautiful effects. The windows will be "all a matter of taste," and Crimson Ramblers, azaleas, rhododendrons, acacias, bougainvilleas, genistas and lilies will in every case form the foundation of the picture. Some will utilize electric effects profusely; others will lean to novelties in construction, in bird's nests, autos and baskets. One of the large windows is brilliant in golden chariots and miniature velvet trunks. Great vases of the choicest ware are to be seen in another, and as the week progresses, something novel and never before seen is sure to materialize. Next week the photographs can better tell the story. Not a perfect plant of the growers anywhere has been left unsold.

Next Monday evening the New York Florists' Club holds its regular monthly meeting at the new rooms, Grand Opera House building, corner of Eighth avenue and Twenty-third street, and asks a full attendance at the "dedicatory services." There will be "something doing" and special efforts will be made hereafter to have these monthly gatherings worthy of the club and the splendid temporary home which it has secured.

This will be rose night and novelties in plants and flowers will also be on exhibition. After the Easter strain the evening's rest and recreation will be most welcome. The outing arrangements are progressing most favorably and these with other matters of interest should insure a large attendance.

The planting of roses and shrubs by the suburbanites has reached this season enormous proportions. As many as ten of the largest department stores of New York are handling these commodities this spring as well as seeds, bulbs and blooming plants and palms. Legitimate florists do not complain of this department as results are ultimately favorable to the gaining of common sense customers. But with the nurseryman whose profits came through the selling of roses and shrubs at a dollar each through agents, it is altogether different.

C. H. Joosten will move on May 1 to his new store at 201 West street, where he will have ample accommodations and light, and a roomy office.

The Chadborn Mfg. Co., of Newburg, finds present quarters entirely inadequate for its rapidly growing business and contemplates the erection of a large factory this spring.

Benj. Hammond reports complete recovery of health and a splendid year's business at Fishkill Landing where for eighteen years his present enterprise has been conducted. Mr. Hammond commenced his pharmaceutical work at Mt. Kisko in 1873. All the articles manufactured by him are his own invention and his famous "slug shot" endears him particularly to florists.

His establishment is very complete and is built on piles that were driven thirty feet into the soil and water on the banks of the Hudson. It is convenient to all railroads and the many commodities handled by Mr. Hammond keep him busy all the year. His ten weeks' illness since the convention was about the hardest "slug shot" that ever hit him, and his recovery was slow. But if there are any mountains around Milwaukee no doubt of his climbing them at the next convention.

Henry Hession, of Madison avenue, is building two iron frame houses 25x150 each. They are being erected and heated by John A. Scollay, of Brooklyn, and the Scollay Invincible hot water boiler will be used.

J. A. Millang (the Beauty King, in more ways than one) anticipates a great cut flower Easter with a fair rise in value but no exorbitant advances. He claims a supply assured sufficient for all the buyers that apply and amongst his shippers are some of the greatest growers of the country.

That a plant market may be erected on the old Clinton market site seems possible. The aldermen are to be interested and an appropriation asked for. If this is a case of "Ask and ye shall receive" it will be an "answer to prayer" that will convert many a sceptic.

Peter Crowe stopped over on his return from the rose convention, and has decided to retire from his rose growing responsibilities while the "honors are thick upon him" and devote himself to his wonderful new fern Croweanum which takes its place among the greatest "fern discoveries" of the century.

Many of the wholesalers are handling blooming plants and lilies in pots for Easter. In fact very few of the stores in the wholesale district are without them.

A meeting of the wholesale trade in cut flowers was held Friday, March 27, at 2:00 p. m., at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, for the purpose of discussing the project of buying land and erecting a building in which to center the wholesale trade. Among those in attendance were representatives of the New York Cut Flower Co., John Donaldson, secretary Cut Flower Exchange; Walter Sheridan, Traendly & Schenck, E. C. Horan, A. J. Guttman, Charles Millang, G. Saltford, Ford Bros., John J. Perkins and Frank Millang. A committee was appointed to confer and it is possible something practical may ultimately evolve from the "mustard seed" which has been planted.

It is estimated that the warm weather of the last week caused the premature opening of at least 100,000 Easter lilies. Fine flowers were closed out on Monday as low as $35 per 1,000. This, doubtless, caused the universal cut in Easter prices of lilies in pots to 12 cents and cut blooms to 10 cents, which prices are likely to hold to the end of the week. There is a possibility that cut lilies may touch 8 cents, so abundant is the supply. Conservative estimates as to the quantity handled place the total at over half a million in and around this city.

W. Ghormley has a branch at 52 W. Twenty-eighth street crowded with azaleas and lilies in addition to special shelving in his own store where 3,000 plants and 15,000 cut blooms will be installed.

At John Young's, the big store is crowded with an enormous quantity of lilies, fully 25,000 flowers being handled and an annex being necessary for the overflow.

Charley Millang, the "Lily King," proposes to maintain his title and has rented the big store corner of Sixth avenue and Twenty-ninth street for his surplus, as well as doubling the size of his greenhouse which will be made permanent, so well pleased is he with the experience in the plant line during the past six months. He says he will have over 4,000 plants in pots and 25,000 cut blooms in lilies alone.

Hammond will have a grand stock of orange trees and violet plants; out of over 4,000 of the latter, 3,000 already being sold.

Perkins' branch store is already stocked with flowering plants of every description.

Small had an unique window this week—a bed of scarlet geraniums with sod edging and a perfect counterpart in every respect of a natural bed of these plants.

Thorley's branch this year is at the corner of Twenty-eighth street and Broadway, in the basement.

Warrendorff will occupy his new store on Twenty-eighth street in time for the Easter trade. His window on Broadway is very neat and novel with purple bells and birds' nest baskets.

Mackintosh will use his new store at 1144 Broadway as a branch for Easter and will be "in it for good" by the first of May. His Easter expectations were enlarged by an order for a $500 orchid basket to go on the "Oceanic," to Mr. and Mrs. John F. Harris; the gift of a wealthy westerner.

It is rumored that one of the prominent Broadway retailers has disposed of his lease for a fat advance and will vacate his present quarters on the first of the coming month, and that his new abode will be near enough to the old one to make moving handy.

Siebrecht & Son have some fine orchid specimens in their windows, the tulip orchid being especially beautiful. Their facilities for the Easter trade are incomparable.

J. Austin Shaw.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply of roses, and in fact of everything except carnations has materially increased and the outlook for Easter is much more encouraging. Though the advance orders are heavy it is likely that all will be filled practically in full except on the carnation items. It promises to be the greatest Easter ever known.

The weather has been very favorable altogether the last week. There has been a good proportion of sunshine but no very hot days to bring the crops along too fast as well as softening the flowers. The quality ought to average good.

Lilies are looming up in larger quantities than was deemed likely a week ago and it looks now as though there will be an abundance of lilies, though possibly none too many of first grade. Short stemmed ones are much in evidence but there seems to be a good supply of long stemmed blooms also.

The supply of Dutch bulbous flowers is apparently as large as ever and it seems as though the quality averaged better than usual, owing probably to the absence of over warm weather. There is a host of violets, such as they are, but the quality averages poor and good ones are hard to get.

We hear of several large crops of Beauties coming just right for Easter and there will undoubtedly be less cutting down on orders than usual at a holiday.

Some carnations may have been held back on the plants but none now reaching the market show evidence of being held, and it would be foolish to hold any as Easter quotations are and have been practically in effect for nearly a week.

It looks now as though those needing additional stock would be fairly sure of securing it in this market, and it also seems certain that there is no likelihood of any variation from Easter prices already quoted.

Notes.

The Florists Club asks those intending to join the party going to St. Louis in response to the invitation of the St. Louis Florists' Club to report to Geo. W. Wienhoeber, sec'y, 415 Elm St. The party will start on Friday, April 17, and return Sunday evening.

"The Floralia" is the title of a new floral store at 47 Monroe St. L. P. Walz is manager.

The 2-year-old baby boy of Mr. W. Kyle, with Kennicott Bros. Co., is very ill. It is hoped by all that the little fellow will speedily recover.

Reference to the fire that destroyed the building occupied by the Leonard Seed Co. will be found in the seed trade news.

The bowlers start their series of thirty games next Tuesday evening, April 14th, at Anson's alleys on Madison street, at 8 o'clock. All entries must be made before the games start that evening. Twenty-one games out of the thirty must be played to qualify. The ten highest men in this series will then play a series to determine the membership of the team to represent Chicago at the Milwaukee convention next August.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

During the past week trade in cut flowers slackened up some; still some of the down-town florists had a large amount of funeral work, which made a big demand for white flowers at the wholesale houses. On Saturday the demand was heavy and nearly everything was cleaned up before noon. The consignments the past week were quite heavy and plenty of stock of all kinds was in the market, except white carnations.

Narcissus and lilac from the South are in, with fair demand. Good roses were sold below the quotations. Brides and Maids were quite plentiful. A big lot of these came from Bro. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Iowa. Gates, Meteors and Perles were somewhat scarce. A great many short Beauties are coming in, while good, long-stemmed ones are scarce.

A few warm days put a stop to violets and they are coming in small and pale. No doubt there will be a scarcity for Easter unless the southern stuff comes in to relieve the market.

In carnations we have plenty of colored ones, but white are very scarce, as they have been all of this season. Fancy Prosperity bring as high as $5 and $6 per 100, while other fancy sorts can be bought at $4.

In bulb stock the market has been fairly well supplied with the best. Von Sion are selling slowly. Valley is fine and has good demand. Harrisii and callas are coming in better and the indications are that we will have a good supply of them for the Easter trade.

The plant trade in the West End is reported as brisk. There is no shortage in anything in the line of pot plants. There will be about the usual supply of azaleas, spiraeas, rhododendrons, hybrid roses, hydrangeas and bulbous stock in pots and pans.

Of the hydrangeas shown, Theo. Miller has some extra fine pink, which have from eight to ten heads of fine color that need no support whatever.

Geo. Waldbart has about the best rhododendrons, and they make a great show.

Fred C. Weber, on Olive street, is well stocked with the finest Easter plants.

C. Young & Sons Co. are also making a great show of their well-grown Easter stock. John reports that in all their departments everybody is kept busy.

Visitor.

Arnold Ringier, the big and popular salesman of Barnard & Co., Chicago, fresh from Friseo, City of Mexico, and New Orleans, was a visitor.

Arnold reports that never before had he such a successful trip.

Club Meeting.

Don't forget the club meeting at Belleville next Thursday afternoon. Pres. Dunford requests that all meet at the St. Louis end of the bridge at 1 o'clock sharp and go in a body, which will make the trip more pleasant for all. A large attendance is expected. J. J. B.

Seed Trade News.

Chicago.—The seven-story building at 71 and 73 West Monroe street, occupied by the Leonard Seed Co., was destroyed by fire the night of April 4, and the loss on the stock of seeds, etc., amounts to $160,000, which is fortunately almost wholly covered by insurance. The vault withstood the fire and the books of the company are safe. The fire started in an adjoining building and worked its way into the Leonard Seed Co.'s building despite the efforts of the firemen. It was a bad fire. The company was to have moved to 79 and 81 Kinzie street on May 1 and temporary quarters have now been established at that location.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Prior Seed Co., successors to the Crocker Seed Co., has opened a seed store at 209 South Fifth street, and is after a share of city trade. We now have four "seedswomen." Nursery salesmen are very much in evidence here. The writer knows of no less than twenty-six who are soliciting orders for nursery stock in this county.

Memphis, Tenn.—R. G. Craig & Co. report the volume of seed business as satisfactory in some departments and disappointing in others. Owing to rains and overflows local business has been retarded, and the rains are now being followed by a drought, which is bringing further complaint and materially affecting the seed trade in this section.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The seed stock of the Vail Seed Co. is being offered to the wholesale trade by the Union Trust Co. as receiver.

Brockville, Ont.—Messrs. A. Abbot and G. Brown have bought the business of the A. L. Fisher Seed Co., which was insolvent.

New York.—Mr. Henry, of Henry & Lee, is away on his annual trip to Bermuda.

OBITUARY.

J. Frank Greene.

J. Frank Greene, of the firm of Greene & Underhill, Watertown, N. Y. died March 29, aged 46 years. He had been in poor health for several years, but his last illness was of short duration and his death was quite unexpected.

He was a son of the late W. W. Greene, who established the greenhouse business later conducted by the firm of Greene & Underhill, and was a lifelong resident of Watertown, where he was highly respected and had a host of friends.

He leaves a wife, two daughters and one son, Westel Greene.

The Lord & Burnham Co., the horticultural architects and builders, have nearly completed a galvanizing plant in connection with their works at Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., and will in future galvanize nearly all of the iron-framed tables and beds made by them. The galvanized frame work will not require painting and the additional cost over and above the cost of painting is not a large item. They will also galvanize the angle iron eave plate in commercial houses at a slight extra cost when desired.

We will consider it a favor if you will mail us a brief report of the Easter trade in your city, sending same as soon as possible after Easter.

On Monday prices did not vary from above with the exception of carnations and violets, which were a little stronger. As Wednesday approached the natural advance on account of Easter began to "cast its shadow" and doubtless before the week ends the prices of other years will prevail. On Monday lilies sold at as low as 3½ cents. Orchids were in demand and rising in value, with the supply all booked for Easter. Violets are improving in quality. The cold snap was a godsend and instilled courage and hope that presages a splendid Easter.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The weather during the past week has been, on an average, quite favorable to Easter stock, but the several warm days had a very quieting effect upon business. On the whole though, there is very little to complain of, as there was at all times trade enough to use up the stock that was available.

Roses are increasing in supply, and the price is not held quite so high. A rose must be of very good quality, to bring the top price now. Brides sell best and though there is a good stock of them coming in, there is not enough to go around. There are enough Maids to fill all orders and a few left over for the fakirs; but were it not for the very inferior quality of some of them, they would all be sold and at good figures. Meteors and Liberties are still shy. Golden Gates hold their own well and some first-class blooms of this rose are to be had. American Beauties meet with a steady demand, and the quality of the stock is improving somewhat.

Bulbous stock is still selling very well. Harrisii lilies are quickly picked up. Callas also are becoming good property.

Violets are scarce and sell quickly. Daisies and Baby primroses also move quickly. Sweet peas do not sell as well as they should.

Eastern ferns continue to be of very good quality. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are just a trifle scarce; also smilax. Some very good adiantums are to be had, which sell readily.

Notes.

During the past week the writer visited New Castle and Richmond, Ind. At New Castle, Heller Bros. appear to be right in it with Brides and Maids. Beauties also will not be so far behind and Golden Gates and Ivory are looking first-class. Benthey & Co. have a nice, clean place and their stock is very healthy looking. Their Brides and Maids are also in for a good crop. Beauties are not quite so strong for Easter. L. A. Jenning's houses appear to be in full crop and he will surely have a nice cut of both Maids and Brides for Easter.

At Richmond, E. T. Grave has a nice cut of carnations in sight. Pres. McKinley is looking first-class. Liberties are throwing good long canes and a large crop is in sight. Brides and Maids are doing very nicely and some fine grade stock is being cut.

Chas. Knopf is rapidly pushing the work on the greenhouses he is building. They were setting posts and things were moving along very smoothly. Three houses 250 feet long and one about 150 feet will constitute the range.

The E. G. Hill Co. was very busy sending out cuttings and small plants. Everything was looking in good shape and Mr. Hill reported that spring trade was very good.

Fulle Bros. and the Gift Floral Co. were rapidly getting things into shape for Easter trade. Both places were looking well.

The next regular meeting of the Florists Society will be held April 18, instead of at the usual time owing to the rush of business on the 11th.

Visitors were: L. A. Jennings, New Castle, Ind., and Miss White, Lexington, Ky.

WASHINGTON.

With lots of sunshine last week flowers have been very plentiful, and from present indications there will be enough to go around for Easter. Everything looks favorable for a big Easter business. Easter lilies will be very plentiful. The American Rose Company and A. Gude & Bro. will have at least ten thousand each. They are now booking orders at 12½ cents per flower, cut; 15 cents in the pot.

Up until three days ago it looked as if we were about to be knocked out. Lilacs and spring blossoms of all kinds would have been in full bloom, but the thermometer night before last registered six degrees of frost, which, of course, gave all of the outdoor stuff a black eye.

With the exception of jonquils, which are now in their full glory around this section, and retail at around 5 to 10 cents per dozen, which makes us follow in prices with our Dutch stuff, Easter prices will be: Roses, 12½ to 20 cents; carnations, 4 to 6 cents; fancies, 8 cents; lily of the valley, 4; tulips, 3 to 4; rhododendrons and azaleas, from $1 to $2; single pot hyacinths, 10 cents; six-inch pan hyacinths, 25 cents; spiraeas, 25 to 50 cents.

There seems to be a good many fine Beauties on the market, which will readily sell from $6 to $9 per dozen. In smilax and asparagus there seems to be a scarcity.

The attendance of the Bowling Club was as large as usual.

BALTIMORE.

Our city and environs were in the very center of the cold snap which caught the country on Saturday. At 12 midnight, Friday, the mercury stood at 72 degrees; at the same time Saturday it was down to 25 degrees. Great destruction has been done, it is thought, to "truck" and fruit crops, and a great deal of stock in frames has been more or less damaged. One effect has been seen at once; it has put up the price of bulbous stock. Much of this was so far advanced that the supply seemed likely, if not inadequate, to be at least much less in quantity than in former years. Doubtless, however, there will be enough to go around.

For the week ending to-day (April 6) trade has been fairly active, and the offerings of cut flowers have not been quite up to the requirements. This means, of course, stuff of good grade, for the mediocre, like the poor, we have always with us.

All signs point to an Easter trade of more than average volume, and plants and cut flowers are being industriously sought for by the retailers. There seems sufficient of all sorts in sight, save perhaps lilies, which are understood to be somewhat deficient.

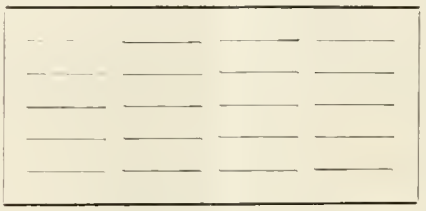
PACKING CUTTINGS.

Mr. A. Mitting, manager of the California Carnation Co., Loomis, Cal., writes that of the shipments of rooted cuttings that come to him those packed across the box as per accompanying diagram always arrive in best condition.

He says that too many shippers pack the bundles lengthwise of the box, as in diagram below, and when the box is set on end, as is bound to happen sometime during transit, some plants are sure to be broken.



To have the moss in right condition for use he runs it through an old wringer.

UNIONIZED.

'Tis now the honest florist's turn
A few things to learn;
Those honest, quiet days he prized
Have gone a-kiting to the skies—
The florist's help's been unionized.

Now when at half past seven
He gets a pail and says:
"Come on, Bill, we'll catch some snails," William will haughtily stand still
And say: "I do not think I will;
It is not in the union bill."

And when the clock is striking four
And someone hollers at the door,
"Arise, dear William," he will say;
"Not at this beastly time of day;
Go read the union schedule, pray."

When, as the sun is getting low,
The boss says "Clean another row,"
There'll be nothing to arbitrate;
He'll say "I guess that row can wait,"
And for the house he'll pull his freight.

When to the table they repair,
If he grows tired of the bill of fare,
He'll say "This bill is rather shy;
While I'm not used to living high,
The union schedule calls for pie."

That toil may softened be and sweet
The bench must have a cushioned seat,
And if the steam pipes break or bend,
For union plumbers they must send;
His trade's to grow and not to mend.

When work is piling seven feet high
And the boss is hustling enough to die,
He will approach, and with a most annoying cough,
Say softly "This is my day off."

Oh, honest grower of the flower,
You're up against the real thing now'er;
Proud master of a broad estate,
Bow humbly to the will of fate
And to the walking delegate.

With apologies to the Chicago Daily News.

G. W. FRENCH.

PITTSBURG.

The trade in plants and cut flowers has been good with both wholesale and retail dealers. The weather has also been quite favorable up until last Saturday, April 4th. Friday and the previous day Pittsburg was among the warmest cities in the United States. Saturday it was included among the coldest. Friday noon the mercury was 78 degrees. Saturday morning it was 29. Forty-nine degrees of a drop in one night. On Sunday morning April 5th it was 18 above zero. Great climate, isn't it?

The plantsmen are all very well pleased with the advance sales on both flowering and decorative work. They have been a great feature for this holiday and the stock offered has been unusually good.

The only shortage in cut flowers for Easter will be in carnations; our local growers are all off crop and the cut will be very small in this section. The rose crop, both teas and Beauties, will be just right and the cut very heavy. Longiflorum and Harrisii lilies are abundant and selling slowly; instead of the usual advance in prices on lilies for Easter the prices have declined; lilies have never before been sold so cheap.

Everything first class in cut flowers is moving quite freely. The only material advance in prices for Easter in this market is on carnations; other stock is quoted at former prices.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. furnished Randolph & McClements with 3,500 special Maids and 300 fancy Beauties last Sunday.

A. W. Smith's latest street car advertisement is "Fancy Easter Plants without Fancy Easter Prices."

Mrs. E. A. Williams is showing a fine lot of blooming plants; the stock is well grown.

Breitenstein & Flemm are displaying some beautiful Easter novelties in plant baskets, designed by Walter Breitenstein.

Hoo-Hoo.

Quincy, Ill.—All are looking for a good spring trade, and as coal has been higher the prices on bedding stock will necessarily be higher. Heckenkamp has about 20,000 potted plants for bedding and an extra fine lot of pansies and verbenas. Kroner, our youngest florist, is doing a nice business on the Maag place. The Gentemann Bros. have rebuilt some old houses and have all strictly up to date. They are doing their share of the business. Gross is still at the old stand, the most favorable location in the city. Heckenkamp's carnations are as fine as ever, coming into full crop for Easter. His place in the country, planted to roses, is also coming on nicely. The demand for cut flowers and funeral work has far exceeded the supply all winter and spring.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The Lightfoot Nursery Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000. Mr. H. Lightfoot will be at the head of the company, which will absorb the nursery business of H. Lightfoot here and at Cleveland, Tenn.

Fitzgerald, Ga.—Joel Thomas reports business as good. He will build one new house and lengthen his old one.

Akron, O.—E. J. Bolanz has succeeded to the business of Bolanz Bros.

GRAFTED ROSES.

This stock is all grafted on Manetti after being carefully selected. We recommend these plants as being very choice stock, all carefully handled, ready to ship April 10th to 15th.

New Pedigreed ....ROSES.

Send for description and colored plate of our SIX new CLIMBING ROSES. These originated in our own collection by careful cross-fertilization and are unquestionably superior to anything of their class.

Edwin Lonsdale—Pale lemon-white.
Wm. K. Harris—Pale flesh color.
Wm. F. Dreer—Creamy white, pink edging.
Prof. C. S Sargant—Rich yellow and buff.
Robert Craig—Yellow, shaded with apricot.
John Burton—Delicate peach color.

All fragrant, very double, undeniably hardy and strong growers.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have had more than our share of rain the last week, excepting for the last two days, when the beautiful California sunshine beamed again. Everything points to a big cutting for Easter. Carnations and roses in most of the places I have visited are in good shape and I do not think there will be any scarcity. Roses are coming in much more freely than for the past few weeks and the quality has improved greatly. This is especially noticeable in Brides, Maids and Testout. Beauties are not very plentiful and hardly up to the standard. The prices have not changed and are not liable to as far as present indications go. A few Liberty are to be seen and some Kaiserins, but they are not extra good. Carnations are daily becoming more plentiful and I am sure there will be an abundance at Easter.

Lilium Harrisii are in fair supply and wholesale at $3 to $5 per dozen. The quality is good. Plants in pots wholesale at $4 to $6 per dozen, but I am inclined to think the price will stiffen somewhat in the next few days.

Princess Violets are about finished and a few Marie Louise and Neapolitan are seen in the stores, but for some reason or other Californians never have taken very kindly to double violets and the florists can do business without them. Daffodils are out of season and about the only thing left in the narcissus line is N. poeticus which is a good seller and a very decorative flower as well. Valley is fairly plentiful and wholesales at $3 per hundred. Spiraea in 6-inch pots helps to liven the florists' windows and is a splendid plant for decorating. Many of the florists have considerable church work for Easter and the prospects are good for plenty of trade all around.

Business for the past week has been very quiet in all lines and everyone will be glad when Lent is over.

Notes.

The writer paid a visit to the nurseries of H. Plath at Ocean View a few days ago. Mr. Plath has rechristened his greenhouses "The Ferneries," formerly Union Nurseries. It is a very appropriate name as about a dozen large houses are filled to overflowing with ferns, asparagus, palms and dracænas, of which Mr. Plath has always made a specialty. A portion of one house is devoted to Nephrolepis Piersoni and a splendid stock of Adiantum Williamsii is especially noticeable. Mr. Plath has had rare success and his place is well worth a visit. G.

EVERGREEN SEEDLINGS.

The board of general appraisers at New York has decided that a seedling that has been transplanted is still a seedling and not a tree.

The merchandise consisted of a lot of evergreen seedlings and was assessed for duty at the rate of $1 per 1,000 and 15 per cent. ad valorem under paragraph 252 of the act of July 24, 1897. The importer claimed they were dutiable at 25 per cent. ad valorem as "evergreen trees or plants."

In quite a lengthy opinion, in which considerable expert testimony is quoted, the importer's protest was overruled and the higher rate made applicable.

UTICA, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Utica Florists' Club was held at their rooms Thursday evening with a good attendance. Our next meeting will be our annual election of officers after which we are to enjoy a great treat by our professor, Geo. C. Hodges, subject "Illustrated Plant Talk" with lantern slides which ought to bring out every member of the club.

Easter flowers will be plenty with a few exceptions. Carnations will be very short. We are looking for a good trade.

I should say that about every bulb agent had struck Utica for the last few days. One florist had the pleasure of being interviewed by nine of them in one day and he says that he now knows the history of bulbs from A to Z.

WHEREVER SHOWN.

This exquisite new Dahlia has taken its place at the head of all Summer and Autumn flowers for all purposes. A strong, vigorous grower, with graceful, fern-like foliage; an early and extremely profuse bloomer on long stems, with buds and foliage. Flowers very large, 5 to 6½ inches in diameter, of finest form and finish. Color, deep rosy pink, with white at tips and base of petals, as shown in first photograph. A beautiful, striking flower. As the season advances the flowers open lighter, as shown in second photograph taken in October, when it is exquisitely lovely.

ORANGE, N. J.

The monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held at its rooms in Orange on April 1. The display of flowers was larger than in either March or February and covered a wide range. Those receiving special favor of the judges were, Alameda, of John Hayes and roses of Peter Duff. Among the plants in pots were well-grown genista of Malcolm Macrorie and crotons of Detrick Kindsgrab.

Disappointment was met in the non-appearance of A. D. Rose, who was down for a paper upon Easter flowering plants. The time was mainly taken up in discussion. The matter of a prize from this society to the American Chrysanthemum Society was debated and the number 24 and 12 varieties was regarded so large as to exclude all but our largest growers. President Herrington's suggestion that this society line up with other societies in this matter was however followed.

Four silver cups were displayed, the prizes to be given for the monthly shows of flowers, fruits and vegetables, and an additional one announced, the gift of Mr. Schoenthal, of Orange.

LIFTING WATER.

Is there a way to lift water from a well over 30 to 50 feet deep to water level by some mechanical power? If this cannot be done, which is the best cheap pumping outfit of small capacity?

Southern Subscriber.

In reply to Southern Subscriber, the water may be raised from a well 50 feet deep by a deep well pump operated by various mechanical means, such as wind mill, gasoline or steam engine or hand power. If he will write more fully saying what distance and to what height he desires to carry the water and if the pump is to be continuous or intermittent, we will be pleased to assist him further.

Henry W. Gibbons.

New York.

Messrs. R. Vincent, Jr. & Son, White Marsh, Md., have issued their spring catalogue of vegetable, greenhouse and bedding plants. An excellent line of stock is listed. Though they are the largest growers of vegetable plants in the country, they also carry a very complete line of greenhouse and bedding plants.

"Thripscide"

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

1 lb. Tin Can	$ .25
5 lb. Tin Can	1.00
25 lb. Sealed Box	4 50
100 lb. Sealed Box	16.50

MR. JOHN A. SCOLLAY. I want to say a good word for your "Invincible" Boiler. It is the easiest to run of any that I have ever handled, and is a good coal saver. We have been unable to get hard coal this winter and I was uneasy about my ability to use soft coal, but must say that the boiler works quite as satisfactorily with soft coal as it did with hard. I like your apparatus and your business methods so well that, if in the future I should increase my area of glass, you will certainly hear from me.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

After Easter.

The passing of Easter will bring about a revolution and evolution in our houses where plants as well as cut flowers are grown. It gives us the much needed room for many things that have been waiting for pots and space.

First there are the "left overs" to be attended to and you are sure to have a few of these, for many of our plants are cut for the flowers. Crimson Rambler roses that were not well enough flowered to sell can always be sold to customers who want them to plant out by their verandas. But don't put out until the month of May, as a slight frost would injure their foliage, and for that your customer would blame you, not the frost. Keep them cool until planting out time.

Cut back the lilacs a few inches shorter than where the flowers started from and plant them out in your grounds. You may sell them in a year or two as flowering shrubs; or when well set with buds they could be lifted and put on a bench and forced for cut flowers.

The lily bulbs we don't bother with. The dump pile is the most desirable place for them. Our climate won't do for them, although a little farther south they may do well and give you another year a fine lot of flowers in July. I remember a few years ago wagon loads of longiflorum blossoms used to come from our neighboring city of Rochester in the month of July, but they have a better soil, although a trifle farther north.

We so murder all our tulips, hyacinths and narcissus when cutting them that to preserve the bulbs with any idea of planting them out next fall is waste of time. To be successful the second year even with our beds of tulips they should be either left in the ground or not lifted until the foliage begins to dry up. You can buy these bulbs for outside planting at so little cost that there is no money in saving your old forced bulbs, so we dump them in an exposed place and very soon there is a swarm of little girls and old women poking and scratching away. They soon rid your pile of the useless bulbs and leave the soil in such shape that you sell it next week for $3 per yard for top dressing lawns.

Unsold azaleas deserve the best of attention. If they have been abused in the store and dried out, cut them severely back, even if you leave no leaves to be seen, and put them into a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and spray them daily. They will soon break out with any amount of young growths and make better plants than you can import. They want nothing done to soil or to root at present. If you have any that have not been abused, but have simply made a fine growth with but few flowers, leave these just as they are, except perhaps to pinch back an extra strong growth, and put them in the same house. They will lose that compact, rounded, old fashioned bouquet shape, and none the worse for that. Our friends, the Belgians, send us rather too many of these dense, formal shaped azaleas, and many a customer would like a little looser, more natural shaped plant.

Rhododendrons, like the azaleas, are ready to make their growth at flowering time or immediately after. Don't think of keeping them with a view to force again. You can do ten times better by importing well budded plants in the fall. If you live in the Allegheny Mountains, New England, or North Carolina, you can plant them out, but alas, we may as well plant manuscript sermons for all the growth they will make with us, so we kindly (?) present them to some customer whom we have a grudge against.

Calla lilies have been asked for to some extent this spring. If you have them on a bench there is two months yet to cut from them. If in pots don't lay them under a wet, cold bench or any bench; give them the daylight. You can crowd them up without doing them harm, but keep them growing.

Acacia (mimosa) parodoxa should be cut back to within 4 or 5 inches of last season's growth and put into the same house as the azaleas. This is a vigorous rooting plant and the pots soon get filled. Soon after they start with young growth they should be shifted. The soil should be a good yellow loam and they should be firmly potted. Both these and the azaleas go out of doors later on, but "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," and more of this later.

There is always a lot of poor spiræas lying around with the flowers and foliage cut off. If you have a moist, peaty place on your farm you might plant them out. Their flowers may be worth a trifle in other Junes to come. With us they give no flowers worth bothering with, and as for forcing again, don't think of it.

If you had any cyclamen left over, big or little, don't think of saving them for another season. Some very large plants are occasionally seen that are two years old, but there is little or no demand for them. The seed you saved in October will, if well managed, make plants that will sell for $2 or $3, and that's what the people want.

Small genistas will grow into larger ones, and a few large plants of this showy, yellow flower are desirable. After the flowers have dropped trim back the plant and start in growing again. This plant grows more in the spring and fall and even in winter than it does in the heat of summer, and a very good time to give them a larger pot is when you bring them in in the fall. Never plant them out in the summer time; only plunge them out of doors, and many good plants are under glass all the time.

Too many large hydrangeas on your place become white elephants, and your trade must be good if you can dispose of many. Most all the Easter hydrangeas are but one year old from the cutting. If there are any left on your hands, or a store keeper asks you to take them out of his way, you can cut them down to within 6 inches of the pot. Keep cool until end of May; then give them a shift and plunge them out of doors for the summer, and they should make large plants another spring. But you are liable to get surrounded with more of these cumbersome plants than are profitable.

Geraniums.

I think the above disposes of most of our familiar Easter plants, and having disposed of them, we turn to a more important chapter, viz.: our plants for summer gardening. The most important of all these is the zonal geranium. When we could find space we have been shifting these from 3 to 4-inch pots, simply because two men and a helper can't shift 25,000 in two or three days, but if you can get them all shifted by the 25th of this month, all will be well. Better far for the appearance of plant and for its future welfare to have it growing vigorously by end of May than pot bound and losing its foliage. Pot firmly with heavy loam and not more than a fifth of well rotted manure. In the absence of manure use one pint of bone flour to a bushel of loam. I have often spoken of the great benefit of plunging plants like geraniums and fuchsias in the month of May under unshaded glass. It is a great benefit, but the geraniums don't need it when first shifted. We consider that from the time they go into 4-inch pots they want at least three "stand-overs," because they grow so fast and get crowded, so do the plunging on the first occasion you have to move them to give more space.

Shading.

This has been a strange spring, early and mild beyond my recollection, yet many cloudy days, and I don't think of any day in March or this month when we have had a burning sun. Those days follow frosty mornings, so we have not thought much about shade. Avoid the permanent shade all you can. If you shade such plants as geraniums, coleus, or cannas, then you must keep a good fire heat, and a soft growth follows. You fire a lot and a stunt follows. Keep the glass clear as long as you possibly can, and by careful attention to watering you will suffer little by burns and scalds and have far better plants.

Cannas.

The next important plant is the canna, which has been waiting in the flats or benches for attention. While waiting they have made lots of roots and a growth of six inches. Some we can put in 4-inch pots—the majority—and a few will need a 4½ or 5-inch. Give them plenty of rotted manure in the soil, a light airy house where it can be 55 degrees at night, and you will soon have fine plants.

The Caladium esculentum have been started in flats of sand and have made a mass of roots. They also want a light bench and a 5-inch pot.

Crimson Ramblers.

I want to hark back a moment to Crimson Rambler roses. There is no denying that this is one of our most popular Easter plants and desirable for us all to grow. There is more than one way of handling it. I am aware that Mr. Robert Craig, Mr. W. K. Harris, and many others grow them finely by planting out either young or dormant plants in the spring and lifting them from the field about middle of November, and then by careful management for the next two months bring them along with increased heat in fine bloom for Easter. If I had my own nursery I feel sure I could do this, and I trust without seeming to be egotistical I intend to spring on you in the fall a method of handling them for the first month or two after lifting them from the ground (the most critical time of all), a method that will make success doubly sure. Yet there are many who have no space for planting out, or have not been successful when buying field grown plants in the fall. Then, here is the other plan, and I can only say in its favor that we tried it with great success (whether it emanated from our own think box or not, I don't know).

Buy last year's field grown dormant plants now. Put them into 5, 6 or 7-inch pots as they may deserve. Cut back to within 3 or 4 inches of last year's growth and place them in cold frame or the coldest house you have. You will get a good many breaks, but you want to leave only four or five to grow, and they will grow; as the houses get warm you will get canes 5 or 6 feet long. Keep them in a light house until August, when they should be plunged outside. I will have more to say about them later, but will say now that the principal thing is to start them slow when first potted and avoid mildew in the hot days of June and July, the cause of which is neglecting them for want of water. When these canes are tied around a few stakes (but that you don't do until next New Year's), you can have flowers to the rim of the pot.

Some growers manage H. P. roses the same way, and they could be forced much earlier than Easter, but for Easter flowers a good, strong dormant H. P. rose, such as Ulrich Brunner, planted out in the field at once and cut down so that you can hardly see it above the ground, will make four or five strong growths. And the plant can be lifted and potted after the first frost has ripened the wood; and if kept in a cold frame until middle of May and not allowed to dry out, and hard frozen, it will force with quite as good results as the pot grown. It's quite a different case from the Ramblers. You don't cut them down at all. Their long, strong growths have to be supported for a while with no working roots, while the H. P.s are again cut well back before starting in to force. Plant out a few hundred of the best forcing hybrid perpetuals in some strong loam now and they will be much more profitable than cinerarias and occupy valuable bench room half the time.

William Scott.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Collecting and preparing soil for planting time should now demand attention. The work of composting, to be effective, requires to be done just as soon as the season will permit, as it requires from 5 to 6 weeks to get the soil into the right condition.

The top spit of about 6 inches deep, taken from old, well sodded pasture land, of a yellowish, loamy nature, is about the ideal soil for roses under glass. This should be built in a neat pile on ground a little elevated, using alternately a layer of sod and a layer of well decomposed cow manure, in the proportion of four of sod to one of manure. There are few soils so rich of themselves that they cannot bear this proportion, and many soils can stand a larger per cent of manure without becoming too rich. After being in the pile for three weeks the sod and manure should be chopped in pieces of about 2 to 3 inches in diameter.

To thoroughly incorporate the sod and manure, and to get it into a fine mellow condition it should be turned over at intervals of ten days, always selecting a bright, sunny day for this operation, and when the compost is in a half dry condition. Turning the compost over occasionally until it is required will prevent the crop of weeds which so quickly appear at this season, and which, if allowed to become rank, use up the elements which should be kept in store for the young rose stock.

Carelessness or slovenliness in attending to the proper preparation of the compost no doubt helps in many cases to bring after troubles to the grower both by way of sour, lifeless soil and in introducing colonies of undesirable insect pests into the houses, where, under the more congenial temperature they multiply with amazing rapidity.

To derive the full benefit from bone meal it should be added to the compost at planting time. The easiest way to apply it is to spread it on the surface of the soil after it is placed on the bench, using from 5 to 7 lbs. to every 100 square feet of surface.

Many of these laws may seem small and trivial, but in rose growing there is nothing so minute but that a beneficial lesson can be learned from it.

Ribes.

ROSE SOIL—BENCHING.

Please tell me the best compost for roses—the kind of soil, proportion of manure and bone meal.

I expect to have the beds ready by July 1. Will it be safe to plant my roses in the beds from 3-inch pots at that date and leave them without the glass for about two months?

Constant Reader.

Replies to the questions anent soil and compost will be found embodied in the article under the heading of roses in this issue.

Plants from 3-inch pots are what are mostly used for May and June planting (Beauties excepted). For later planting a shift into 4-inch pots will be necessary to prevent them from becoming pot-bound.

Benching previous to glazing is running too great a risk, as we have absolutely no control over the watery element, which (if the season at all takes after the last) would drown them in a week beyond hope of resuscitation. Better carry them in pots under glass until the house is ready and hustle along with getting it ready. Ribes.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Under Glass all Summer.

Several years ago when the question of cultivating carnations the year around under glass was brought up, it was generally thought to be neither possible nor practical. It has been proven to be possible but is it practical?

My opinion was at the time the matter was brought up, that at no distant day we would see carnations grown continuously under glass as are roses. My views have been somewhat changed after six years of experimental work along these lines, so that now as the case stands a compromise between field and indoor culture seems the best plan to follow if you intend to change from field to house culture. Before going further I will say that in my opinion the method of growing carnations continuously under glass is not practical and in using the term "indoor," I refer to the compromise as above.

We know that some varieties do not take kindly to the indoor method, then again none of us can say that we have as yet found the true way of field or indoor culture, but each year brings an improvement in some direction, so then I would certainly advise a trial of the indoor method, choosing varieties of vigorous growth and strong constitution.

Strong plants in 4-inch pots given from four to six weeks in open frames provided with ample drainage is one of the necessary conditions to produce plants equal to well grown field plants. Some varieties will need covering with sash during a long rainy period, of course only enough to shed the rain without interfering with abundant ventilation. It seems absolutely necessary for their salvation to allow them nothing but the blue sky over them and the pure air around them for a period long enough to regain that perfect health which has been somewhat impaired by continual forcing.

You may say your young stock has not been forced or any demands made upon it, having been kept very cool, a statement I hope you can all make, but confined as the plants must generally be in rather narrow quarters, also more or less under the influence of artificial heat and conditions, it is obvious that any relatives of the dianthus family (naturally hardy) will resent to a certain degree continuous confinement.

After giving much thought to this subject I have about come to the conclusion that if the point is ever reached when carnations can be grown continuously under glass we shall find their nature or constitution so changed that the divine flower will be susceptible to many more diseases than it now is and you all know the list of those with which it is already beset is long enough. It would seem this is a matter for the hybridizers to consider; I may be all wrong but these are my thoughts, and trust to give you more next week on experiences with several varieties. Geo. S. Osborn.

SOLID BEDS FOR CARNATIONS.

In the March 26th issue of your paper we notice an item by Mr. Baur on solid beds in greenhouses. We are expecting to put up ten additional greenhouses this season, and part of the ground is in such shape that we will be obliged to either leave it in solid beds or haul the soil away. Houses will be 18 feet wide to match balance of range. We would like to know how you would advise arranging the heating pipes for solid bench houses. We heat with steam using two fifty horse boilers. C. N. P.

If I could see your houses, etc., I could tell you in a few minutes just how I would arrange your heating system, but I will possibly be able to tell you what you want to know. In all our old houses we have the old flow and return system and it works perfectly. Our flow pipe is up overhead and at the far end it branches out to as many return pipes are you wish to put in. The return pipes run part of them along the side wall and part of them along the side of the paths, just the same as you run them under your benches.

In our new house we have the new single pipe system. The steam goes and the water returns in the same pipe and there are no flows and returns, but only flow pipes. The main raises as it travels away from the boilers and runs across the end of the house, and from this main we run two inch pipes to the other end of the house, raising about one-fourth inch to the foot as we go, and at the far end we have only a thumb cock to let the air out as the pipe fills with steam. A valve next to the main in each pipe serves to shut the pipe off or turn it on at will. The water returns in the bottom of the pipe to the main and back to the boilers. This is as it is supposed to be arranged, but our system differs just a little. We raised our main until we reached the near corner of the house and from there we began to drop as we ran across the end of the house. In the far corner we tapped the main and ran a small return pipe back to the boiler. The level of the ground made this desirable, but otherwise there would be no difference as far as the working is concerned. These pipes can be laid in the walks or they can be hung overhead just as you choose, but always remember that there must be no places for the water to stop. It does not take much fall in the pipes, but there must be no dips or pockets anywhere.

We like this system very much indeed. There is far less danger of breakage of joints from expansion in the pipes because one end of every pipe is free to move forward or backward as much as it chooses. We get live steam through all our pipes, as it has to travel only one length of the house, while with the old system it has to travel twice as far and if your houses are very long it is nearly condensed when it gets back to the near end again. If I have not made myself clear on the points Mr. P. wishes explained I shall be glad to answer any further inquiries he may wish to make. A. F. J. Baur.

SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.

Please tell me the best compost for carnations—that is, the kind of soil, proportion of manure and bone meal. I expect to have the beds ready by July 1st. Will that be late to plant the carnations from flats, or had they better be planted in the field first?

Constant Reader.

Carnations like a fairly heavy friable soil and above all it should be well rotted. If you have not prepared it yet you should get at it just as soon as you can. We like to cut the sods off of a good rich piece of ground about four inches deep, but you are too late to do that now. The sods would not rot well enough by July 1st for carnations. If you can get your soil from a field that was under cultivation last year it will be better than the sods in so far as it will be in a better mechanical condition. It will take a little more manure than the sod soil would to produce the same fertility, but otherwise it will give good results. Use four parts of soil and one part of cow manure and add a good bushel of sheep manure to a yard of soil to make up for the sods.

You should not attempt to hold your young plants in flats until July 1st, as they would become hard and stunted, and in short they would be ruined. Either pot them into 4-inch pots now or plant them in the field as soon as you can. I would prefer the latter with most varieties, except Mrs. Lawson, which we grow in pots until about June, when we plant it inside in the beds.

A. F. J. Baur.

A SHADED HOUSE AND SOME ROSE ROOTS.

Subscriber L asks "Can we grow asparagus, smilax, palms, and ferns in house that gets no direct sun during the three or four winter months? The house in question is even span, built on the north side of a three-quarter span house," also "What causes the roots of rose plants to die and look moldy?"

If the north side of your house were, say, 9 feet high, and a lean-to to run from that down to 4 feet, I should call it a very dark house, but yours, being an equal span, should not be dark, even if it does not get the direct rays of the sun. I would say that you could grow perfectly in that house all the plants mentioned, other considerations being right. Perhaps the asparagus would be most benefited by the fullest light.

Just a hint or two on the culture of these plants. I am supposing the ferns you would want to grow are Adiantum cuneatum, or some of its forms, for cutting. If nephrolepis to sell in pots, give them the fullest light. It will thrive under glass in the summer time in the unshaded rays of the sun and be all the better for it. If it is adiantum for cutting you are going to grow, never put it in a shallow bench of soil over hot water or steam pipes. It must have a cool bottom. Plant your asparagus and smilax on the surface of the ground. Give the asparagus 9 inches or a foot of rich, heavy loam, as it will remain there perhaps three years. Give the smilax 6 inches of soil. That's enough, as it does not pay to keep it in longer than one year.

There may be several causes that may account for the rose roots dying. Sometimes the roots are crowded in the 3 or 4-inch pots when they are planted in the bed, and if the ball of roots is not judiciously distributed and loosened up, the roots will make but feeble growth. If the plants have once started a healthy growth, then the roots must be active, and for them to die or "look moldy" after that I could not account. It would take a most outrageous drying out or a ridiculous over-watering to destroy the roots. I would advise L to send a specimen of these "moldy" roots to some rose specialist.

William Scott.

BLISTER BEETLES.

What will destroy the blister beetle that attacks the petals of florets, often called the aster bug? It should be a white powder or it would discolor the florets, and not too dangerous to those who may handle after purchasing.

H. A. C.

Fortunately I have not yet been troubled with the aster beetle, but have seen it frequently. I am almost sure there has been published in the columns of the Review an article on the beetle and how to get rid of it, but I don't recall the article just now. H. A. C. doesn't say whether the beetles he is going to fight are on the asters or on the petals of some other flower. The beetle "chews" but doesn't "suck," as does the aphis tribe, and therefore a poison on surface of leaf or plant would destroy it. Powdered hellebore would not discolor the flowers or foliage in any way and is death to all chewing beetles or worms. It should be dusted on when the flowers and foliage are damp.

William Scott.

THE EASTER SHOW IN PHILADELPHIA.

That Easter is the plant festival of the year is more clearly demonstrated each season, and the wonderful expansion of our business in this direction is much more fully understood if one goes about among the large retail stores of our city a few days before Easter. Not only do we find that the quantity of flowering plants used at this season has wonderfully increased, but there is also a greater variety and in many respects an improvement in quality.

From a numerical point of view the Easter lilies are doubtless still at the front, and there are many more good lilies than could be seen last season, the percentage of defective bulbs having been less, and the crop being needed rather late this season made hard forcing unnecessary, while the warm weather in March pushed the lilies along, though in a natural way.

Some complaint is heard on the part of some of the growers relative to the small number of flowers per plant on the lilies, many being seen with not more than three or four flowers to a stem, and at ten cents per flower such a crop is not highly profitable.

Of course there are many large pots and pans of lilies containing from three to seven or eight bulbs, but plants of this size have but a limited sale when compared with the tens of thousands of single plants that are needed to supply the needs of the average run of customers. Very few L. Harrisii are now to be seen, the great majority among the Easter crop being L. longiflorum.

Next to the lilies in popularity are the azaleas, and these are to be seen in great variety both in size and price, ranging from fifty cents to ten or fifteen dollars each at wholesale, but of these extra large sizes few are needed, the popular sizes being those that wholesale at from one to five dollars each.

Two or three different whites, Mme. Van de Cruyssen and Vervæneana may be considered the leaders among the azaleas, and despite the reported scarcity of Van der Cruyssen the stores seem to be well supplied with this sterling variety.

Crimson Rambler roses are the next important item, and are seen in great abundance and in very fine quality, most of the plants being well flowered and the flowers of better color than usual, the mild season having brought them along gradually, thus giving more substance to the flowers and a much brighter color than is seen when this rose has had hard forcing. Ramblers are shown in various sizes, though very few extremely large, those most in demand being plants that are sold at one to three dollars each, wholesale.

Various Hybrid Perpetual roses are seen, these mostly being offered in 6-inch pots, and among them are some very nice Brunners in good color and condition.

Quite a number of rhododendrons are to be seen, but as these are not very rapid growing plants and also have the usual import expenses added to their original cost before they reach the retailer, it makes many of these plants rather gilt-edged in price, and consequently not well adapted for every locality, the wholesale prices ranging from two to fifteen dollars each, and it may be readily guessed that the latter size is not bought by the dozen.

Bougainvillea Sanderiana appears in magnificent specimens, a perfect mass of purplish pink bracts, and with the pot covered with a neutral tinted Porto Rican matting this plant is really a thing of beauty.

Hydrangeas are handled in less quantities than in former years, though there are many good plants to be seen in 6 and 8-inch pots, and they are all right, too, if the purchasers will only supply them with water enough to keep that great evaporating surface of leaves and flowers in good order, and we might also add, if the growers will only get the hydrangeas in early enough that they may be properly hardened off before they are offered for sale. There are a few very blue-blooded hydrangeas offered in some of the best stores, the plants in question being apparently a very blue form of Thos. Hogg, and it is related that both the plants and the soil in which they are growing were imported from France by a certain well known and highly successful Long Island grower. These very blue hydrangeas are really a beautiful color, but the price of them would make the average customer bluer than the flowers.

Deutzia gracilis is still grown in quantity by a few growers, and among the cheaper stock is still in favor, but a comparative novelty is seen in some large tubs of Deutzia Lemoinei, well flowered and much more effective than D. gracilis.

The improved forms of Astilbe japonica are much in evidence and lots of fine stock has been sold at fifty cents each, and many for much less, and though astilbe does not occupy space very long, yet it occupies a good deal of space for the money it turns in.

Several species and varieties of heaths are to be seen in the stock of the leading stores, probably more of Erica persoluta than either of the others, while some very nice plants of one of the bright yellow heaths, E. Cavendishiana, is perhaps the greatest novelty in this line and brings four to six dollars at retail in 6-inch pots.

Some very well grown cytisus or genistas are seen, both bush and pyramid in shape, and mostly of medium size, but bearing a great abundance of bloom.

There are also a few laburnums and Japanese cherries forced into bloom, but these may rather be ranked among the curios than as truly useful Easter stock. The cherries are well flowered, as is natural to these, and in form they are very quaint and gnarled, but like most of the Japanese dwarfed plants they are rather costly for their size.

The bulb stock, such as tulips, hyacinths and daffodils, is very plentiful, but in many instances the quality has suffered from the heat that struck them the week before Easter week, the flowers being too open and the growth much drawn.

Many hyacinths are grown in pans containing five to ten bulbs, and tulips in much the same manner, while the hyacinths that are grown singly in 4-inch pots are mostly used for filling window boxes and hampers. About one dozen spikes of lily of the valley in a small pan looks very well and sells well, and a few fine pansies or English daisies are put up in the same way with good effect.

A novelty noted was a few plants of leptospermum, an Australian plant of the myrtle family, the plants in question being probably L. bullatum, and having heath-like foliage and a profusion of small white flowers something like tiny apple blossoms.

Some charming little hampers that looked as though they were made from a section broken off a birch log and crusted over with fungi and mosses just as though the log they came from had lain in the woods for a year or two, were also among the novelties and when nicely filled with spring flowers would make a most acceptable gift, while other receptables for a similar purpose are made in a peculiar wicker ware by the Japs. Porto Rico matting is most used for pot covers, and quite a good deal of the waterproof crepe paper is also in demand for this purpose.

ADIANTUM HYBRIDUM.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of an adiantum raised by John H. Ley, Good Hope, D. C., a cross between A. decorum and A. amabile, and which he has named A. hybridum. It was introduced to commerce by the originator several years ago, but being totally barren of spores stock was limited to a few hundred specimens.

This adiantum is a very rapid grower, the specimen illustrated, which is about four feet through, being planted out on the bench from a 2-inch pot in June and potted in a 10-inch pan in September, 150 plants filling 600 feet of bench room. Mr. Ley finds the fronds very valuable for cutting, realizing a high price in New York.

BUFFALO.

Easter Trade.

The Easter of 1903 will long be remembered with sunny memories, for it was most satisfactory to the florist. The element which cuts such a figure —the weather—was on our side. It was not ideal, not such balmy days as come to us in early March, yet it was all we could expect. No plant needed protection from the cold, no rain to keep the shoppers indoors, little puffs of wind that might have expended their strength on the plains of Dakota or the woods of Michigan, but did us little harm. Sunday was a warm, beautiful day and crowds went to the cemeteries and on their way cleaned up everything the florist had left.

We telephoned to two of the Main street florists, and their experience truthfully related will be a pretty accurate guide to all the rest. Strange to say, both said about the same thing, that their business was 25 per cent larger than last year, and we can say the same ourselves. This is not to be wondered at. It was not the old familiar friends that bought more, but there are more people to buy, more people feeling well off and able to spend $5 on a few plants or flowers. They both said that violets, lily of the valley, and carnations were in most demand, with rather a decreased demand for expensive roses. Possibly a remembrance of a first-class price and a third-class article on similar former occasions seared them off. Violets went well at $2 to $3 per 100, but the quality was none of the best. Carnations brought $1 for the Scott type, $1.50 to $2 for Lawson type, and $2 to $3 for Prosperity. When you show a customer a bunch of good Prosperity, either he or she may raise a slight grunt or gentle kick at $3 per dozen, but "Well, I must have a dozen any way" is the next sentence. We have heard little and had no experience with any flowers that had been steeped in the Syracuse product, yet we did hear that on Sunday morning could be bought a lot of roses that should have been sold a week before. Little bulbous stuff was asked for.

In plants it would be puzzling to say what was favorite, and of course you were asked for plants you did not have. Lilies—nearly all of the Japan type—were of course sold in larger quantity than any other. Of the many thousands grown and in flower I have not heard of one good plant left over. Azaleas sold well and plants worth $6 or $7 were in good demand. Handsome rhododendrons went well and more could have been sold. Lilacs, hydrangeas, Crimson Ramblers, all have their admirers, and in cheaper plants spiræas, pans of hyacinths and tulips, genistas, cinerarias, mignonette, and a few others all found buyers. There were some nice hybrid perpetual roses sold, yet the supply was not nearly equal to the demand. The Dutch hyacinth was a little overdone. Everybody can grow them, and another year we can do with less. We think the cineraria takes up too much room to be profitable. There was absolutely no demand for palms and little for any foliage plants, except Boston ferns. It was all flowering plants.

We were one of those poor creatures who had at least a thousand black stemmed Japan lilies that did not grow over 15 to 18 inches above the pot. Yet they were as healthy as young Corbett and had from five to eight splendid flowers and buds. We had enough 3-foot ones for church duty, and these dwarf ones went as gifts just as well. "My! What beautiful dwarf lilies! How do you get them so short, Mr. S.?" "It's a new variety, ma'am, from Japan. This is the first year of its introduction." "Why, I think it's lovely, so much nicer than those tall things we had to stand on the floor." And so they all went at just the same price as the taller plants. And four or five plants in a 10-inch azalea pot with fifteen open flowers were irresistible.

Church decorations now cut but a small figure in our Easter business. Many plants are sent there as individual offerings, but the elaborate decorations are no longer the fashion. A few churches still keep it up in a modest form. The overwhelming proportion of the business is plants or flowers sent as presents. On Friday night, or rather Saturday morning, about 3:30 a. m., as I stood at the desk with the cold shivers running all over my anatomy, and handed out every 15 seconds an address tag to Aleck with the remark "Here's the address and here's the card —an azalea marked 'Jones' in No. 3," I thought how long will this last? How long before fashion changes and our good patrons turn back to a book, Easter eggs, or a card, for an Easter gift, as it was twenty years ago? The lover can never substitute anything else for Arabella, but those happy people are only a very small minority of our patrons, and it may come about that for one good lady to send another lady friend a $5 Crimson Rambler may not be the thing. We hope that day may never come, for what can be so sweet and emblematic of the season of bursting bud and song of bird as cheerful, sweet blossoms? All we can do to foster and conserve this harvest season is to introduce new and varied forms of plants and flowers, be fair and moderate in our dealings with our patrons, and see to it that when the gift arrives it is in such shape as to be a joy to the remembered one. PHILADELPHIA.

Easter Trade.

Philadelphia has just experienced the most brilliant Easter in her history. Her people have sent plants and flowers to their churches, to their friends, and to their homes with a unanimity that has practically exhausted the largest supply of both plants and flowers ever offered by the growers. Such a display as was seen in the shops and on the streets just before Easter will long be remembered. The color effects were dazzling. The quality and variety of the stock offered was excellent. Good judges say that cut flowers and plants were about equally popular. When both sold so well it is useless to compare. By Sunday morning there was mighty little left, many of the retailers being obliged to use the telephone to complete their orders. The quantities of lilies, both cut and in pots, was something enormous, very few indeed being left over. Prices ranged from 8 to 15 cents a flower, the higher grades going first. Azaleas were never better, the colored varieties being most popular. Rhododendrons were very showy and seemed to increase in favor. The feature in hydrangeas was a pretty shade of blue, imported from France. Crimson Ramblers were finer and sold better than during the past two seasons. Among the spiræas Gladstone was deservedly a favorite. Genistas were pretty, but do not keep well enough to be a favorite.

Bulbous stock in pans, especially in 8-inch, went well in limited quantities. Some very nice pot roses were seen and brought good prices—75 cents to $1 each in sixes. In cut flowers besides the Easter lilies before mentioned, lilies of the valley seemed to come to the front. They were fine and very popular. Carnations were quite scarce and brought good prices. Brunners sold well. Beauties were very plentiful, especially the long stemmed flowers. They brought from $5 to $6 a dozen. The poorer grades of tea roses were a little hard to sell. Violets came in better than was expected. Immense quantities of mignonette, asparagus and smilax were used.

Robt. Craig, who is the largest grower of Easter plants in this city, had scarcely anything left over Easter Monday. He grew between 12,000 and 13,000 lilies. On Thursday there were 2,000 unsold, but on Saturday he was obliged to refuse orders. He said the out-of-town shipments were unusually heavy, but a number of orders came in too late to be accepted. He was extremely pleased with the business done, which he said was better than ever before. The 6-inch azaleas of Vervenaeana and Van der Cruyssen were great sellers, as also the Crimson Ramblers of all sizes. Bulbous stock he thought might be very easily overdone, the demand being limited.

H. H. Battles had but half a dozen hydrangeas left of the enormous stock stored away in his annex, and these were considered too soft to give satisfaction or they would have been sent out.

A. B. Cartledge said that his firm, Pennock Bros., were obliged to close their doors on Easter eve. He considered azaleas as the most satisfactory plants they handled, a few more being sent out each year. The freshly imported plants of the colored varieties are preferred to carried over stock on account of their brilliancy. Great quantities of lilies were used. Many hampers of blooming plants were made up. Their business was fully 10 per cent ahead of last season, which held the record.

Samuel S. Pennock was greatly pleased with the demand for cut flowers. He distributed over 26,000 lilies of the valley and was obliged to send for more on Sunday morning.

Edward Reid had a great run on carnations, one store alone using 1,800, mignonette and asparagus, of which he had fully a wagon load.

Chas. E. Meehan did splendidly at the flower market, his best calla lilies bringing $3 a dozen.

Eugene Bernheimer had choice specialties in Jacques and lavender sweet peas.

William J. Baker had a great many very fine carnations.

The weddings this week are a feature. Sweet peas, gardenias and the very few orchids obtainable being in great demand. Beauties are very fine and can be had in quantity at moderate prices. Carnations are still scarce and have fallen but little since Easter.

Notes.

Frank Gould read a paper on "The Culture of Hardy Herbaceous Plants" before the Germantown Horticultural Society on Monday evening.

The Lord & Burnham Co. have delivered roofing material for seven houses, 155x18 feet each, to Isaac Layer, of Tacony.

Robert Scott & Son are sending in some superb Beauties to Reid and Pennock.

N. L. Wilson, of Oxford, Pa., is greatly pleased with his returns from the Flower Market. He is cutting some fine Flora Hills.

Joseph Heacock did well with his palms for Easter.

Stephen Mortensen, of Southampton, Pa., is sending in some very fine Liberties and Maids to S. S. Pennock. The latter, by the way, brought $5 a dozen last week.

W. A. Walten is bringing in some fine Prosperity to the Flower Market.

Leo Niessen sold all of his large shipments of Beauties. He sent a car load of Easter plants in one order. Everybody was pleased with Easter.

The department stores handled many plants.

William C. Smith had a store at Ninth and Chestnut streets for Easter plants last week. Phil.

BALTIMORE.

Easter Trade.

We have just passed an Easter of phenomenal business, if the exultation of the conflict is confirmed by the sober second casting up of the accounts. Of all interested—grower, retailer and go-between—we have found not a single one who is not more than satisfied with the results. At the Florists' Exchange trade moved regularly and without the excitement, perhaps, of other years, and it is probable the stores bought less than heretofore. This was due to the supply at wholesale not being up to that of preceding seasons in volume, but all the stock received was entirely cleared out at moderate prices.

A marked and unusual feature was the almost total absence of violets. These, except in fragmentary quantities and low grades, were practically unobtainable. The weather conditions of the past few weeks are responsible, doubtless, for this. Carnations were not plentiful, and this was the general experience, though some growers, like John G. Rider and Chas. W. Akehurst & Son, shipped large quantities, many of them of high quality. Roses were ampler in quantity, but the quality was not high as a rule, climatic influences for a long time, indeed, throughout the whole winter, having been rather unpropitious. Callas were very scarce and much sought for. Bulbous flowers were not so abundant as usual, and much of this stock was just on the edge of collapse.

In the market there was an abundance of material which many thought was unequaled in the experience of the trade, but by 10 o'clock Saturday night it was practically cleared out, and at figures usually satisfactory to the seller.

The weather fairly favorable, not cold, rather threatening and sometimes drizzling, lacking the inspiring movement which bright skies and warm suns sometimes lend to the vernal festival here, but shoppers were not deterred and the market men as well as the stores of every grade did well. The street fakirs had more reason to complain than any other class, their sales being restricted by the scarcity and high price of the stuff they handle.

The store windows as a rule were elaborately decorated, most of them with great good taste, this varying, of course, with individuals and the material at command. There was an absence this year of the bougainvilleas and genistas which a season or so ago had the call. Azaleas and lilies seemed the general favorites on every side. Reports vary as to the plants. Some found the Rambler had begun to go down hill in popular estimation; others sold quite as many as usual. There was similar divergence as to hydrangeas, one store finding the supply insufficient and the next one unable to move them off.

The proportion of sales of plants to cut flowers at Easter is here gradually but surely increasing, and any sorts which add to the variety and brightness of collections are gladly welcomed. In cut flowers a feature was the replacing of violets by valley, some of the latter worn by the ladies in the street parade being wonderfully fine.

Here are the reports of a number of the trade:

John Cook—"Never had better business. Everything practically cleared out."

William J. Halliday—"Quite up to the average and probably beyond. Well satisfied."

S. Feast & Sons—"Believe trade quite up to usual mark. Well pleased with results."

Halliday Bros.—"Never had better business."

E. A. Seidewitz—"Trade excellent in all branches. Everything moved well."

Chas. E. Smith—"Fine business done. Fully satisfied."

Lehr Bros.—"Quite satisfied. Up to or beyond the mark of other years."

Edward Kress—"Very satisfactory business. Sold out."

John Berl—"Fully up to the average."

S. W. Tilton—"Never had better trade."

Kirkley & Son—"Business fine."

A. G. Fiedler—"Outstripped previous seasons."

Philip B. Welsh—"Fully satisfied. Trade excellent."

J. J. Perry—"Sold out. Well pleased with results."

G. C. Personette—"Extraordinarily good business."

J. A. Ritter & Son—"Had fine trade."

Mrs. Chas. Held—"It was a grand season."

In the variety of weather which prevailed last week one day brought a hail storm of several minutes' duration. Fortunately, so far as heard, no damage was done.

E. A. Seidewitz, through the criminal negligence of employes, lost some weeks ago in a cold night over 1,500 of palms, etc., by freezing.

The trade here now includes one member who will furnish at once the flowers and conduct the religious ceremonies at the funerals of his patrons. R.

ST. LOUIS.

Easter Trade.

In St. Louis the Easter trade in the cut flower line was fully as large as in former years, and the plant trade in the West End is reported as enormous. The weather was most favorable to flower buyers, and those florists who have greenhouses in connection with their stores were loaded down from top to bottom with all kinds of plants. Some of them seemed worried up to Saturday morning, fearing they had too much stuff on hand, but before Saturday noon they were fairly swamped with orders, and today their places look bare, hardly a thing in the plant line being left.

Cut Harrisii were most plentiful, but plants somewhat scarce. Azaleas had a great call, bringing from $1.50 to $5 each. Hydrangeas also had a good call. In fact, everything that looked well sold readily. The report seems general that more plants were sold this Easter than ever before.

As to cut flowers, they were plentiful in all lines. Cut Harrisii and callas had a great call, both wholesale and retail, with thousands of them in the market. These retailed at $4 a dozen for Harrisii and $3 for callas. Violets were poor and scarce and the demand much greater than the supply. This was due to the hot day the week before. A great many carnations came in, but the demand was so great that the supply did not go around. Fancy stuff demanded $6 per 100, and nothing could be bought under $4. The supply in roses was not so great, but what came in was first-class and demanded top prices—from $8 to $12 per 100. More first-class Beauties were in the market this Easter than ever before. Everything good in this line sold out clean.

All bulbous stock was, as usual, plentiful and of good quality. Tulips were in good demand. Everything sold well in this line, as this stock is always in great demand at this time of the year. And so the last great day of this season for the florists has gone and everybody is well pleased with the business done.

The majority of the florists had their windows handsomely decorated for the occasion. Fred Weber, Theo. Miller, Miss Newman, Waldbart, and Mrs. Ayres made fine shows of their Easter stock. C. Young & Sons Co. and Beissen were in keeping with their usual fine displays and window decorations.

The plant stands at Union Market are reported to have sold nearly everything they had on Saturday; the increase amounting to about 25 per cent.

Prices on cut stuff opened up a little stiff this (Monday) morning, but will no doubt fall before the end of the week.

Notes.

The big and happy "Baby Foley" (as he is best known) and his partner, Ed Glenn (I believe that's his name), were in town the past week, but it was only through an accident that I learned of their visit.

Charlie Ford, of Philadelphia, who represents A. Hermann, of New York, and a few others called on the trade the past week with good success.

The club members are much pleased by the announcement in the Review that the Chicago boys will be with us Saturday and Sunday. The committee on entertainment is hard at work on the programme. A trolley ride to the World's Fair grounds, a theater party and a bowling match are among the features. Hotel Rozier, Thirteenth and Olive streets, has been selected as headquarters during their stay. The club will meet next Thursday afternoon to make all final arrangements. The committee in charge is composed of J. J. Beneke, Otto Koenig and J. F. Ammann.

CHICAGO.

The Easter Trade.

Taken altogether the Easter trade was the best we have ever had, though there were some weak spots here and there. The retailers report the now expected annual increase in the sale of flowering plants and arrangements of same in baskets and jardinieres. But an immense stock of cut flowers was marketed and the few complaints in the wholesale district were caused by lack of full information as to the possible supply and not to the supply itself.

The supply of lilies when it materialized was even larger than anticipated and those who "had few lilies" on Thursday but dumped immense lots on the market on Saturday, had to take some unpleasant medicine. Some of these late lots had to be jobbed off at as low as $4 and $5 per 100 to move them. But aside from a few mistakes of this sort trade in general was very satisfactory. There were enough roses to about meet requirements, but the carnation shortage was fully as marked as expected. There wasn't half enough, even at the high rates prevailing.

Among the retailers C. A. Samuelson, E. Wienhoeber Co. and W. J. Smyth went heavily into plants and plant arrangements and all did an immense business in this department as well as in cut flowers. In plants lilies seem to still have the lead, followed by azaleas, Rambler roses, rhododendrons, hydrangeas, pans of hyacinths, daffodils, etc. The arrangements of plants in baskets, etc., sold better than ever and the individual sales averaged larger, indicating a more liberal feeling on the part of customers than in recent years. The Deutzia Lemoinei makes a very attractive Easter plant when the blooms are not so ripe as to fall when handled. There was more inquiry for something new and novel than last year and an attractive combination sold more readily. Not so much crepe paper was used, but a good deal of Porto Rican matting and handsome baskets and pot covers.

Since Easter the supply has been sufficient in all lines, except carnations, white being especially short. Prices have of course eased materially and there is at time of writing a real weakness in the rose situation. While with some the best roses reach $8, with others $6 is the top, and while $3 is practically the bottom we hear of clean up sales at less than $20.00 a thousand. The after Easter demand is beginning to make itself felt and business ought to average good now for some time.

The drizzling rain that interfered with the Easter shopping on Friday and Saturday has continued since then with but few intermissions and the weather indications favor a shortening of the supply.

Southern lilac is appearing in the wholesale houses, but the quality is not extra good.

There is still an abundance of lilies in the market.

Various Items.

Wietor Bros. have a section of six houses of Kaiserin, La France and Golden Gate that were rested in midwinter and are now coming in with an enormous crop of fine flowers.

A. L. Randall will soon move to the second floor of the building at 19 and 21 Randolph street, where he will have a space 50x160 feet.

Bowling.

The games for position on the team to represent Chicago at the next convention were started Tuesday night at Anson's. Twenty-four entries were made. Thirteen participated in the games, with the following results:

Asmus	163	159	139
Balluff	161	152	171

BOSTON.

Another floral epoch has passed. As usual, my observations were mostly confined to the Co-operative Market and glimpses of the retail stores, but I saw enough to realize that the business was surely the equal to any predecessor, and probably will prove heavier than any of its kind. Some surprises were developed. A week ago or more it began to be plainly seen that there was an immense supply of excellent potted plants of all seasonable kinds coming in freely, notwithstanding all the bad weather and all reports to the contrary. Friday and Saturday developed the fact that roses and the prevailing bulb flowers were out in generous supply, but not until Saturday was it ascertained that even violets were plentiful and to such an extent that a break in price was necessary in order to market them. Carnations cleaned up first, and double jonquils hardly held out, but with these two exceptions, and perhaps fine white flowers, all others were in good supply, indeed.

More taste than usual was displayed in arrangement of plants at the different retail stores. Galvin's Back Bay store being most especially remarkable, partly due, of course, to the facilities there for such a display. But they hit upon a very fine effect, which was much heightened by the costly mirror work of the place, making a display well worth a good, long railway ticket to go and inspect. But all these displays at the different stores were sadly disarranged and depleted before Saturday arrived. And the weather man deserves a word for the most excellent day provided for delivery. It was no small contract to get all the goods into the city and get them properly distributed, and the weather makes a vast difference.

All was serene at 161-3 Columbus avenue, even if the quarters are in a totally unfurnished condition. And there was a crowd there and business done there which would have sorely puzzled the old market to accommodate, and the increased space was much appreciated.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the new rooms in the Grand Opera House building on Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue, Monday evening, and about thirty members were in attendance. Everybody was delighted with the cozy and luxurious quarters—by far the best the club has ever occupied, and a very harmonious evening inaugurated the "new departure." The chrysanthemum committee suggested the club's practical interest in the fall show and the giving of prizes, competition to be open to members of the club, the recommendation being unanimously adopted.

Vice President Traendly, chairman of the outing committee, reported progress and celebrated the advance of the prospective reunion by disposing of a large number of tickets, announcing at the same time a well patronized souvenir book by the advertising members of the club. Jos. Millang, manager of the Cut Flower Co., was proposed for membership.

All arrangements for the complete payment of premiums for the fall show were confirmed and a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. John N. May for the liberal donation of $50 to the club's exchequer in favor of the same.

Several inquiries were here interpolated as to the presence of "Job" in the room, but no response was elicited. John Birnie was present with a good sized chip on his shoulder, but if "Job" was on hand he wisely hid his identity.

Mr. May informed the club of a cablegram announcing the death on Monday morning of James W. Withers, of American Gardening, at Jamaica, W. I. The sad intelligence was unexpected, the last news from him giving encouragement as to his ultimate recovery. A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions of condolence and forward to the bereaved family.

Mr. Wallace, of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists, gave a very interesting report of his visit to Milwaukee, describing the immense building where the convention is to be held and its conveniences; the bowling alleys, 16 in number; the enthusiasm of the Chicago florists; the generous reception given by the Milwaukeeans, and the beauty of the city, and predicted the largest convention ever held by the society.

The president appointed as the transportation committee Messrs. John N. May, Walter Sheridan and S. S. Butterfield. Mr. May suggested the route via Detroit and Bay City, Mich., and thence by boat to Milwaukee, which seemed desirable to many, a few perennial victims of seasickness objecting. The trip to Buffalo via the West Shore R. R. under the personal supervision of Mr. Louis Hafner, brother of Lawrence Hafner, one of the club's members, was so enjoyable that many seemed to be in favor of "letting well enough alone" and going by the West Shore to Chicago and thence by boat to Milwaukee. Mr. Hafner makes a splendid chaperone and looks after the comfort of everybody on his "special" trains so faithfully that it is a picnic to be under his supervision.

Mr. Herrington was present and is very enthusiastic as to the mum exhibition in November. The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society has signified its intention of duplicating Tarrytown's prize offers. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will compete and will give $100 in prizes, and altogether seven societies have already assured the president of their co-operation, with several more to hear from.

The only rose on exhibition was a handsome pink, very similar to La France in color, concerning the name of which there seemed to be some doubt, so that no official opinion as to its value was given. The president believed it to be Killarney, while others knew it as Mrs. Westinghouse, and so its identity was left for further consideration.

The commissariat department did nobly and the social and convivial reunion after adjournment attested to John Birnie's sage solution of the most desirable method of maintaining good fellowship. Easter memories and story and song ended happily the first night of what promises to be a most interesting year in the club's history.

Easter Trade.

Easter has filled all hearts with hope and pocketbooks with the "one thing needful." The profits in many cases have been inspiring; the losses must have been limited.

Every store from the least to the greatest was a "wreck" when the Sunday deliveries were over. Here and there a retailer was able to make presentable windows on Monday with left over azaleas, genistas and Ramblers, but these will all be needed for the decorations that are to follow.

All things considered, it was a glorious Easter for the retailer. Weather confirmed the optimistic predictions. Friday and Saturday were charming, sunny days; nothing interfered with the buyers until nearly midnight Saturday, and Easter Sunday found the storm over and the great parade in full swing on Fifth avenue.

The wholesale cut flower men who handled plants seem to have made their venture pay, very few plants of value remaining unsold. Here and there some lilies in pots indicated an over supply.

The following firms indulged in the "side issue" and made their "flyers" profitable: J. K. Allen, W. Ghormley, John Young, Bradshaw & Hartman, Alex. Guttman, Chas. Millang, Jas. McManus, J. J. Perkins, J. Hammond and Julius Lang. The wholesale cut flower men who have retail departments were Thos. Young, Jr., Young & Nugent and the New Jersey Cut Flower Co.

Some of the prices asked and obtained for specimen plants at the Broadway and Fifth avenue "palaces" seem incredible to those living in the smaller cities. Some large pots of Crimson Ramblers retailed at $40; azaleas, $50 to $100; bougainvilleas, $25 to $35, while assorted baskets of plants artistically arranged were in demand at $50 each. So you perceive the assertion that some stores disposed of $20,000 worth of plants during Easter week does not seem at all improbable.

Jas. McManus had a fine lot of white orchids for Easter, which were all spoken for.

The Cut Flower market in the Coogan building, Twenty-sixth street and Sixth avenue, on Saturday morning, was an interesting study. Several hundred growers and buyers were on hand at 5 a. m. when the doors were opened and the crowd did not lessen for two hours. Many of the familiar faces of years ago and hundreds I had never seen before were there, and many of the unpleasant features of the old market—the crowding and noise and confusion—have been eliminated. At 8 o'clock not a flower remained.

M. Gotlieb, of McConnell's, returned from a ten days' rest at Hot Springs, Va., in time for the strenuous Easter rush.

In nearly all the large stores sleep was unknown Saturday night and many of the proprietors as well as the employes were obliged to hustle from dark to dawn. It was long after noon on Sunday in most establishments before rest was possible.

The window displays everywhere were artistic and beautiful. Many novelties in vases, baskets, bells, chariots, Easter effects, etc., were in evidence. It was the Easter of the century.

Items.

The event of the week is the Nielson-Vanderbilt wedding at Newport. A full description of its best features will be given next week.

Many social functions are arranged for in the near future, and a brilliant spring season for the retail florists seems assured.

Young & Nugent had an exciting experience on Saturday morning. A lighted cigarette thrown on the awning (which had been used to cover their annex) at the back of their store on West Twenty-eighth street, set it on fire and threatened to destroy plants, customers and clerks for a while. The firemen were much disappointed on arrival to find all danger over. The damage, apart from the destroyed awning, was fortunately very light, but it was a "bad half hour" for Mr. Nugent while it lasted.

Alex. Burns, of Woodside, has the congratulations of his friends on the recovery of his wife, whose severe accident of nearly a year ago was here recorded. Recovery then seemed impossible.

A. H. Langjahr, the wholesale florist of Brooklyn, recovered from a severe bronchial attack just in time to attend to his Easter business.

Hicks & Crawbuck had their hands full with their two stores, and realized some fine prices for their extra carnations. Their business continues to grow rapidly, and their two-city venture proves to have been a happy inspiration.

Easter scored a reasonable advance from the low rates of a week ago, but prices dropped with a thud on Monday morning. The days of high Easter prices seem to be past. At midnight Saturday sacrifices were made all along the line. Easter Sunday there was no demand whatever and on Monday the iceboxes were overflowing. The best cut lilies dropped to 6 cents. On Saturday morning the best prices of the week were realized. Violets and carnations maintained their advance to the end, but roses had been held back by the shippers and the market was flooded after the legitimate demand had ceased. The result can be imagined. With the usual weddings and festivities of the season it is expected that prices will soon be normal again.

Anderson, Ind.—Stuart & Haugh report that Easter trade with all the florists was good. Rain cut the plant trade some. However, lilies sold about as usual, with prices higher. Azaleas in good demand. Potted hyacinths, cinerarias and primroses did not sell as freely as we would have liked. Bulbous stock, roses and carnations sold well; prices not much above normal. The general average of the three days' business was from one-third to one-half better than last year.

Peoria, Ill.—J. C. Murray reports Easter trade as much larger than last year, with the supply of cut flowers not equal to demand, even at advanced prices. Carnations were 75 cents to $1.00 a dozen, select roses $2.50. No call for bulb stuff. Violets, lilies and red roses were largely called for. All the florists had all they could handle. Weather warm and no wind or dust. Ramblers with 500 flowers sold at a premium. The best lilies were the longiflorums.

Leucothoe	per 1000, 6.00
Common Ferns	per 1000, 1.75

Minneapolis, Minn.—E. Nagel & Co. say that notwithstanding the rain on Friday and Saturday and the cloudy Sunday Easter trade was the largest ever known here. If the weather had been favorable it would have been still larger. Prices were higher than last year. Lilies sold at 25 cents per blossom and bud; daffodils, 75 cents; tulips, 75 cents to $1; roses, $2.50 to $3; Beauties, $6 to $9; carnations, $1 to $1.50 per dozen. All flowers seemed to be in equally good demand. There was a heavy call for blooming plants of all kinds, lilies, azaleas and hydrangeas taking the lead.

Youngstown, O.—Walker & McLean say Easter trade was decidedly ahead of any previous year. Prices were about the same as last season. Bulb stuff in pots and pans, such as Von Sion, tulips and hyacinths, sold well, also spireas, Ramblers, lilacs, genistas, rhododendrons, lilies, etc. In cut flowers carnations took the lead and we were fortunate in having enough to fill all orders.

Lily of the Valley.

Brun's Celebrated Brand for Forcing. $12.50 per 1000; $30.00 per case of 2500; $1.50 per 100.

MILWAUKEE.

Easter Trade.

Easter trade was in every way satisfactory. Business was considerably in excess of last year. The most noticeable features were the large demand for carnations and the light demand for roses. The prices on the former ranged from $4 to $6 per 100, and on roses from $6 to 8, most of the latter going at inside figures, while inferior grades sold at from $3 to $4 per 100. There was plenty of bulbous stock in the market, but nearly everything was cleaned up at fair prices. There was an increased call for valley, lilacs and violets. There was also a large demand for cut lilies.

In blooming plants lilies led the call, and almost everything in good salable condition was cleaned up early. There was also a good supply of azaleas, lilacs, deutzias and spiræas. Good potted hyacinths were scarce, also bulbous stuff in pans. Most of the dealers were well supplied in the plant line and the displays made were far ahead of former years.

M. A. McKenney & Co. made a fine display of lilac plants and Crimson Ramblers, and had a large tree trimmed with apple blossoms in the background, which made a beautiful effect. Jos. Fox had a fine line of miscellaneous plants. Peter Kapsalis & Co. displayed an excellent lot of azaleas, lilacs and rhododendrons, also a fine lot of violet plants trimmed with violet paper, which sold well. An immense cross made up of lilies and purple hyacinths, with the rest of the window trimmed in purple and white, attracted the public eye. Currie Bros. displayed an excellent lot of hydrangeas, azaleas, cinerarias and various other plants. Jas. Chaeona made a specialty of cut flowers and had a large lot on hand which sold out clean. Wm. Edlefsen's conservatory in the rear of his store was well filled with a large variety of blooming plants, and also several thousands of tulips, hyacinths, etc., in flats.

Everything salable was cleaned up. The market florists all report a large increase over last year. Although the weather was unfavorable on Saturday, buyers were out in full force. A. Billings brought a fine lot of well grown longiflorum plants to Holton & Hunkel Co., which sold at sight. F. P. Dilger had a large crop of bulb stock in nearly all varieties.

C. C. Pollworth Co. has outgrown its present quarters and has leased a four story building at the City Hall square and will move in on May 1. Incog.

A new and enlarged edition of their catalogue of greenhouses has been issued by the Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y. It contains over fifty fine halftone views of greenhouses and conservatories erected by them, in addition to drawings showing their various styles of construction, all printed on fine enameled book paper. It is really a handsome portfolio and is a credit to the house issuing it.

PITTSBURG.

The florists throughout the city report trade for Easter fully as good as last year; some say much better. It is a little early to obtain a correct statement. However, I feel safe in saying that the volume of business was greater than last Easter, which was the best we ever had.

The quality of cut flowers was much better than ever before, especially the product of our home growers. Roses and carnations arrived in fine condition; "pickled" stock was less noticeable.

The supply of violets and carnations was short; not nearly enough to meet the demand. Prices were almost doubled on carnations; all other stock sold at former prices.

The cut of roses was very heavy and many remained unsold. The demand for lilies was far above expectations. American Beauty roses were not in as great demand as in former years.

The weather conditions were very unfavorable. It rained almost all day Friday and Saturday, which retarded the transient trade very much.

The demand for plants did not come up to expectations, many plants remaining unsold. The stock offered in blooming plants was exceptionally fine.

Among the novelties seen at the Cut Flower Co.'s were cut moss roses consigned to them by E. G. Asmus, of West Hoboken, N. J.

Superintendent Wm. Falconer, of the Phipps' conservatory and parks, prepared an Easter show that topped all his previous efforts.

H. C. Frick's conservatories have been opened to the public. David Frazier has charge of this place.

Randolph & McClements installed four automobiles, besides their six wagons, for the delivery of their Easter orders.

The postponed meeting of the Florists' Club is scheduled for next Tuesday evening, April 21. Hoo-Hoo.

RICHMOND, VA.

Big Easter. Big demand for cut flowers at any price, and everything good sold out. Big sale of potted plants, and everything fresh and salable at from 25 cents to about $2 sold out. Good Easter lilies scarce, and one florist who had about 400 longiflorum just in sold out; all others had good sales. Biggest sale of violets. Home grown violets scarce, but Louisa county growers had fair supply. One firm here, "Whitty's," sold over 40,000, as stated by a local paper. Azaleas sold well; spireas only fair. The floral community here are looking more pleasant than a year ago and have a few dollars to buy coal.

O.

POMONA, N. C.

The capacity of the cut flower department of the J. Van Liudley Nursery Co., at Pomona, N. C., has been almost trebled in the last two years, but they find they are yet unable to keep up with the ever increasing demand for cut flowers. Trade has been exceptionally good the present season, indicating plenty of money among the flower buying public. Design work has also kept up well.

We were visited by a sharp frost all through this section of the state on April 4, almost completely ruining the fruit crop, which was in an advanced stage, only the very late varieties escaping injury. Observer.

ST. PAUL.

Easter is over and we are all glad of it, to be sure. One could not stand this racket for a longer time, especially when the weather is gone to the dogs, as it really is. Good Friday was a bad Friday, and things were looking blue all around here, and our worthy brother florists' faces were not fit for a camera snap-shot that day, because a cold, sizzling, drizzling rain came down all day, sometimes in drops, next time in bucketfulls, other times in wash-tubfulls. There were very few customers and buyers in the stores in spite of all effort to attract attention by putting hundreds of the best and finest floral creations in front windows. Saturday morning opened with somewhat better prospects, the rain stopping and a fine northwest breeze traveling over the country, furnishing an ideal day for delivering flowers. And then the rush came. Everything went flying, especially all potted flowering stock.

Cut flowers were not sold so readily as expected. Carnations were scarce, high priced and very few fancy ones. Roses were in abundance and quite a few were left. Bulbous stock came in earliest and sold readily, especially tulips, which were the cheapest cut flowers in the market.

Holm & Olson had a grandiose show and a more grandiose rate for it; same with L. L. May & Co. and E. F. Lemke.

August Vogt, the St. Anthony Hill florist, had an extra carefully selected lot of specimen plants for his swell customers and did a very good business.

Charles Vogt and the Ramaley Floral Co., being in the same building, divided their customers up, and each of them was satisfied with his sales.

Otto Hiersekorn, wife and relatives down on Seventeenth street, were hustling, rustling, bustling more than ever. And so did the rest.

Of course some stock was left over, but regarding the weather we are all content. We must be; there is no help for it. And get ready, boys; only six weeks more until the public wants us again to fill beds, boxes, vases and baskets with blooming stock.

Until then, dear Review, I am your most obedient Christ. Bussjaeger.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Easter Report.

A rainy Easter Sunday morning was the only thing that prevented this Easter's business from being a great record breaker; as it was it was fully up to last year, and in plants some report an increase over last year. Azaleas and Ramblers were the leaders in plants after the lily. In cut flowers everything sold out clean except bulb stuff, which was on hand in large quantities. Roses were in good supply and sold well, but carnations were way short of the demand, but good in quality. Violets were driven off the market by the warm weather a few weeks ago and there were none. A lot of sweet peas with 12 to 15-inch stems from Baur & Smith's place were bought up eagerly and soon ran short of the demand. Prices ruled about the same as last year. There are some complaints of pickled stock having been shipped in from other points and one or two wholesale houses will look in vain for orders from this city for some time to come.

The Easter Trade.

The few days preceding Easter were all that the florist could desire and it was hoped that they would continue the same until after Easter, but on Saturday morning the weather man had apparently left open the valves and run away, for the rain was coming down in torrents and everyone looked blue and felt as he looked. Friday had given them a slight foretaste of what was in store for the trade on the next day should the weather prove good, and no doubt had it done so this Easter would have been a record breaker. Yet with all the rain it may be considered a good Easter, for the people got out between showers and made their purchases without running around to the different stores to shop and bargain.

The last few warm days brought out many more lilies than were expected, but prices kept up and there was no great surplus. Azaleas did not seem to move as readily as last year and some retailers claim they could not get as good prices for them. In potted stuff pans of tulips, hyacinths and daffodils sold well, as did H. P. roses in pots. In cut flowers carnations sold the best, customers readily paying $1 and $1.50 per dozen for good stock. Roses moved freely and were in good supply. Mr. Carey, of Mt. Clemens, had a house of Beauties that had been rested and brought on for Easter, which gave him enough flowers to pay the coal bills for the winter (so it is reported). Bulbous stock was used to fill in mixed orders. Taking it all together, Easter was a fairly good one.

Items.

While in a fit of mental aberration Mrs. Robert Klagge, wife of the Mt. Clemens violet grower, eluded the watchfulness of her husband and came to her death by throwing herself into the Clinton river on last Sunday morning. The deceased was a daughter of the late John Breitmeyer, and was 45 years of age. Mr. Klagge has the sympathy of all who know him.

On Thursday, 2nd inst., this section was visited by a very severe hail storm, but it ran in a streak that caught the florists in the western part of the city. Among those struck the worst were Beard Bros., Chas. Warncke, Gus Knoch, A. W. Steincke & Son and Mr. Keller, all losing about the same in proportion. At present Beard Bros. have put in $288 worth of glass and are not quite half covered, so that their loss in glass will be very near $600. It turned cold on Friday and kept the boys hustling to keep the houses at 35 degrees, which was the best they could do with the boilers running full. The houses presented a curious sight. They were covered with anything and everything that would cover—cloth, old coats, rag carpet, bags, hotbed sash, paper, etc. The loss on stock was very small, but the nervous strain was immense. This is the third time that this section has been visited by hail in the last two years, and the boys say they do not wish us any harm, but prefer the next hail storm to come on the east side of town.

RAG.

ADAMS, MASS.—T. D. Brown reports a large sale of stock of every kind at good prices. He was fortunate in having a fine lot of lilies, carnations and violets of his own growing.

TORONTO.

Easter over and everybody happy, at least if outward appearances and the general expression of satisfaction at the business done count for anything. Toronto was fortunate enough to escape the rain that descended on other parts of our fair country on Easter Saturday. This helped to keep business brisk, and although it started to rain late in the evening, most of the business was over before it commenced.

Carnations were the shortest article in the market; bulb supply kept up very well, although most of the wholesale men sold out on Friday night. Lilies were good and sold well, but few being left over, and what were left were really not salable stock. Violets were very short, and what were to be had sold readily. Roses, supply about equal to demand; smilax and asparagus scarce.

We are now settled down to the regular routine of business, although stuff will likely be scarce for a few days.

We might mention the growers whose stock showed to good advantage: Roses and lilies from W. J. Lawrence's; John Cotterill sent in fine lilies, Murillo tulips, asparagus, fern and smilax; double violets from Wm. Fendley, Brampton; C. Turp, carnations; R. Jennings, Brampton, good carnations and single violets; J. H. Dunlop, American Beauties and carnations; F. G. Butt, sweet peas. We also noticed a new holiday feature in some shipments of fine plants and cut flowers from Wm. Gammage, London. This proves that Mr. Gammage must have hit right with the Easter crop when he had an oversupply.

D. J. Sinclair's trade has grown so during the last few months that in order to meet the demands of his city customers he had to install a second telephone, as the city customers kept complaining that it was often impossible to get the line. This shows what can be done with a commission cut flower house in Canada. D. J.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Easter trade has been satisfactory all around. Lots of blooming plants were disposed of, and there were lilies enough to go around. Some very fine hydrangeas brought a good figure. Bulbous stuff sold at sight. The only shortage was in carnations.

Mr. Jacob Schulz had two stores filled with fine blooming plants and did a land-office business. Nanz & Neuner's store presented the appearance of a regular floral bazaar. Their pink hydrangeas were the finest ever seen here. F. Walker & Co. made a very fine display and came in for a large share of business. J. E. Marrett has a smile all over him on account of the increase over last year's trade. William Walker, the good old Scotchman, did a very large business in plants and cut flowers. Joseph Coenen & Co. attended to wholesale business and disposed of a very large lot of ferns and lilies. Wm. Mann, the Lily King, in the southern part of the city, had all he could attend to, and swelled his bank account to some extent. Haupt, C. B. Thompson and Mrs. C. W. Reimers all report a very satisfactory Easter trade.

The death of Mr. Willie Schulz, who succumbed to that dreadful disease, typhoid fever, was a shock to his friends. He was a son of Mr. Jacob Schulz, was in the employ of Walker & McLean, of Youngstown, Ohio, and had a bright future before him. Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schulz and family have the sympathy of the florists.

HY. LICHTEFELD.

FOND DU LAC, WIS.—E. Haentze says Easter trade was about the same as last year. There was a much larger demand for lily plants and less call for azaleas. Owing to the high prices charged for carnations by the Chicago dealers the people here would not buy so freely as heretofore, and therefore demanded mixed flowers. Taken altogether the Easter trade was very satisfactory.

THE CANADIANS again have a trade paper of their own. Its title is the "Canadian Florist," and it is published semi-monthly by D. C. Nixon & Co., Toronto. We wish it success.

AUBURN, N. Y.—Geo. Dobbs & Son report Easter demand in excess of the supply. The call for plants of all kinds was very great, azaleas being most popular. The florists did better this Easter than ever before.

"Most Caldwell Towers are painted GREEN, You'll know 'em by the color."

Your Greenhouses

can be depended upon to give it to you. You won't find the contents of the tank half gone because of leaks. The Red Gulf Cypress is the best wood for use in water tanks and we employ no other kind. The towers are built of best mild steel and will safely hold the tank.

Our catalogue is full of interesting details and tells all about our Tanks and Towers.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

NEW YORK STORES AT EASTER.

We present in this issue a number of views in New York stores at Easter from photographs taken specially for the Review. Others will appear in the following issues.

The first picture shows a corner in the store of Alexander McConnell, at Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street. The view is toward the street front. Back of the camera were the offices and a host of assistants who were too modest to step forward. Across the street was a well filled annex. Mr. McConnell says his Easter trade was the best in his many years' experience.

The view of Wadley & Smythe's Fifth avenue store gives but a slight idea of the fine decoration of this handsome store. The window was particularly fine. About one-third of the store is seen in the picture, with Mr. Bert Wadley in the foreground and Mr. Wadley, Sr., beyond. Mr. Smythe was out buying lilies for the Vanderbilt wedding. The store extends fifty feet beyond the ice box.

The view of The Rosary, conducted quarters at 1144 Broadway. The specialties here were Ramblers and bougainvilleas. Not a plant remained unsold on Easter Sunday.

View in the store of Alex. McConnell, New York, at Easter.

The view of the store of David Clarke's Sons, on Broadway, gives but a limited idea of its size and shows only about one-fourth of the floor space. The offices are at the left and continue the entire length of the store. The stock had been largely depleted when the photograph was taken. The Easter business here was the largest ever enjoyed by this house and nothing was left unsold.

The display by Mackintosh was made in the store at 1192 Broadway, occupied by him for some years past. On May 1st he will occupy more commodious by J. H. Troy, president of the New York Florists' Club, gives a good idea of the average Bon Ton New York floral store as to size, conveniences and decoration. This was a busy place Easter week. Mr. Troy can be seen in the distance. A great deal of fancy stock was sold and Japanese and other novelties were abundant. The vases and baskets and automobiles are clearly in evidence.

Thomas Young's new store on Fifth avenue, near Forty-second street, is No. 3 of this gentleman's ventures, and a beautiful store it is, with its handsome ceiling, offices, ice box and other conveniences. Mr. Rossow is an able manager and his daily window effects are unique and artistic. Mr. Young made grand displays in all his stores, and little was left when Sunday's parade had disintegrated.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

As the plants in the bench have now attained their maximum size and the soil in the bench has become deficient in the elements necessary for their support, if we wish to retain size and quality of bloom during the weeks of warm weather between now and replanting time, we must find some way of supplying this food and administer it in such a form that the plants can make immediate use of it. This can be done to a certain extent by giving it in the liquid form, as in this form it is most easily assimilated. Unfortunately it has been proved beyond a doubt that a too frequent use of liquid food is at any season very detrimental to the health of the plants and also reduces the quality of the blooms, particularly if they are entirely dependent on this form of food.

As the warm weather approaches the roots become more active, and a heavy growth of wood is forming there should be at all times a reserve store of food at hand from which to derive a continual sustenance, and so enable the plants to form good wood, foliage and bloom. To protect, encourage and feed the young roots during the hot weather a mulch containing the necessary elements should be applied. To be of immediate and lasting use this material should be of a concentrated form, and of a sufficient richness to maintain the plant during the remainder of the season.

Well decomposed cow manure contains most of the requisite elements. To prevent it from shifting during the process of watering and to give it stability, it should be mixed with one-third of its bulk of good fibry loam, and to each bushel of the compost should be added one and one-half or two pounds of dessicated bone flour. This helps materially in giving strength to the stem and foliage and substance and color to the petals. At this season the mulch can be given in greater quantity than at any other time, one and a half inches being none too deep, if the compost is thoroughly incorporated.

As the manure in the mulch will absorb and retain the moisture, the bench will often present the appearance of being wet enough, when a careful examination will often show us that it is the mulch only that is moist. The careful grower should not fail to make a thorough examination daily, the mulch requiring an abundance of water to dissolve the ingredients so necessary to sustain the heavy growth now being produced.

A light top dressing of wood or vegetable ashes will also assist in retarding the deterioration in size and quality incidental to the advent of warm weather. The liquid food should also be increased in strength but not in frequency, once a week being quite sufficient, a more frequent use having a tendency to engender a weak and flabby growth which will produce flowers of a very inferior quality.

By carefully studying the conditions of our soil and stock and ascertaining their requirements and by judiciously supplying the lacking elements to the soil at the proper time we ean prolong the period during which we may have blooms of a high grade. This opportunity if neglected or delayed now will result in a crop of poorly developed and worthless flowers which will scarcely pay for packing and shipping.

KAISERIN.

What can I expect from Kaiserin transplanted into the field from bench planted last fall? They have made weak growth but are beginning to make some flowers now. I need the room and would like to have the flowers through the summer. Should they be dried off before lifting? F. S.

These roses do not require to be dried off as this would have the effect of delaying their blooming season. They can be transferred from the bench to the field at once. A rich mulch of decomposed stable manure spread over the surface of the bed when hot weather begins will greatly assist them in making wood and forming buds. They also require copious snpplies of water during their growing season. Ribes.

BLACK SPOT ON ROSES.

Please give formula for making the spraying solution for black spot on roses. Ark.

Prof. Halsted some years ago recommended the following mixture as a preventive. I have frequently used it with success. Three ounces carbonate of copper, one quart of ammonia and fifty gallons water. Spray once a week with a nozzle that gives a fine spray.

A good plan is to pick off all affected leaves and burn them. A careful use of the hose is also essential as the usual cause of this trouble is some sudden check to root action, frequently brought about by overwatering. Ribes.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Shading.

During the past few weeks we have seen the advantage of having a temporary shade on our houses, that is a shade that will come off readily. The last part of March was very warm and the sun made a light shade necessary, but a few days before Easter it turned cool and cloudy and it rained a good deal. The rain soon washed the shade off of the glass and the houses were not nearly so dark as they would have been with a shade on the glass. Not only were we several hundred blooms ahead at Easter time, but the plants suffered less from the high temperature that was maintained for several days. It is far easier to put the shade back on a few times during the season than it is to get a sticky shade off when you want it off. It does not take long to put a light shade on a house with a hand syringe if you know how to work it, and I believe this way of putting it on is better than to put on a streak down the center of the glass. A little practice and common sense will soon teach you how to work it.

Firing.

The right time to cease firing is a question that you will have to decide right soon now. Those who grow roses will have to have fire heat for some time yet and as it is no more work, and I might say no more expense, to run a line or two extra in the carnation houses, it will pay you to turn on a pipe in each house and if necessary raise the ventilators an inch or two on damp nights. When the nights are warm and the days are sunny I would rather have no fire heat at all in my carnation houses. Carnations like a cool, fresh, bracing atmosphere, and if you can have this without the aid of fire heat the plants will be much better off. Fire heat should only be used either to keep the temperature from dropping too low or from getting too damp in case of a rainy spell. When I say dropping too low I do not mean the temperature which you maintain during the winter months. During the winter when the days are short the growth is soft and the blooms are very double and a slight check caused by a lowered temperature will cause the calyx to split; but now the days are longer, the sun is stronger and the growth is better matured and not affected as easily by these little changes as it was in the winter. As the weather gets warmer the blooms come less double, too, and the danger of splitting is diminished still more. So that a drop from 80 degrees at high noon to 45 the next morning will do no harm, and no serious damage will result even if it should go down to 40 degrees, if it is not too often.

Of course the buds will not open up so fast under these conditions and possibly it would pay you well to fire up and keep the temperature up to 50 all night, and if you have to have steam up anyhow for roses or some such crop it will certainly pay you well to do so. I am speaking, however, of what is best for the health of your plants and I feel certain that if you hold your plants back just a little now while the weather is so bracing you will be taking sure steps toward cutting good blooms until well into the summer months and you will be the gainer at the end of the season. I might say that this is the last chance you will have to give your plants a breathing spell to fortify themselves against the hard spell of growing that is to come during May and the trying hot days of June. Unless Easter comes extra early we usually let our regular fireman off soon after the temperature is reduced to normal, and we get up steam only on such nights as it is needed, and it often happens that it is needed only on very few nights after that time. But don't let this cause you to be neglectful and to think that a night or two at 35 degrees will do no harm to the plants and to neglect getting up steam when it is really needed. That is where your good judgment and integrity will need to play an important part. The health of your plants comes first above all other things, and if it requires that you give up a little sleep and comfort, if you are a true gardener you will not hesitate to give it.

Be sure that you do all your watering in the forenoon so that the houses will not be damp by evening. Also be sure that you leave at least a crack of air on each house to help keep the air moving. A house standing at 40 degrees with a crack of air on is better for the plants than 44 degrees with no air at all and no fire heat.

The Young Plants.

Look over your young plants every few days and top what needs it, so that if possible every plant will be topped several days before planting out time and the young shoots may start before the roots are disturbed in transplanting. It is a great benefit to the young plants to make their first break before planting out time. They can make more growth and become better established in the field before they are checked by another topping. These little things may seem trivial, but they count in the season's work.

If it is possible the houses in which you have your young stock should be run quite cool and with lots of ventilation until you plant them out in the field. This is to harden them off a little. If you have a house filled with this stock you can easily do this. Also withhold the water just a little and they should have the full sun right along.

Experience Under Glass.

As promised last week my experience with some of the varieties I have grown under glass will be the subject this week.

My first attempt was made with Eldorado, the method consisting of potting the cuttings into 2-inch, shifting to 3-inch, cutting back perhaps once, and when well established the most shapely plants were benched, the date being about June 15. Eldorado was chosen on account of its being so liable to rust and it was thought this trouble could be held in check; it proved to be the case. Perhaps a mistake was made in shading, which we did a very little, causing the plants to spindle somewhat, but the shade being removed early the plants thickened up so that by November 1 we had a magnificent lot of plants in full bloom.

On the same bench a like number of field grown plants of same variety were benched about August 15. By Christmas there was no perceptible difference between the two lots except the field grown ones were affected with rust while the others were free from it. The only advantage gained was that those grown under glass bloomed earlier and the quality of bloom was a shade better, although not enough to materially affect the selling price.

Daybreak and Jubilee were tried the next year, followed by Mrs. Bradt.

A great many little changes were adopted during the last two years of growing under glass all summer, but after summing up the three first years' work in this direction, I concluded after taking into consideration the amount of watering, syringing, fumigation and the close attention required, that this method of culture was not practical, commercially. The experience gained us knowledge and we felt satisfied in knowing what could be done.

If some varieties of today were to be grown in like manner, the outcome might be better, but later experience has convinced me that the compromise spoken of last week is the safer course to follow. The second year Lawson was grown we potted along a batch of March struck cuttings to 3-inch, planted them out in June, giving them about four weeks in the field. The plants were small, but as an experiment we lifted them with a good ball, benched them, using no shade whatever, and I never saw carnation plants grow as did these after being housed.

This led me to believe that a further shift to 4-inch and standing them outside in a well drained place for a month or six weeks would be a step toward further improvement and it has so turned out. Lawson has been the variety with which we have done the greater part of experimental work along this line with a view of producing long stems earlier in the season than can be gotten from field grown plants.

No shade whatever is necessary, in fact it would be detrimental to the plants. When planting it is a good plan to hollow out the soil around the plants, watering only in these depressions until well established. Syringe lightly on mornings of bright days; keep the soil between the rows well broken up, thus keeping it open and sweet, at the same time destroying many weeds. On an average of once a week, give a liberal dose of Grape Dust, choosing the hottest part of the day to apply it. Provide abundant ventilation, as it is absolutely necessary to keep the air constantly changing. In my opinion Cressbrook and Mrs. Potter Palmer would be good varieties to grow in the above manner.

THE CROCUS.

Last fall I planted 8,000 crocus bulbs in a neighbor's lawn. I had them planted from two to three inches deep, making a hole with a stick and dropping in the bulbs and closing up the hole with the foot. There were not more than twenty-five that came up. I think they were planted about November 1. What is the cause of failure?

Subscriber.

I have seen crocus bulbs planted in grass plots and do very well, and again have seen them a failure, or a very small percentage grow, and the reason for that I never looked into. The crocus is the hardiest of our spring flowers. It's just possible that in making the hole for the corm with a blind stick you leave the sides very hard and compact with no encouragement for roots to be made. In that case failure might occur. I believe that when planting them in sod the corm should be surrounded with a little good earth. Then I think failure would be impossible if sound corms were planted. Excuse me for using the name "corm," but the crocus is a corm and not a bulb.

TOMATO LEAF BLIGHT.

W. C. S. asks if any one has ever had any success in fighting the leaf blight with Bordeaux mixture. He has used it for years and it does no good, and every year the blight gets worse in his section.

So far as I know the Bordeaux mixture is the only remedy that your correspondent can use, and this is really more of a preventive than a cure. Bordeaux is of no use unless spraying is commenced in time. The trouble with many growers is that they do not commence its use until the plants are badly infected with the disease, and when in this condition the fungus will grow through the Bordeaux.

Your correspondent does not give his method of culture at all, but I am inclined to believe that he sets out his plants and does not stake them up, for I have not seen the disease do much damage when the plants were properly staked and pruned. Set out the plants about 3 feet apart and drive in a stout 6-foot stake alongside, then when the first truss of fruit shows and the plant breaks naturally, take up two stems and keep all other shoots closely pinched off.

This system of growing is comparatively expensive, but the returns are more than sufficient to compensate for the additional first cost, and particularly so in a wet season. I never like the idea of having the fruit lying all over the ground. Not to speak of the fact that its gets dirty, the black rot that spoils the fruit is always much more in evidence on unsupported plants.

If your correspondent has already tried the supported method of growing and his troubles from blight are increasing I can offer him no remedy unless it be that he only tries to grow tomatoes on high dry land with a sharp slope to the south to quickly drain off the superfluous moisture. C. T.

DISEASED GERANIUMS.

I am a subscriber of your valuable paper, and write for information concerning the disease of the enclosed geranium. It begins with a small, white spot and ends as if it were bruised. I have been using diluted fir tree oil on them. Is that correct, or what shall I do, as my whole house, I am afraid, will be affected? S. D. O.

This is not the first sample of diseased geranium leaves we have seen this spring. We don't know it, but it is a fungus, sure enough, and in applying any remedy both sides of the leaves must be sprayed. I don't say that the ammoniacal copper solution will kill the fungus that is in the tissue of the plant, but it will destroy all that has come to the surface. This solution has killed the hollyhock disease, and that's about as formidable looking a fungus as attacks plants. The formula for the copper solution has been printed in your columns many times. It is harmless to any plant. William Scott.

LILY BUDS THAT ROTTED.

A Mr. D. K. writes that his lily buds after they were showing nicely began to rot and he lost almost all of them. They were potted in August and brought in after they were well rooted and kept in 45 to 50 degrees at night. Up to two months ago they looked well.

From the fact that he potted them in August they must have been the Bermuda bulbs, and I can not think of any cause that would rot or shrivel up the buds. It must have been simply a bad case of disease. We did not experience or hear of as much disease this year as formerly, but it still exists. Under such correct conditions as described above I can think of no other reason for the trouble.

HARDY FERN.

Please tell me through the Review the name of the fern of which I send a frond and spores. Also how to grow the fern from spores. Can it be done outside without other protection than shade. This is a very desirable fern for cutting, is of robust growth and as hardy as an oak. C. H. H.

The frond and spores mentioned include portions of two different ferns. The contracted or berrylike, clustered frond is the fertile frond of the Sensitive Fern —Onoclea sensibilis—which abounds in wet places. If desired to grow it the creeping rootstocks can be taken up. They stand transplanting well, but will do best in a rather moist, shady location.

The other frond which you send is a portion of a fertile frond of Dryopteris marginalis, a very fine and hardy fern.

To grow ferns of this class from the spores is a diffieult and rather uncertain task. You can proceed in this way. Prepare some fine soil and leafmold in a shallow box or pan. Float your fern spores on the top, then cover your box with a large pane of glass, set in a warm greenhouse, where it will not fall below 60 degrees. Then, if you have good luck and patience you may be rewarded by a crop of new ferns. Sometimes, fern growers say, the new crop may be an entirely different fern from the one you suppose you are sowing. The only way of getting those hardy ferns is by collecting them where they occur spontaneously. John Higgins.

TROUBLE WITH PALMS.

Please tell us the cause of the leaves of our kentias and latanias turning yellow in spots? Some of the leaves get so bad it is necessary to cut them off.

Are there two kinds of sago palms—a long leaf and a short leaf? The leaflets of the sagos turn yellow, too, and have to be clipped off. Texas.

The most likely cause of the yellow spots mentioned in this query is an attack of some species of scale insects, any of which would soon produce such an effect on the leaves of kentias and latanias. Yellow spots on the leaves may also be caused by the root action of the plants in question being defective, but naturally one could not speak positively in such a case without seeing a specimen of the affected leaves. Look on the under side of the leaves for the insects and give a careful sponging with solution of whale oil soap.

There are two forms of Cycas revoluta, the one producing much longer leaves than the other, and the difference is generally considered to be in the sex of the plants, the male and female organs in the cycas being produced upon different plants.

The leaflets of the cycas turn yellow at times from unhealthy roots, the trouble being caused by too much water before the plants are established.

A COLD ROOM.

I want to build a cold room for storing cut flowers and would like advice as to how it should be constructed. It should not be expensive as I am doing only a small retail business. Should there be any windows in the sides?

C. A. M.

The modern refrigerator or cold room (if for ice) can be constructed and made effective at a very moderate cost if utility is the sole consideration. The main object to be attained being insulation combined with a system of ventilation, which will at all times and under any conditions keep the atmosphere in the chamber from becoming unduly charged with moisture.

To properly isolate the chamber from outside atmospheric conditions, the walls to be as non-conductive as is necessary should be built somewhat after this method. In the center of the walls and between two boards of an inch thick an air space of 4 inches should be left, the boards should be paper covered, then on each side of this space another space of 4 inches each which should be filled with either charcoal, sawdust or finely sifted dry coal ashes. Asbestos wool makes the most effective job but adds considerably to the cost.

Both sides of the wall should be covered with paper and the inside finished with dressed sheathing and given an oil coating. The outside wall to be finished with German siding. The entrance door, filling door and ceiling should be constructed on the same isolating principle. The ceiling should if possible be ten feet high, so that the ice rack may be removed sufficiently far from the blooms, so that the cold air descending from the ice may be qualified by the air in the chamber before coming in direct contact with them.

The rack should be made of 2x4 dressed scantling, running lengthwise of the chamber and should have a slight decline from the filling door to facilitate filling. A zinc lined drip pan should be hung a few inches below the ice rack and have a pipe attached to carry the water outside the chamber, as the less water exposed so much easier can the temperature be regulated.

The system of ventilation which we adopted when building our last cold room has served the purpose so well that I do not hesitate to recommend it. Along the sides of the chamber and on the floor line holes a foot square should be left at spaces of four or five feet apart; these allow the vitiated air to escape, and holes of a corresponding size and shape should be left quite close to the ceiling for the admission of fresh air. These holes should have closely fitted doors on both the outside and inside of the walls, and be so constructed that they can be easily opened and shut. These openings give all the light we find necessary to fix the keeping qualities of the cut. Ribes.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

should now be well under way and while there is plenty of time to propagate the tall growers such as Eaton, it is well to get all the dwarf varieties and the early sorts into the sand as soon as possible. Don't forget this year to include in your list of earlies Mrs. Coombes, Lady Harriet and Alice Byron. They are fine for cutting from October 10th onward. The first two varieties are pink, Byron is a white and with Halliday as a yellow you will very possibly make more money than if you grew either earlier or later varieties.

There is generally a time about the end of the second week in October that a killing frost cuts off everything outside, and then there is a big demand for flowers for a few days, with nothing but mums to fill it.

This frost and consequent demand did not occur last year and the early varieties were anything but profitable, but one is generally safe in predicting frost by October 15th, when the varieties I have mentioned will be in their glory. That is why I think they will be more profitable than the earlier ones, which are competing with late asters and dahlias.

It is now at propagating time that the grower should look ahead and figure on the harvest. The margin of profit in chrysanthemum growing is so small nowadays that one can not afford to put in any old variety and trust to luck in marketing the product. Use your best judgment in the selection of your varieties and don't be afraid to drop any variety that for any reason does not bring in what it should.

Potting Up Young Stock.

For the first potting, when you get your cuttings rooted, don't make the mistake of many young enthusiasts and mix bone meal or sheep manure with your soil. I have often seen it tried and invariably with poor results. What the roots need to commence on is simply a new fibry loam, with a little, a very little, well rotted manure mixed through it to lighten it up a little. A young delicate plant does not have the digestion, if one may use such a term, to take up strong nourishment at so early a stage of its development any more than an infant can digest beefsteak. If bone meal is mixed with soil for a first potting it will sour the compost before the roots get a good hold of it and a weak spindly plant is the result.

Cold Frames.

Stock that was rooted early and is now nicely established in pots or flats, will be very much benefited by being got outside into cold frames, where they will be away from any artificial heat and where when the sash are thrown back on mild days, they will receive the benefit of an abundance of air. The cold frames are generally considered a nuisance on a commercial establishment, by the help anyway, as they need considerable attention in the matter of ventilating, and on cold nights they have to be covered to keep out frost, but there is no finer place in the spring for all kinds of young plants that need hardening off, and particularly is this true in the case of the mum. In a greenhouse, no matter how much air is kept on night and day, it seems impossible to get that close, sturdy growth that a young plant will acquire in a week or two outside in a frame. Plants are more easily handled in a house when they are near to the hose, and this on bright drying days is a consideration, but if you want to make a good beginning in growing good chrysanthemums, get your plants out into a frame and don't begrudge a little more time spent in looking after them.

Use a little common sense in regard to airing at first. If as often happens at this season of the year, a very strong wind is blowing, with bright sun, it is best to merely tilt the sash up a little at the back, and not let the breeze blow full on the plants or they will need watering every hour or so to keep them moist. On calm days lift the sash right off and the young plants will positively revel in the cool natural conditions and will show in a few days by the gloss on their foliage how they appreciate such treatment.

Exhibition growers, who watch their plants very closely from the time the cutting is inserted into the sand until the flower is cut, are fully alive to the necessity of building up a foundation in the plant, and it would be a wise thing for the commercial man to look after his young stock more closely than he does. The young stock that one buys sometimes looks as though it had been grown in a stove temperature, judging by its attenuated growth.

Labeling and Handling.

In handling a large number of varieties it is imperative that some uniform system of labeling should prevail. It is of course child's play to an expert to pick out the varieties by their foliage and general appearance, but the average florist is by no means a mum expert. He has many other things on his mind, such as hustling his collections, trying to fill the weekly pay envelope, making up a gates ajar or standing off the coal dealer who is trying to collect his bill, and it will be the means of saving much trouble and profanity if the labels are always placed to run the same way. My own invariable rule is to work from the back to the front of the bench in placing my plants, then put the label in the last plant of the variety and then follow right on with another kind. By making this an invariable rule and keeping the row straight, mixing up of the varieties is impossible and any employe can be sent during a rush to pick out any desired variety. Of course it works as well to put the label in the first plant of the batch, or any other way in fact, so long as one has an invariable system and adheres to it.

Buds.

If any of the varieties are running to buds instead of commencing to grow, don't be discouraged. Keep the buds picked off and you will eventually make the plant begin to grow. Some varieties are much worse for this bud producing in the spring than others. Morel for instance, and I notice that W. R. Church, one of the novelties, seems afflicted with the same trouble, but if the stock is handled properly it will soon grow out of it.

UNION GARDENERS.

A few cities (Buffalo among them) have been visited by some walking delegates, who have visited the park department and several of the largest florists' establishments with a view to forming a union of florists or gardeners—a branch of the "Federation of Labor." I expected to live to see some strange things before I passed in, such as the wireless telegraphy, the flying machine, and the amalgamation of the auxiliary florists' societies with the parent society, and when we can feel that we are a step nearer to the time that "We'l brithers be for a' that," but I really never expected that anyone would endeavor to pull the workmen of our business down to the slavery of trade unionism.

The question of trade unions vs. employer, corporation or capital, is too momentous a problem, and I should not dare to even assume an opinion. In some lines of industry organized labor may have helped the wage earner; some employees are unreasonable; some employers and corporations are soulless and grinding, but that's another story. Some mechanical trades, like bricklaying or house painting, may be adjusted on a uniform rate per day or hour, because the foreman can tell quickly whether the workman is doing his share. In the mechanical trades I am in favor of short hours, because if work is scarce it enables more to share in it, but not to be allowed to work overtime, as some unions dictate, is barbarous.

This great subject that is agitating the world may to the political economist and sociologist have many abstruse questions connected with it. To a simple mind like mine, if two men are looking for one man's work, there will be competition between the men, who will work cheap. If there is only one man for two men's work, then the highest bidder gets the man and times are good. So labor is like potatoes; its price is ruled by the law of supply and demand. Don't many of us remember the black times of 1873 and the year that followed? In May, '73, any man who could handle a shovel was paid $1.87; carpenters, $3; bricklayers, $3.50; and other trades in proportion. In six months from that and for five years afterward you could get all the laboring men you wanted for $1 a day. Carpenters (good ones) worked for $1.25, and only about half of them willing to work could find employment. May those times never come again, but if they should, could labor unions keep up wages? Never! Self preservation would assert itself and men would work for what they could get and unions would dissolve and evaporate.

A labor union among the men in greenhouses is absurd and cannot possibly exist. Only the discontented and incompetent would encourage or join it. As well a trade union among preachers and artists. The help in a greenhouse, even among those willing to be called gardener or florist, may be with a weekly wage all the way from $10 to $25 a week. The writer has always wanted to see our helpers earn good wages, and claimed that a young man who can pot, tie, water, and set plants neatly, and has not to be told when to put on or take off ventilation intelligently, has to exercise more brains and be as dexterous with his hands as many mechanics who get larger wages. I want to see the business elevated all along the line and to have intelligent, neatly dressed, satisfied workmen is one essential part of the elevating process, but to pay all alike, or anywhere near the same, is impossible and ridiculous. Some men may be quite expert at potting and shifting plants and that's all they know. They do not even know by name half the plants you grow, much less know their requirements. They will pass and repass a plant that is suffering for want of water, or perspire in a house because they have not thought enough to put on air. They are simply mechanical workmen. Are they to get the same pay as the man who is ever watchful, delights in the plants under his care, studies how to grow them the best he can learn, notes the temperature and passing cloud, and can do all the other man can do in the bargain and many a thing besides?

I believe Dr. Johnson's definition of a gardener is "A man who works in a garden," but many of us know that when we spoke of a gardener forty years ago we meant a man who could grow anything from a carrot to a cattleya, force fruits and flowers, and conduct and execute all the operations that would be found on a private garden of large extent. And there are a few of these men on this side of the Atlantic, and as our millionaires acquire a taste and pride in a beautiful garden, such men will be wanted more and more. Our commercial horticultural training is, however, not of the sort that equips men for such a charge. To be a specialist is the order of the day. That is a natural evolution of the business and is a sure mark of its growth. The wages of the working gardener (for growing a primrose is gardening) must be controlled by his ability, character and faithfulness. The industrious student of his business must rise. I have seen them rise all around me. He will seldom have to ask for a raise; it will come to him. If not by an appreciative employer, then for sure by some one else who has had his eye on him. The drone who watches the clock and dreams of trades unions will remain at the potting bench until old age, and in dull times is the first to be "released." No trade union to degrade our profession, if you please.

FERNS.

[Lecture given by N. Butterbach before the Monmouth County Horticultural Society, Oceanic, N. J., March 6, 1903.]

In my lecture on ferns it is my intention to speak about those varieties the most used by private gardeners and commercial florists. Fashion has made a great change in the growing of ferns during the last fifteen or twenty years, and where collections were grown formerly, now only a few varieties are grown for the decoration of dinner tables and for other floral work in connection with cut flowers. Fashion has not only revolutionized the culture of ferns; it has changed the cultnre and collections of other plants also, and on private places, where most of those collections were raised, cut flowers are grown instead.

For decorative purposes no other family of plants can be compared with ferns, on account of their variation of color and the form of their foliage. Ferns are indispensable as plants or cut flowers for decorative or floral work, on account of their diversity and adaptability in arrangement. In the earlier days our botanists supposed that ferns had flowers and seeds as any other plant. Every gardener today knows that those little brown dots are not seeds, but minute bnd ferns.

Considerable care is required in raising ferns from spores, as those little brown dots are called. A shallow pan half filled with pieces of broken pot, or, better still, mortar from an old wall and filled to within one-half inch from the top with fine sifted soil, which should be scalded with boiling water and drained before the spores are sown, to kill the germs of fungus, moss or insects detrimental to the growth of young ferns, and the spores scattered over the surface without covering them with soil. A pane of glass should be put over the pan and the latter should be placed in a saucer of water, which will keep the soil sufficiently moist. Keep them well shaded until the spores are visible as minute plants.

The process of fern growth and their function are different from any other plant. When the spores are sown they open and form little flat, green membranes, and in these membranes the real flowers develop, and all the processes of common flowering plants are carried out. The germinating green plate is called a prothallium, and the stamen as in a flowering plant is called the antheridium, while the pistil is the archegonium. The difference is that in flowering plants, after fertilization the germ develops into seed, whereas in ferns the germ commences to grow at once into a little plant, and this has some bearing on the raising of new varieties by sowing different forms and species together. The chance of getting new varieties by intermixing is not very great, but it is the only way to get any at all, except perhaps a chance seedling.

In selecting the spores, care should be taken to select them from that portion of the plant which is the most desired. For instance, if a crested form is desired, the spores of the crested part of the plant should be taken, and the certainty of getting crested seedlings is much increased. The minute plants should be taken up in small patches and pricked off carefully, and when they are established and fit to be handled they should be divided and potted off singly. Plants that have several crowns, or have creeping rhizomes, are easily increased by division. Some species produce small bulbs along or at the end of the frond. If these are removed and placed on soil they form plants.

A preparation of soil which suits almost all ferns is a mixture of two parts of good loam, one part of sharp sand, and one part of leaf mold. The latter is indispensable in raising ferns to perfection. If the soil does not contain sufficient lime a sprinkling of same will be found very beneficial. Repotting of ferns should not be overdone, as it is known that the most luxuriant growth is made when the inside surface of the pot is covered with a network of roots. Ferns like moisture, and the absence of moisture is shown by the shriveling of the old fronds. In herbaceous plants, or plants with woody texture, the young growth wilts first. If the latter has been kept too dry the ball can be soaked and the plant will recover, but with ferns it is quite different, as this treatment seldom has any effect on ferns, with the exception of a few varieties.

Repotting can be safely performed at any time of the year, but the best times are in the stove house in February and in the cool house in March. In any case it is best to repot them before they start to make young growth. The pots should be clean and dry, for as in any other case the rootlets will stick to the sides of the pot, and if they require repotting again they will suffer greatly, as it will be found impossible to remove them from the old pot without breaking a quantity of live roots. New pots will absorb a great quantity of water, and therefore they should be soaked in water and dried again, as the first and second watering would otherwise be absorbed by the pot and the ball become dry to the detriment of the plant. Although ferns need moisture at all times of the year, drainage is most important. In their natural state most ferns grow in a partly decayed vegetable matter of a soft texture, therefore they should be potted firmly but not hard.

Moisture, proper atmosphere and temperature are the most essential; the soil is only of secondary consideration. The ventilation should be so managed that the plants are not in a direct draught, but a close, stuffy atmosphere is more injurious than an excess of ventilation, and more so in the stove house. A fern house should, whenever possible, be built from north to south and the plants shaded from the strong rays of the sun, although all the natural light possible should be retained. Blinds of unbleached muslin fastened on the inside under the roof of the house we have found the best for this purpose.

One of the most useful and a very old favorite is Adiantum cuneatum. It is of easier culture than almost any other fern and adapts itself to almost any soil and situation. If it is kept moist at the roots it will produce an abundance of fronds the whole year around. It is generally raised from spores, but can also be easily propagated by division of the crowns. A. c. gracillimum is a variation from the above and is one of the most elegant ferns. The fronds attain a height of from one and one-half to two feet and are densely tufted. This variety is reproduced true from the spores and is of very easy culture. A. formosum is a strong, handsome greenhouse species and attains a very large size. It is very useful for house decoration and is also easy of culture. It succeeds well in greenhouse temperature, but if cultivated in stove heat the fronds become much larger and the plant will make a fine specimen. It is raised from spores and by division of the rhizomes. A. Ghiesbrechtii (or scutum) is supposed to be a variety of A. tenerum. It makes a beautiful plant for decorative and exhibition purposes.

A. Peruvianum is one of the most ornamental stove species of the large growing adiantums. Its graceful fronds are borne on long, wiry stalks of from twelve to eighteen inches and its fronds are from two to three feet long.

A. tenerum is a stove species of elegant habit and very large dimensions. It grows wild in Florida on the river banks and its fronds grow from two to three feet in length. If sufficient room is allowed to it, it makes grand exhibition specimens. A. cuneatum grandiceps is highly decorative and robust. It has densely tufted crowns and the fronds are more elongated than those of cuneatum; its branches are smaller, and the fronds have an arching habit, which makes it suitable for hanging baskets.

A. caudatum is a stove species different from the majority of adiantums and very useful for baskets. If suspended its fronds can be seen drooping two or three feet. A. capillus—veneris imbricatum is the handsomest of the capillus—veneris varieties. The fronds are borne on slender stalks, pendulous, and from eight to ten inches long. The appearance of the plant is that of A. Farleyense, but of dwarfish habit. It is classified as a cool-house fern, but with us it does best with greenhouse treatment. Its graceful cut fronds are used for dinner table decorations and the plant makes a first-class house fern.

A. Farleyense, undoubtedly the handsomest of the whole genus, has attained such a degree of popularity that however completely we would describe it we would fail to do it justice. It is supposed to be a natural sport of A. tenerum. But whatever it may be, it shows the gardener's skill and draws attention wherever it is exhibited. Its fronds are gracefully drooping, and I have seen them grown at Florham Farms, Madison, N. J., with fronds two and one-half to three feet in length, and the pinnules or leaflets one and one-half inches broad, and they were grown entirely in pure fibrous loam. They require a temperature of from 70 to 75 degrees at night and plenty of moisture. Attempts have been made to raise them from spores, but without success, consequently they are propagated by division of the crown.

A very useful fern for decorations and a very good house plant is Cibotium Scheidei. Although an arborescent fern, its trunk never attains a height of over two or three feet when artificially grown. It is of free growth and its fronds are elegantly drooping and measure sometimes from six to eight feet.

In closing we must not forget to say a good word for a genus of ferns that needs a space in every greenhouse, however small it may be, and that is the nephrolepis. It is valuable as a house plant, for decorations, rock work, and baskets. It is most tenacious of life and will stand treatment that no other fern would stand.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The dispenser of weather has endeared himself to all florists here in the brand he provided for the Easter celebration, but as an evidence of what might have been, nearly all of the week following the great festival was the most disagreeable of the year. Even the equinoxial storms did not compare with these in fury. Nevertheless the business of the past week was fairly satisfactory and to many of the retailers away beyond the average of the month, owing to the increase in after-Lent weddings and festivities.

The shipments of American Beauty roses continued in excess of the demand, however, and seldom was the price raised above 15 cents for the best of them. Carnations and violets have been strong all through the week owing to scarcity, and in the matter of violets deterioration in quality. Another week will record the passing of the violet. For good stock $1 per 100 has been the figure since Easter.

Wm. Plumb has comfortably located in his new growing establishment at Madison and has received his credentials as one of that great fraternity—"the Madison rose growers." We shall look for a new rose within a year from this source, for Mr. Plumb is like the Chicago frog—a hustler.

Fred C. Chadborn, of Newburg, president of the Chadborn Mfg. Co., was in the city on Monday. He reports the big new factory already building and an abundance of contracts for the season.

The new Florists' Board of Trade is making progress under President Hayden's personal supervision, and deserves the confidence and patronage of the trade generally. Mr. Hayden is a gentleman of great experience and of unblemished reputation. With anything like fair co-operation he will make the financial reports and work of this institution a necessity.

The great Vanderbilt-Nielson wedding at Newport last week was a success from the practical standpoint of the florist. Wadley & Smythe have certainly made a good "opening" of their season there. A "carte blanche" order is a picnic even if it takes thirty men and three carloads of flowers to do the business.

It was a "white wedding," for, with the single exception of American Beauties, white was the color employed, white roses, lily of the valley, white orchids and Easter lilies being most in evidence. The bride's bouquet was of white orchids, stephanotis and orange blossoms; the bridesmaids' of white lilacs. The groom and his assistants wore gardenias.

In the main hall an antique chapel was constructed of palms, Bride roses, orchids and valley, an excellent imitation. The ceiling of the chapel was covered with orchids and stephanotis; the walls were banks of lily of the valley. The balcony and staircase were completely hidden by Easter lilies, thousands of them being used in constructing the terrace. Altogether it was considered the most elaborate floral decoration ever seen at this great center of fashion and society.

David Clarke's Sons have been very busy since Easter. Last week three weddings in one day and three similar engagements booked for the present week. This firm decorated nine large churches on Easter Sunday.

Mrs. Warendorff at the Ansonia has recovered from a serious illness and is much pleased with the Easter business of her store. She received the order for the floral work at the funeral of Mrs. Fitzsimmons, amounting to nearly $500.

The corner of Thirty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, where Siebrecht & Son have held the fort for twenty-seven years, has been sold to Tiffany & Co. for $2,000,000. This was by all odds the finest corner in New York for the retail cut flower business, and only a few months ago the firm had completed their fine conservatory and greenhouses here. Fortunately the lease reimburses the firm for all these improvements, and it may be some time before a move further up the avenue may be necessary.

Theo. Lang, captain of the New York Bowling Club that was, is one of the leaders in the city tournament and keeps his arm in shape for effective work at Milwaukee. New York will surely be represented by a good, strong team there..

Preparations for the New York club's "outing" are about complete, and July 1 promises to be a record day in attendance and athletics. Prizes for every known legitimate sport are offered by the club members most liberally.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market

We have been having a wonderfully buoyant market for this season of the year. Everything that is pretty for weddings is eagerly sought. Valley is actually scarce, telegraphic and telephonic orders to the growers being frequent. Sweet peas are also rushed. White is in high favor, though all colors are in demand. The better grades of roses are taken at good prices; the poorer go slowly. Brides are in great demand. Fine Kaiserins can now be had. Jacques are excellent. Carnations sold well last week. This week the supply is much heavier, while the demand is not so strong. Good judges expect lower prices soon. Yellow daisies are popular. Easter lilies have sold almost as well since Easter as before, the weddings using up all the fine, long stemmed flowers. Violets are nearly over. Daffodils are good stock now, the southern shipments being pretty well over. Greens are in good demand, with supply about sufficient.

Fire Insurance.

John Burton has sent out cards to the growers, asking their reply to two questions: "First. Number of square feet of glass operated? Second. Has a fire occurred during the past ten years? If so, amount of loss?" His idea is to present facts to the insurance companies which will force them to reduce the present absurdly high rates. The move is a splendid one. Every grower should respond at once.

Gardenias.

The novelty of the Easter cut flower market was the gardenia. They were fine and could be had in quantity on long stems covered with foliage. S. S. Pennock sold a thousand of these large, fragrant, pure white blossoms. How many Edward Reid and the Flower Market handled I do not know. The best brought $2 a dozen. The feeling seemed to be that, although a very fine thing, the price was a good one for the season. This opinion was not shared by the growers who produced the flowers. To them it was simply a case of covering a loss.

There is an interesting story connected with the production of these gardenias, which, though not new, has just come out. The "street" has it now, so it can no longer be regarded as a secret. It seems that it was known some years ago that a dozen or more Philadelphians greatly preferred the gardenia boutonniere, would in fact wear no other on certain occasions of festivity. This idea originated in England, where the gardenia flourishes. The English social season comes at a time when these flowers naturally bloom. Our own social season comes at a time when they naturally rest. The select coterie of Philadelphians didn't care for this little fact; they wanted gardenias anyhow and were willing to pay for them. A few could be had occasionally, chiefly from Long Island, but the supply was uncertain. They were easily bruised and very expensive.

Here was an opportunity for Philadelphia enterprise. What matter if the flowers were wanted out of season; other flowers had yielded to cultural skill, why should not the gardenia? It was understood that the stock was wanted from Christmas, or a trifle earlier, until Lent, and that really choice flowers might be expected to bring $1 each or thereabout, only it must be remembered that the demand was limited; it might easily be overdone. First one grower tried, then another. Robert Craig & Son tried; William K. Harris tried; Robert Scott & Son tried. It was said that William Kleinheinz, of Ogontz, tried. I do not know whether this be true. I do know that Phil tried. It is a melancholy fact that despite all this effort the gardenia was just as scarce here as ever until the fag end of the season. Different methods have been tried by different growers. Some had G. florida, some G. Fortunei; possibly some had other varieties. Some had them in pots, some planted out. All grew like weeds during the summer and set their buds nicely. Upon the advent of winter weather, when everything seemed brightest for a good crop, trouble began. It usually came when the grower noticed that his plants were standing, the buds no farther forward than the week before. A little gentle pushing was tried, and then, alas, buds, or foliage, or both fell with bright hopes. I have such confidence in the skill and pluck of our growers that I am certain that in a year or two at farthest we shall have gardenias in the season as well as out of it.

Notes.

Myers & Samtman are cutting heavily from their Beauties and Edgelys.

Leo Niessen has the daffodil market pretty much to himself just now. He is handling a great many pansies.

Joseph Bevis is sending in some Brides and Maids equal to anything ever seen in this city at this season.

William J. Baker is receiving some superb Brides which have earned an enviable reputation. He had an order for 400 one day lately. Adiantum cuneatum is of good quality with his growers.

John Liveared, formerly with David Anderson, is now with George Waterfield, of Wyndmoor, as rose grower.

Edward Reid is sweet pea king. He had two orders this week for white which looked well. They aggregated 3,500 blooms.

A strike has been on for over a week among the employees of the Laurel Hill Cemetery Co. The men want more pay—25 cents a day more. The company will give it to the good men, but not to the indifferent workers. So all are out and the outside gardeners are getting a lot of work in the cemetery.

Samuel S. Pennock had one order for 2,500 valley this week.

J. L. Dillon, of Bloomsburg, has been in town for several days lately.

John and W. H. Westcott sent some fine, long-stemmed lilies into town lately.

Eugene Bernheimer's fine Jaeqeminots are finding a ready market.

Easter Trade.

Easter opened with a hard snowstorm in progress and many a lady had tears in her eyes when she looked upon the raging storm, and even some of the male sex were not far behind, for our esteemed A. J. Graham, superintendent of City Park, had laid himself out for Easter with everything spick and span new; but alas! he wore the old ones instead. Notwithstanding the storm Easter trade was up to if not ahead of previous years, with quality of stuff good, both plants and flowers. Whatever surplus we had was due to the storm.

Plants seemed to take the lead though large Ramblers and azaleas went slow, quite a lot of elegant ones being left over. Good baskets of assorted plants well filled sold well. Bulbous stuff at stiff prices, but went slow with exception of pans of tulips. Supply of lilies short on account of disease; sold at 25 cents per flower. Stock sold out early. One of the neatest and best sellers was violets in 5 and 6-inch pots, well filled with bloom also 5-inch heliotropes with purple trimmings went fast at 75 cents. Spirea was good. Lilacs, deutzias, etc., were firm, but went slow.

In cut flowers the prices were: Beauties, $4 to $15, with the call for $10; Brides and Maids, $1 to $4, call for $2; Chatenay (fine), $5; Liberty, $1.50 to $6; violets (fast), at $2 per hundred; carnations, 75 cents to $1; sweet peas, $2 to $3 per hundred; lily of valley, $1; tulips, 75 cents to $1.

The decorations were confined to the churches, and while fine there was nothing particularly worth mentioning.

Items.

Mrs. Mauff is building four large houses in one for Beauties at her wholesale place in Harmon.

Phil Scott of the Park Floral Co. says he only put in thirty-six hours at one stretch. Charles F. Fawcett has taken a position with the Colfax Avenue Floral Company. F. X. Wolf, who has been in the East for quite a while, is back again at his old position with the Colfax.

We are glad to see the smiling countenance of Ed Emerich, who was with the Gallup Floral Co. to help them out for Easter, but am sorry to say that Ed has kind of gone back on the florists, as he spends the most of his time in the mountains, where he makes his $6 per day. Can't blame him.

That veteran globe-trotter, E. Flohr, passed through Denver from California to Chicago, and as this is his seventeenth trip back and forth from the Western coast he can well be called the veteran globe-trotter.

Sam Lundin is again with the Park Floral. Sam has had very hard luck, having lost his wife, who left a pair of the prettiest twins in the world to look after.

THORNE.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Easter has come and gone and the worried looks are all changed to glad smiles. We had perfect weather Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and the Monday after to get things in shape again for the regular routine. There was a good supply of almost everything except violets and red roses. The latter are always scarce here. The scarcity of violets made quite a number of hundreds of dollars worth of difference in the result. However, there were more blooming plants sold than ever before, and that made up somewhat. All of the retail stores were crowded with beautiful plants and never before were so many sold and at such good prices. Saturday evening it was hard to find a good lily plant down town. The delivery is a great drawback. You have to cover all points of the compass at the same time, and plants are so fragile that you are liable to have to cover the same ground twice. There wasn't any surplus of cut stuff, but enough to go around. As usual there was lots of funeral work with the rush.

O'Connor and George C. Kelly held their annual opening receptions Palm Sunday at their greenhouses, which are located on the aristocratic East Side. They both had great, grand shows and were well patronized.

T. J. Johnston was fortunate to get an empty store next door to his, and it helped out wonderfully. His business was correspondingly large. Mrs. Bellows, formerly of the Boston store "department" is in his employ now.

Most of the leading retailers advertised Easter stock in the daily papers. Business since Easter has continued to boom. We were called on for stock for two great weddings occurring in the southern part of the state this week.

Peter Byrnes, of Wickford, has the Hannan-Smith wedding, at Narragansett Pier, Wednesday. Miss Farrington has the Pierce-Nightingale wedding here on Wednesday.

I had the pleasure of visiting the plant of J. A. Budlong & Sons in company with W. R. Pierson and S. J. Reuter. It is a wonderfully interesting place and must be seen to be appreciated.

Rennie & Pino, seedsmen, are in the midst of their rush and report an increase up to date.

Dave McCoid reports a scarcity of good outdoor help this season.

E. J. Johnston has added a new horse to his string.

J. F. Wood's father-in-law, a highly respected citizen, died Easter Saturday.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There was quite a falling off in business the past week among the retail men, though the plant men were quite busy and are making great preparations for a rush in their line.

Harrisii and longiflorum are now overplentiful and the price has dropped to $10 for the Harrisii and $15 for the longiflorum. All three houses have loads of them just now.

Valley is in overstock and $3 is about the best price for it. Other bulbous stock is also moving slowly, except Dutch hyacinths, which sell well.

Sweet peas are in fine and plenty for the demand. White sell the best.

The rose market is in good supply with plenty of long and short Beauties and extra fine Brides, Maids and Meteors. There are a great number of big weddings looked for within the next two weeks, which should relieve the market considerably of its oversupply.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The April meeting of the Florists' Club was held in Belleville Ill., on invitation of Mayor Halstedt, to which fifteen members responded. The meeting was held in the Council Chamber in the City Hall. The room was handsomely decorated for the occasion. The roses on exhibition were not many, but choice. The St. Clair Floral Co., of which the mayor is the head, exhibited a fine vase of Kaiserin roses for competition, also an elegant vase of Queen of Edgely roses, and a vase each of Crane, Marquis, and Bon Homme Richard carnations.

Frank Fillmore showed a vase of his big four roses, Brides, Maids, Wootton and Perles; Emil Schray, a vase of well-grown mixed roses. R. F. Tesson's roses came too late for exhibition. Mr C. C. Sanders sent an elegant box of fine double fringed petunias, which were much admired.

The meeting opened at 2:30 p. m. with President Dunford in the chair. Mayor Halstedt welcomed the members to the city. He said he would not address them as an executive officer, but as a life-long member of the club and as a florist, and hoped the members would come over often, as he always kept open house, and especially to a florist.

The entertainment committee reported that everything was in readiness for the entertainment of the Chicago brothers at any time they might come.

Two new members were elected, D. R. McAnnaly and Walter Gilles.

The president appointed Messrs. Koenig, Ellis and Guy to pass on the roses on exhibition, who reported that the vase of Kaiserins had won first prize of $5; Frank Fillmore second prize of $3, and Emil Schray came in for third prize of $2; the vase of Queen of Edgely, worthy of mention; the carnations by the St. Clair Floral Co. as good, clean flowers, and the petunias, by C. C. Sanders, as an extra fine assortment.

None of the members was ready with his essay, all having been too busy to prepare them. The essay for the next meeting in May is by F. J. Fillmore on "Hard and Soft Coal Heating."

After a number of questions from the box were disposed of the meeting adjourned to the bowling alleys, where an elegant lunch was spread, and after supplying the inner man speeches were made. President Dunford spoke on "The Florists' Club and Its Attendance," and Mr. Carew Sanders on "Once a Florist, Always a Florist." Mayor Halstedt also spoke along these lines.

After this two teams were made up and bowled one game. F. M. Ellis captained team No. 1 and J. J. Beneke team No. 2, Beneke's team winning by 150 pins. The teams were made up as follows:

Team No. 1.	Team No. 2.
Frank M. Ellis, Capt.	J. J. Beneke, Capt.
E. W. Guy.	Emil Schray.
J. W. Dunford.	F. J. Fillmore.
Richard Frow.	C. J. Juengel.
Mayor Halstedt.	F. B. Call.

After the game everybody went home happy and well pleased with the afternoon's entertainment.

Chicago Bowlers.

The Chicago boys, seven in number, paid us a visit on Saturday. Three, who acted as an advance guard, arrived on Saturday morning. They were Geo. Asmus, Charles Balluff and Leonard Kill. These three spent a pleasant day in different parts of the city, and on Sunday morning the men were reinforced by Phil Hauswirth, George Stollery, big Ed Winterson and Fritz Bahr. After breakfast at Hotel Rozier they visited the wholesale houses to renew old acquaintances. After this the boys were taken to the World's Fair Grounds. At this place the visitors were much amazed at the size of the buildings and the progress made. Ed Winterson and Fritz Bahr bought the first souvenir sold on the grounds. The return trip to the city was through the residence part, which was much enjoyed.

After refreshments the party started for the bowling alleys, where the two teams lined up for three games, in which the Chicago team won all three games, and the scores below will show how the games were won.

After the bowling supper was served at Toney Faust's, after which the boys were taken through the business part of the city, and when the Union Station was reached it was almost train time. All were much pleased with their visit, and, as Ed Winterson said, those who did not come missed the best time of their lives. The funniest part of the evening's entertainment, and what puzzled the boys most was: What did Balluff leave and Winterson take back home with him?

Among the florists outside of the bowlers who were present were S. S. Skidelsky, F. C. Weber, C. J. Juengel, F. J. Fillmore, Otto Koenig, F. M. Ellis, A. G. Fehr, Fritz Bahr, Leonard Kill and Herman Weber.

Notes.

A. S. Halstedt, of the St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, has bought the Hueke place and will grow Beauties and carnations for this market. This, with the company's other place, will enable it to send in a large amount of cut blooms next fall. Mr. Halstedt and his son Chester left for Chicago Friday noon to spend a few days with the craft of that city and buy cuttings.

F. J. Ammann is a candidate for mayor of Edwardsville, and as Fred is very popular with the people of that city, his election is already assured. Our best wishes are with him.

W. J. Pilcher, one of our best violet growers, has bought the Berdan place at Kirkwood. Mr. Pilcher will rebuild the old houses and build a few new, modern houses to grow carnations for our market next fall.

Mr. J. F. Windt, the Bayard avenue florist, who has been sick the past two weeks, is reported to be improving. Rudolph, Mr. Windt's son, reports a very busy Easter. Although short handed, he got through nicely.

Henry Emmons, of Belleville, is much improved. Mr. Emmons has been laid up nearly all winter with a bad case of rheumatism.

Robert F. Tesson has bought a tract of land half way between East St. Louis and Belleville, on which he will build a range of houses to grow roses for this market. Mr. Tesson is contemplating a trip to Europe soon, and in that case he will not be able to attend the convention next August.

BUFFALO.

Most always we expect a rather quiet week following Easter. The use of flowers has been so profuse that even we, whose business it is to promote their sale, are indifferent to their charms for a few days. This, however, has not been the case the past week, and in spite of four days of dreary, wet weather business was very good.

I have heard from other florists about the Easter trade and later communications are of the same tenor, viz., that it was a most satisfactory Easter. Byrnes & Slattery say, "Far beyond our expectations, and you know it's only our first Easter." W. J. Palmer said, "We could not ask for more." Joseph Rebstock said, "Sold clean out. I feel good. What are you going to have?" "I have not irrigated for a long time, View in the Store of Thos. Young, New York, at Easter.

Joe, but thank you; I will take a 35-cent cigar." S. A. Anderson said, "It was the greatest Easter we ever had and from accurate tabulation twenty-five per cent ahead of last year." And on the East Side and West Side they all have the same story to tell. In the far up Main street in the beautiful residence district of Central Park that was cow pastures and turnip fields a few years ago, Mr. Foss, who is on the corner of Main and Amherst, reports a great sale. And in the center of the city, Cold Springs district, the business was superfine. The glory and labor of it we have realized, and part of the proceeds, but the full appreciation of our great expectations will come along in the early days of May, we hope.

The florist who combines with his business the making of gardens, planting vines and shrubs, sowing a grass plot, etc., work that can not be dignified by calling it landscape gardening and yet is in that line, is very, very busy. The good taste to have their homes embellished on the exterior as well as in the interior pervades all classes and makes the appearance of the resident portion of the city more and more beautiful. A Clematis paniculata and Hall's honeysuckle are seen on many a modern veranda, and a spirea, cyclamen, or forsythia in every little front yard. What a pity in this country of magnificent distances that even the small wage earner has to live in a tenement house or in rows of little brick houses jammed together for a mile in length, where the blistering sidewalk is the front yard and a dreary sand or clay plot the garden. Value of land is the excuse. The trolley car annihilates distance and affords better scenery than a dirty street and your neighbor's wash.

All kinds of flowers are plentiful, and all we are waiting for is the young couples to get together in holy matrimony and have May and June weddings. Of course, I don't mean the same parties for both months, because this is the state of New York and not Illinois or Indiana. Every state has its own peculiar institutions. Kentucky is the only state where people are born with titles. W. S.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The cut flower business since Easter has been very active. The supply of almost everything has been sufficient to meet the demand, except on carnations which are especially short.

A tremendous amount of Maids, Brides, and Kaiserins are arriving, of which the quality is very good. The demand for roses the past week was very small. In order to move them they were offered as low as $25 per 1,000 for fine stock. About the only good flowers in Beauties are the extra long-stemmed ones. The medium and short Beauties still come crippled. The average price on fine Beauties is $3 to $4 per dozen. The prices on choice and fancy carnations are held up from $4 to $6 per 100.

Bulbous stock is about done for with us, for this season.

Lilies are abundant and selling slowly. I hear of some large sales as low as $60 per 1,000.

Sweet peas are very fine and enough arriving to meet the demand; from 50 cents to $1.25 is the price.

Violets are very scarce and the ones arriving are sold quickly.

In greens there is plenty of Asparagus Sprengeri, but smilax is scarce.

Burki is cutting some exceptionally good Liberty and Kaiserin roses, at his Bellevue place.

Theo. Beckert is sending the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. yellow, white and purple Spanish iris.

Easter Flower Shows.

Chas. T. Siebert's flower show in the Liberty market, Saturday before Easter, proved to be a grand success. The place was visited by at least 10,000 people. Mr. Ernest Zieger said that business was enormous and away ahead of last year's Easter business.

Ernest Ludwig and G. & J. W. Ludwig's shows in the Allegheny market were the finest displays ever made. The business of these two firms was the largest in the history of their business. From early morning until late at night great crowds of buyers jostled one another in their eagerness to get the best of the stock.

Notes.

J. H. Orth has moved to a new and larger store room, at 522 5th avenue, McKeesport, Pa.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. discontinued their retail business at 510 Smithfield street, and will devote all their time to the growing of cut flowers for the wholesale market.

Randolph & McClements have secured the contract for the decorations for the Thaw-Yarmouth nuptial, which takes place here Monday, April 27. The decorations will be very expensive and elaborate.

Parks.

Superintendent Falconer will quit the parks. Director E. M. Bigelow regretfully announces that he had given up hope of retaining the services of William Falconer as superintendent of the parks. Mr. Falconer refused to consider any proposition that would continue him in a place where he would be subject to political interference. Mr. Falconer is now arranging to leave the employ of the city the last of this month, and go to the Allegheny Cemetery Co., as superintendent of that place. As to his successor, no one so far has been appointed. Director Bigelow says the position will not go to a politician, as he desires a competent and practical gardener of recognized ability.

Last Saturday afternoon the park employees, 100 in number, presented Superintendent Falconer with a magnificent massive loving cup of solid silver.

Over in Allegheny, Superintendent William Hamilton was reappointed as superintendent. Mr. Hamilton has had charge of the parks since 1879. He is one of the best-known horticulturists in Pennsylvania, and when he was appointed superintendent of parks, the grounds were not much else than big green fields. To-day they are counted among the best kept parks in the country.

A. L. Vaudrey, a traveling florist, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid in a room at the Boston house, this city, Wednesday afternoon, April 15. He left a letter written in French, stating that he was unable to work on account of sickness. Also a letter asking that John Cooper, justice of the peace of Warrenville, N. J., be notified. Among his effects was a bank book on the First National Bank of Johnstown, Pa., showing a credit of $225. Vaudrey was last employed at the Crystal Farm, Bakerstown, Pa.

Wm. Edlefsen, of Milwaukee, Wis., was a visitor last week.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply is increasing and on Monday the receipts were so large that prices eased some little in the process of moving the stock. Since then they have steadied some and on the whole the market is in good condition for the season. Carnations still hold the best position, anything good commanding $3 and first class flowers bringing $4. Of course poor grades reach $2 and fancy stock commands $5, with good Prosperity at $6 to $8. By the way, one grower of Prosperity says that even at $8 it is not as profitable as others at $4.

In roses such as Brides and Maids a very few specials reach $8, but $6 is practically the top, though some extra fine Gates have brought $10. Peter Reinberg is still cutting fine Chatenay and the best sell at $10 and $12. But there is a weakness in all the lower grades and the rose market is not nearly so strong as the carnation situation. There is a great plenty of lilies and prices range from $4 to $10, the lower prices being obtained for the poor and short stemmed ones, of which there are many in the market. Some extra fine Kaiserins are now to be had and these bring $10.

Various Items.

There was a great display of flowers at the first meeting of the new city council Monday evening and the extra demand was of great assistance to the market.

Some of the bowlers paid a visit to the St. Louis boys last Saturday and Sunday and had a very pleasant time. The party included P. J. Hauswirth, E. F. Winterson, Leonard Kill, Fritz Bahr, Chas. Balluff, Geo. Asmus and Geo. Stollery. They were victorious in the bowling games. The scores appear in our St. Louis notes in this issue.

J. A. Budlong is cutting some extra fine Lawson and Flora Hill, and is very much pleased with Mrs. Leopold Ine as a red. It is not large but the color and stem are excellent.

The Florists' Club had its annual smoker Wednesday evening and the fumigation was complete. All present enjoyed themselves.

Mr. Wietor says the promised crop of Kaiserin and La France has arrived in great shape.

E. H. Hunt says considerable interest is being taken in Thripsoide and that thrips ought to be well under control the coming season.

At Sinner Bros.' Beauties were in full crop for Easter and all their other roses were in fine shape. The new house built in January is filled with young roses which are very promising.

The bowlers have accepted an invitation to play the Chicago Carnation Co.'s bowling team a series of games at Joliet next Saturday evening. A warm contest is looked for.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Easter is past and everyone is satisfied with the business he did. There was enough of everything in plants and flowers excepting violets. Could have sold many more violets if it had been possible to get them. Carnations sold for 75 cents and $1; roses, $1.50 to $2.50; Easter lilies and callas, $3; tulips and daffodils 50 cents per dozen. Violets sold for $1.50 and $2 per 100. Could have got $3 for them the latter part of Saturday afternoon and evening had they been obtainable. All the stores had fine window displays and were well stocked up. R. H. Woodhouse opened a store in the Merchants' Bank Building for Easter and made a fine display, having three large windows and a large, light store, where he could show everything he had. It certainly looked fine from the street. E. H. Chamberlain, Wm. P. Peirce and H. A. Jahn also had very pretty windows.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting in W. L. G. Brown's store Thursday evening, April 2. H. V. Soule resigned as treasurer, and W. L. G. Brown was elected to fill the vacancy. Easton Y. Peirce, E. H. Chamberlain and Geo. Borden were appointed finance committee; H. H. Cleary, W. L. G. Brown and E. M. Munson, membership committee. E. Y. Peirce brought up the matter of the club's having a charter, and it was voted to ask through the Florists' Review whether it would be necessary for the club to have a charter in order to do business. If the editor will answer this matter through the next paper it will be appreciated by all the members. Mr. Hathaway said he has had an invitation from the Providence Florists' Club for our club to attend its regular meeting. The discussion for the evening was about Easter lilies, and why the New Bedford growers do not grow enough so that the florists need not have to import what lilies they want every year. E. Y. Peirce, A. B. Hathaway and W. L. G. Brown did most of the talking for the growers' side of the question; E. H. Chamberlain, Wm. P. Peirce and J. H. Cleary for the store men. It was a very interesting discussion and brought out many different views on the matter, which made it very interesting for everybody present. Mr. Cleary and Mr. Brown were appointed a committee to get a permanent meeting place before the next meeting.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society had its regular meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Building Tuesday evening, April 4. It was voted to hold a flower show in the fall, and the following committee was selected to make plans and recommendations and report at the next meeting: Wm. S. Bunn, S. J. Donaghy, Wm. Smith, Geo. N. Borden and J. C. McNutt. There was a general discussion on the "Effective Bedding of Plants," from which the members obtained many valuable hints. C.

[It is not necessary to have a charter in order to do business, but incorporation would give the club a legal standing that it will not otherwise have. It would then be in a position to make binding contracts, to sue and be sued, etc.—Ed.]

TORONTO.

Trade since Easter has kept up fairly well, the only things of which there seems to be an over supply are roses and Easter lilies, but even this is not anything over-noticeable. Carnations have been decidedly scarce, and the deluge of the first few days did not help the supply any.

At the time of writing we are mourning the loss of our Lieutenant Governor, Sir Oliver Mowatt, who died Sunday morning, and as this is to be a public funeral there is a general rush of design work.
